AFFIDAVIT OF JACQUELINE HORVAT
(Sworn, September 1, 2023)

I, Jacqueline Horvat, of the City of Windsor, in the Province of Ontario, MAKE OATH AND SAY:

1. I am the Treasurer of the Law Society of Ontario (the “LSO”) and have held this position since June 28, 2022. As such, I have knowledge of the matters set out below. Where my knowledge is based on information and belief, I indicate the source of that information and I believe it to be true.
2. This affidavit is made in response to Mr. Murray Klippenstein’s motion for summary judgment for an order compelling the LSO to provide him with the 23 items that are listed in Schedule A of the Statement of Claim. These items relate to policies that the LSO developed to bring awareness to the challenges faced by racialized licensees in the legal profession, in Ontario.
3. This affidavit is divided into the following sections:
  - (a) The background of the LSO;

- (b) The governance structure of the LSO;
- (c) The history of the LSO's initiative on the challenges faced by racialized licensees;
- (d) The process that the LSO is developing to respond to requests for information from benchers; and
- (e) The recent legislative amendments to the Law Society Act with respect to the non-applicability of the Not-For-Profit Corporations Act and the Corporations Act.

A. BACKGROUND

4. The LSO is a corporation without share capital established under the Law Society Act, RSO 1990, c. L.8 ( the "Act"). It was originally established in 1797.

5. The LSO governs Ontario's lawyers and paralegals in the public interest by ensuring that the people of Ontario are served by lawyers and paralegals who meet high standards of learning, competence and professional conduct.

6. The LSO has a statutory duty to protect the public interest, to maintain and advance the cause of justice and the rule of law, to facilitate access to justice for the people of Ontario, and to act in a timely, open and efficient manner.

7. The LSO regulates, licenses, and disciplines over 57,000 lawyers and over 10,000 licensed paralegals pursuant to the Act and the LSO's regulations, by-laws, rules, policies, and guidelines.

B. GOVERNANCE

8. The Law Society Act sets out the LSO broad powers to self-govern and regulate the legal profession.

(i) Convocation

9. The LSO is overseen by a governing body known as "Convocation", which is defined in s. 1 of the Act as "a regular or special meeting of the benchers convened for the purpose of transacting business of the Society”. The individual members of Convocation are referred to as “benchers”. Section 10 of the Act provides that “benchers shall govern the affairs of the Society.”

10. Convocation is comprised of a total of 53 voting benchers: (i) eight “lay benchers”, who are neither lawyers nor paralegals and who are appointed by the Lieutenant Governor-in-Council; (ii) forty elected lawyer benchers who are elected by lawyer licensees; and (iii) five elected paralegal benchers who are elected by paralegal licensees. There are also a number of non-voting ex officio and honorary benchers, including former Treasurers.

11. The LSO’s Governance Practices and Policies (“Practices and Policies”) set out the specific responsibilities of Convocation and of the individual benchers that make up Convocation. The Practices and Policies were adopted by Convocation in 2019. (A copy of the Law Society’s Governance Practices and Policies (2019) is attached as Exhibit A.)

12. Paragraph 9 of the Practices and Policies states that “Convocation is to govern the affairs of the Society effectively and efficiently, guided by a Strategic Plan it adopts for each bencher term.”

13. Paragraph 10 of the Practices and Policies says that “Convocation is responsible for establishing policies for the governance of the legal professions in Ontario, including standards of learning, conduct and professional competence.”

14. Paragraph 11 of the Practices and Policies states that:

Convocation may establish and appoint the members of committees it requires to fulfill its governance role, but must not establish more committees than it needs for that purpose. All committees must have a mandate. Committees are to assist Convocation in setting policy on ongoing matters which further the core mandate and responsibilities of the Law Society.

15. Paragraph 12 of the Practices and Policies states that “[i]n addition to committees, Convocation may establish task forces it requires to fulfill its governance role for time-limited specific policy initiatives.”

16. The benchers are responsible for governing the affairs of the LSO. Paragraph 34 of the Practices and Policies states that “[b]enchers are to exercise their responsibilities as governors of the Law Society through stewardship, policy-making and adjudicative/regulatory functions”.

17. Paragraph 35 of the Practices and Policies states that benchers contribute to the LSO governance by, amongst other things, being appointed by Convocation as chairs and vice-chairs of committees and task forces, and as members of committees and task forces.

18. Further, paragraph 37 states that “[b]enchers must clearly distinguish between their governance role and the role of Law Society management, who are responsible under the leadership of the Chief Executive Officer for operational implementation of Convocation policy.”

19. Finally, Benchers acting in good faith do not face liability for any act done in the performance of their duties. Section 9 of the Act states:

No action or other proceedings for damages shall be instituted against the Treasurer or any bencher, official of the Society or person appointed in Convocation for any act done in good faith in the performance or intended performance of any duty or in the exercise or in the intended exercise of any power under this Act, a regulation, a bylaw or a rule of practice and procedure, or for any neglect or default in the performance or exercise in good faith of any such duty or power.

(ii) The Treasurer

20. Section 7 of the Act states that the Treasurer is the president and head of the LSO. In that capacity, the Treasurer is the chair of Convocation.

21. Paragraph 24 of the Practices and Policies states that the Treasurer “is responsible for the strategic leadership of the Law Society and overseeing the development for Convocation’s approval of the strategic priorities for the Law Society in consultation with benchers and senior management.”

22. Paragraph 26 of the Practices and Policies says that the Treasurer is responsible for coordinating the work and responsibility of committees and task forces to ensure that policy issues are assigned to appropriate committees.

(iii) The Chief Executive Officer

23. The staff and day-to-day operations of the LSO are overseen by its Chief Executive Officer (“CEO”), who is assisted by a senior management team.

24. Section 8(1) of the Act provides that “the Chief Executive Officer shall, under the direction of Convocation, manage the affairs and functions of the Society.” Paragraph 58 of the Practices and Policies states that:

In accordance with the Act and By-Law 2, under the direction of Convocation, the CEO is responsible for the day-to-day management and co-ordination of all aspects of the operation, administration, finance, organization, supervision and maintenance of all Law Society activities.

25. Section 62(1) of the Act provides that Convocation can make bylaws “prescribing the duties of the Chief Executive Officer...”. Convocation exercised this authority by enacting Bylaw 2 and provisions in Bylaw 2 that apply to the CEO. Specifically, s. 45(1) states that the “Chief Executive Officer shall be responsible for the management and coordination of all phases of the operation, administration, finances, organization, supervision and maintenance of all activities of the Society.” (A copy of Bylaw 2 is attached as Exhibit B.)

26. Paragraph 61 of the Practices and Policies states that “[t]he CEO reports to Convocation. Convocation instructs the CEO through the Treasurer.” Paragraph 62 states that “[t]he CEO is the public representative of the Law Society and the spokesperson for the Law Society for management and operations.”

27. The specific role of the CEO is outlined in paragraphs 63 to 66, which state that the CEO:

(a) Provides leadership to the LSO’s programs and operations and ensures their effective contribution to ensure that the programs and services offered by the LSO contribute to its mission and reflect the Strategic Plan, and ensures that Convocation has opportunities to consider the continuing relevance of the Strategic Plan;

(b) Manages the resources of the LSO by: developing and presenting annual budgets to the Audit and Finance Committee and ensures that actual revenues and expenses are in line with the budget approved by Convocation, and ensuring the provision of administrative and policy support for Convocation and all committees;

(c) Supports the work of Convocation and its committees and ensures effective implementation of policy decisions; and

(d) Develops and maintains positive external relationships to advance the organization's interests at home and abroad, by building and nurturing collaborative relationships with stakeholders, partners and others.

(iv) Standing Committees, Task Forces, and Working Groups

28. The sections of the Practices and Policies that sets out the role of Convocation and benchers with respect to committees flow from s. 62(1) of the Act, which provides that Convocation may enact bylaws to establish standing and other committees. On May 1, 2007, Convocation used this authority to enact Bylaw 3, which governs "Benchers, Convocation and Committees". (A copy of Bylaw 3 is attached as Exhibit C.)

29. The following standing committees were created by s. 103 of Bylaw 3:

1. Audit and Finance Committee.
2. Access to Justice Committee.
3. Equity and Indigenous Affairs Committee.
4. Professional Development and Competence Committee.
5. Professional Regulation Committee.
6. Strategic Planning and Advisory Committee.
7. Tribunal Committee.

30. Each standing committee consists of at least six people appointed by Convocation, five of which must be benchers.

31. The standing committees are responsible for examining issues within their mandates and bringing recommendations forward to Convocation.

32. This motion raises issues that are relevant to three of the LSO's standing committees: the Equity and Indigenous Affairs ("EIA") Committee; the Strategic Planning and Advisory Committee ("SPAC"); and the Audit and Finance Committee ("AFC").

33. The mandate of the Audit and Finance Committee includes:

- (a) to receive and review the interim and annual financial statements of the LSO;
- (b) to recommend to Convocation the approval of the annual financial statements of the LSO;
- (c) to review the integrity and effectiveness of the financial operations, systems of internal control, reporting mechanisms and internal risk management of the LSO;
- (d) to review with the public accountant and management of the LSO the annual audit plan and results of the annual audit, including the audit scope to recommend a public accountant for appointment by Convocation as required under section 49 of By-Law 2;
- (e) to review the annual budgets of the LSO and of Library Co., or any special or extraordinary budgets required for the purpose of the LSO, to provide advice to Convocation thereon and to recommend approval of the annual budgets or any special or extraordinary budget item;
- (f) to review proposals for any significant budget amendments arising during a financial year and to provide advice to Convocation thereon, including advice on the financial implications of the budget amendments;
- (g) to provide to Convocation policy guidance on the allocation of resources within the LSO in keeping with the priorities set by Convocation;
- (h) to develop for Convocation's approval policy options on financial matters, including the LSO's investment policy;
- (i) to ensure that the LSO's programs have clearly articulated objectives and identifiable performance standards to assist in assessing their efficiency and effectiveness;
- (j) to review periodically the LSO's programs, selected for review in consultation with the CEO, to determine compliance with program objectives and whether there is cost-effective use of funds;
- (k) to receive reports on the remuneration and expenses of the Treasurer and benchers;
- (l) to monitor compliance with policies adopted by Convocation, including any investment policy; and
- (m) to recommend to Convocation the execution of banking resolutions and other similar financial agreements.

34. The mandate of the EIA Committee is:

- (a) to develop for Convocation's approval, policy options for the promotion of equity and diversity having to do in any way with the practice of law in Ontario or provision of legal services in Ontario and for addressing all matters related to Indigenous peoples and French-speaking peoples; and

(b) to consult with Indigenous, Francophone and other equality-seeking communities in the developments of such policy options.

35. The mandate of the SPAC includes:

(a) developing for Convocation's approval, periodically reviewing and recommending changes to and reporting annually to Convocation on the status of Convocation's priorities for policy objectives;

(b) receiving from the CEO notification of significant legal proceedings in which the Society is involved that are managed out of the Office of General Counsel, providing required assistance and advice in the conduct of such legal proceedings and reporting to Convocation on such legal proceedings as necessary;

(c) developing and maintaining working relationships with the Governments of Ontario and Canada, including their elected officials and public service, on initiatives affecting the public interest that are within the LSO's jurisdiction;

(d) presenting the LSO's legislative agenda to the Governments of Ontario and Canada; and

(e) developing for Convocation's approval a long range and comprehensive public affairs mandate and strategy.

36. Pursuant to paragraph 49 of the Practices and Procedures, committees can establish working groups for discrete, time limited issues that will benefit from the focus of a smaller group of committee members. The Chair with the committee's agreement is to establish the membership of the working group and the timeline for its report to the committee. Paragraph 50 says that the provisions in the Practices and Policies that apply to committees, also apply with necessary modifications to the working groups of committees.

37. As noted, in addition to committees and working groups, Convocation can create task forces to fulfill its governance role for time-limited specific policy initiatives, pursuant to paragraph 12 of the Practices and Policies.

C. CHALLENGES FACED BY RACIALIZED LICENSEES

38. In 2007 and again in 2011, Convocation approved a Strategic Plan put forward by Convocation's Priority Planning Committee that was focused (amongst other things) on equity and diversity within the profession. (A copy of the Priority Planning Committee's Report to Convocation dated November 22, 2007, is attached as Exhibit D. A copy of the Priority Planning Committee's Report to Convocation dated December 9, 2011, is attached as Exhibit E.)

39. In August 2012, Convocation created the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group ("Working Group") to identify challenges faced by racialized licensees in different practice environments, and to identify factors and practice challenges faced by racialized licensees. The Working Group was specifically tasked with examining things that could increase the risk of regulatory complaints and discipline, and if appropriate, develop preventative, remedial, enforcement, regulatory, and/or support strategies to address the challenges, for consideration by the EIA Committee and other committees. (A copy of the Meeting Minutes of Convocation dated August 21, 2012, is attached as Exhibit F. A copy of the Report from the EIA Committee to Convocation, dated October 30, 2014, is attached as Exhibit G.)

40. The Working Group began engaging with community liaison and stakeholders to gather information about barriers faced by racialized licensees. (See Exhibit G.)

41. In early 2013, the Working Group retained the services of the firm Strategic Communications Inc. ("Stratcom") to manage the data gathering process of the Working Group. In March 2014, Stratcom provided a report detailing its findings ("Stratcom Report"). (A copy of the Stratcom Report is attached as Exhibit H.)

42. The Working Group's engagement process revealed a number of challenges faced by racialized licensees. Accordingly, the Working Group developed a report entitled "Developing Strategies for Change: Addressing Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees, Consultation Paper" ("Consultation Paper"). The Consultation Paper contained a series of questions for members of the profession, firms and organizations, to consider and comment upon. The Working Group's goal was to gather input on topics like enhancing cultural competence, addressing discrimination, and enhancing diversity within firms. (See Exhibit G.)

43. On October 30, 2014, the EIA Committee brought a motion to Convocation asking them to approve the Consultation Paper. The EIA Committee's report on the motion included information about budgetary considerations, stakeholder management, and methodology. It also included the draft Consultation Paper itself. The motion carried and the Consultation Paper was made available online. (A copy of the Minutes of Convocation, dated October 30, 2014, is attached as Exhibit I. See also Exhibit G.)

44. From January to March 2015, the Working Group sought input from the profession broadly speaking, including organizational stakeholders, law firms, legal clinics, members of the judiciary, the academy and the public, to identify practice initiatives and solutions to the challenges outlined in the Consultation Paper. The LSO also engaged in a public consultation process by holding public meetings. (A copy of the Working Group's Interim Report to Convocation, dated April 2015 is attached as Exhibit J.)

45. In 2016, the Working Group developed a final report with 13 recommendations for Convocation's consideration, entitled the "Working Together for Change: Strategies to Address Issues of Systemic Racism in the Legal Professions Report" (the "Challenges Report"). (A copy of the Challenges Report is attached as Exhibit K.)

46. On December 2, 2016, a motion was brought before Convocation to approve the 13 recommendations in the Challenges Report. The motion passed. (A copy of the Meeting Minutes of Convocation, dated December 2, 2016, is attached as Exhibit L.)

47. The work of implementing the recommendations in the Challenges Report started in January 2017. Convocation was updated periodically about the Working Group's progress. (See for example, the Report to Convocation from the EIA Committee, dated June 29, 2017, which is attached as Exhibit M.)

48. One of the recommendations in the Challenges Report was for the LSO to develop and publish an Inclusion Index every four years, that would reflect the following information, including, for each legal workplace of at least 25 licensees: the legal workplace's self-assessment information (Recommendation 3(3)), demographic data obtained from the Lawyer Annual Report and Paralegal Annual Report (Recommendation 4), and information gathered from the inclusion questions provided by the Law Society (Recommendation 5). (See Exhibit K.)

49. The LSO engaged the firm Diversio to develop the Inclusion Index for 2018-2019. Diversio delivered a draft of the Index in the fall of 2019. By the time Diversio delivered the draft Index, the Law Society staff who were originally involved in the development of the Index had left the organization. New staff engaged with Diversio to further develop the Index and understand the methodology underlying the results before planning its release. (A copy of the Memorandum to EIA Committee dated November 17, 2021, is attached as Exhibit N.)

50. Mr. Klippenstein was elected as a bencher in 2019. He, and other benchers, were appointed to the EIA Committee by Convocation. The first meeting of the new EIA Committee was on October 8, 2019. The status of the Challenges Report was discussed at that meeting, and the Committee members were provided with a copy of the Challenges Report. (A copy of the Agenda and Materials from the Meeting of the EIA Committee dated October 8, 2019, is attached as Exhibit O.)

51. It is apparent that Mr. Klippenstein took the time to familiarize himself with this report because on January 8, 2020, Mr. Klippenstein submitted a document to the EIA Committee entitled “A Critical Review of the Law Society’s Challenges Report: Representations to the Law Society EIA Committee and Benchers” (“Klippenstein Critical Review Document”). In this document, Mr. Klippenstein detailed all of his concerns about the Challenges Report and the Stratcom Report.

52. Mr. Klippenstein never officially presented the Klippenstein Critical Review Document to Convocation.

53. In March 2020, the work of the EIA Committee was interrupted by the COVID-19 pandemic. The EIA Committee resumed its regular work in late 2020. (See Exhibit L.)

54. On September 9, 2020, Mr. Klippenstein wrote an email to the EIA Committee Chair and members, detailing his concerns about the draft Inclusion Index prepared in 2019. On September 15, 2020, Mr. Klippenstein forwarded this email to all benchers. (A copy of Mr. Klippenstein’s email dated September 15, 2020, is attached as Exhibit P.)

55. On April 22, 2021, a motion was brought to Convocation to approve the audited annual financial statements of the LSO for the financial year that ended on December 31, 2020, including $156,000 from the Special Projects Fund to the General Fund to fund, amongst other things, the work related to the implementation of approved recommendations in the Challenges Report for the Working Group. The motion carried. (A copy of the Meeting Minutes of Convocation dated April 22, 2021, is attached as Exhibit Q.)

56. On November 22, 2021, Mr. Klippenstein wrote an email to the EIA Committee Chair and members, and all benchers, detailing concerns he had about the materials that had been circulated to EIA Committee members in advance of the Committee's November 25 meeting. Specifically, he raised concerns about a memorandum dated November 17, 2021, that explained that the LSO had retained independent experts to undertake a peer review of the draft Inclusion Index, and that he was making a request for: the names of the experts who had been retained, a copy of any requests for proposals delivered to the three experts, a copy of the contracts with the experts, and the amounts paid to the experts. (A copy of the email from Mr. Klippenstein dated November 22, 2021, is attached as Exhibit R.)

57. The November 17, 2021, memorandum did in fact include details about the experts that had been retained including their names, qualifications, and why they had been selected. The memorandum discussed issues with the Inclusion Index, and recommended that before the EIA Committee move forward with the information collected by Diversio for the Inclusion Index, it should consider various questions, including:

1. Were the demographic, inclusion and self-assessment questions in the lawyer and paralegal annual reports the right questions to meet the purpose?
2. Given the three-year period between the collection of the data and the current date, is it scientifically sound to release the data?
3. The data on which the Index is based is now three years old. Is the Inclusion Index based on that data relevant today?
4. In anticipation of the release of the Inclusion Index, some workplaces proactively adopted strategies to promote equity, diversity and inclusion within their workplaces. The progress of these workplaces is not reflected in the current Index. Would the release of the Index at this point support the Law Society's goal of reducing barriers faced by racialized and Indigenous licensees?
5. If the answer to any of the above questions is "no", would the Law Society's reputation be negatively impacted by the release of the Index?

(See Exhibit N.)

58. The memorandum indicated that the peer review panel was charged with answering various questions in relation to the Challenges Report, including whether the data collection process was valid; whether the response rates were sufficient; whether the questions posed as part of the membership survey were appropriate; and whether the process of using key informants was effective and reliable. (See Exhibit N.)

59. The peer review panel was also charged with answering various questions in relation to the Inclusion Index, including whether the scope of it was appropriate; whether the Inclusion Index as produced achieved the desired result; and whether the data underlying the Inclusion Index was still reliable. (See Exhibit N.)

60. The content of the November 17, 2021, memorandum, including the mandate of the peer review panel, was discussed at the November 25, 2021, EIA Committee meeting. Mr. Klippenstein was present. (A copy of the Agenda and Materials for the EIA Committee meeting dated November 25, 2021, is attached as Exhibit S.)

61. On November 29, 2021, Mr. Klippenstein wrote an email repeating the request he made in his email dated November 22, 2021. (A copy of the November 29, 2021, email of Mr. Klippenstein is attached as Exhibit T.)

62. Mr. Klippenstein's counsel, whom he retained in relation to this motion, wrote two further letters to the then-Treasurer, Teresa Donnelly, on April 26 and May 20, 2022, requesting 23 items. (A copy of two letters from Mr. Klippenstein's Counsel to the Former Treasurer attached as Exhibit U.)

63. The peer review panel conducted their review from December 2021 to April 2022. They were provided with various materials to support their evaluation of the Challenges Report, including the Challenges Report itself, the Consultation Paper, the Stratcom Report, and the Klippenstein Critical Review Document. (A copy of the Memorandum provided to the EIA Committee dated April 29, 2022, is attached as Exhibit V.)

64. On May 3, 2022, the peer review panel presented their findings to the EIA Committee. 161 pages of materials were provided to the EIA Committee. For various reasons which it explained, the peer review panel opined that the Inclusion Index would not further the LSO's equity goals and recommended that it should not be released in its current iteration. (A copy of the Agenda and Materials for the EIA Committee meeting dated May 3, 2022, is attached as Exhibit W.)

65. The findings of the peer review panel were discussed at the EIA Committee meeting on May 12, 2022. Mr. Klippenstein attended that meeting. (A copy of the Agenda and Materials for the EIA Committee meeting dated May 12, 2022, is attached as Exhibit X.)

66. Former Treasurer Donnelly responded to Mr. Klippenstein's counsel's letters on May 27, 2022, clarifying that prior to receiving Mr. Klippenstein's counsel's May 20, 2022, letter, she did not understand that he was continuing his request for information, given all the materials that had been provided at the EIA Committee meetings on May 3, 2022. Former Treasurer Donnelly indicated that under the current legislative framework governing the LSO, the Treasurer has no unilateral authority to decide on a request for information and that Convocation must be engaged in the decision. She further stated that information that is not confidential to the LSO can be requested from the CEO, but that if the work of responding to the request would exceed the normal duties of staff, the CEO ordinarily seeks directions from Convocation. Former Treasurer Donnelly indicated that she would pass on the request to SPAC and ask SPAC to consider the request and to bring it to Convocation. (A copy of the Former Treasurer's letter dated May 27, 2022, is attached Exhibit Y.)

67. On June 17, 2022, the EIA Committee had a meeting. At that meeting, the Committee was asked to approve a draft report to Convocation that set out recommendations to Convocation with respect to the Inclusion Index, namely, the recommendations that the Inclusion Index not be publicized due to the issues raised by the peer review panel, and that the recommendations in the Challenges Report regarding the Inclusion Index be amended to reflect a better approach. (A copy of the Agenda and Materials for the EIA Committee meeting dated June 17, 2022, is attached as Exhibit Z.)

68. The motion was brought before Convocation at its June 28, 2022, meeting. Specifically, Bencher Dianne Corbiere moved that Convocation approve the recommendations of the EIA

Committee not to publicize the Inclusion Index developed in 2019. The motion carried. Mr. Klippenstein abstained from voting. (A copy of the Meeting Minutes of Convocation, dated June 28, 2022, is attached as Exhibit AA.)

D. ACCESS TO INFORMATION

69. Benchers routinely receive or have access to committee and other materials in order to be able to fulfill their mandate, including but not limited to policy development reports, research, the results of surveys or consultation, detailed budgetary information, financial reports and related documents, updates on strategic initiatives, operational division or program reports and updates from stakeholders. There are select categories of confidential documents from specific committees that benchers do not have access to, such as documents from the Compensation Committee, the Proceedings Authorization Committee, and the Treasurer's Appointment Advisory Group.

70. Committee materials, and materials from working groups and task forces, can be accessed by benchers in the "current books" section on "Diligent Boards", which is the internal system that benchers use. Such documents remain available for up to five years. After five years, they are archived, and benchers can request access to the archives by making a specific request.

71. Benchers also have regular access to:

- (a) Convocation materials (reports for decision and information, both public and in camera) including reports from management, typically through the CEO (both in public and in camera);
- (b) Convocation minutes and transcripts (both public and in camera);
- (c) Additional supporting and educational resources posted in the bencher resource centre; and
- (d) Information about major policy or other initiatives through oral or written briefings including at scheduled bencher information sessions.

(i) The SPAC Advisory Group

72. Though benchers routinely have access to the above referenced information, I, along with SPAC members, became aware of a gap in the LSO's Practices and Policies with respect to the procedure for bringing and responding to requests by benchers for administrative information.

73. In my capacity as Chair of SPAC, I responded to this information gap by appointing a working group of SPAC committee members to develop a policy for responding to bencher requests for information that is not readily available through the Committee and Convocation process and discussions. This working group was appointed pursuant to paragraph 49 of the Practices and Policies (referenced above). (A copy of the draft policy is attached as Exhibit BB.) All benchers were advised of the appointment of this working group on September 2, 2022. (A copy of the email dated September 2, 2022 is attached as Exhibit CC.)

74. The members of this working group were Robert Adourian, Seymour Epstein, Andrew Spurgeon, Diana Miles, and Elliot Spears. Cathy Corsetti, who completed her bencher term in May 2023, also served on the Advisory Group.

75. The Advisory Group has prepared a policy that defines a process and provides direction to the Law Society for managing requests for information. The Advisory Group will be presenting the policy to SPAC on September 7, 2023, and recommending that SPAC put it to Convocation for approval.

76. In framing the policy, the Advisory Group considered:

- (a) The LSO's obligations with respect to providing information to benchers;
- (b) The scope of LSO information that benchers require to do their work and perform their functions;
- (c) The person(s) who should be responsible for dealing with requests and the exercise of discretion under the policy;
- (d) Resource implications related to applying the policy in fulfilling requests;
- (e) Circumstances where there is disagreement with how the policy is applied and a process to deal with that;
- (f) Positioning the policy once approved within the LSO's Practices and Policies.

77. The Advisory Group also referred to one example of a process to address information requests, from the municipal council context, found in the Toronto Municipal Code, Chapter 27, Council Procedures, Article 7 - § 27-7.11:

§ 27-7.11. Administrative inquiries and answers.

(1) A member who wants information about the affairs of the City must:

- (a) make an administrative inquiry in writing; and
- (b) deliver it to the Clerk at least seven business days before the Council meeting.

(2) The relevant City official answers the administrative inquiry in writing and delivers the answer to the Clerk at least one hour before the Council meeting.

(3) The Clerk distributes the answer to members before the start of the Council meeting or reads the answer to Council.

(4) Despite Subsection A(2), a City official may decide that the answer to an administrative inquiry requires work that exceeds the normal duties of their staff.

(5) If Subsection A(4) applies, the City official informs Council of that decision in a written letter to the Clerk at least one hour before the meeting and the Clerk distributes the letter to members before the Council meeting starts.

B. How Council responds to an administrative inquiry.

(1) If, in response to an administrative inquiry, a City official has told Council that the work of answering the inquiry exceeds normal duties, Council, without debate, may vote on whether the City official should answer the administrative inquiry.

(2) Council receives, or refers to the appropriate Council Committee, all administrative inquiries and answers, without debate.

78. The draft contemplates that the policy would be engaged where a bencher does not receive information, including operational information, requested through the committee or Convocation process, or through or outside of the committee process where information is unrelated to the mandate of a committee.

79. The following are the proposed components of a policy and process for dealing with requests for information:

- (a) Information that is requested by a bencher must be directly related to a bencher's appropriate duty as a governor of the Law Society and reasonably required to fulfill their oversight or policy making responsibilities and be used for such purposes.
- (b) The request for information is to be made on a form provided by the Law Society and submitted to the Treasurer's office. The request is to include particulars of the information and how the information aligns with the requirements of paragraph 1.
- (c) The Treasurer will consult with the CEO about the request and make a determination on the request.
- (d) If responding to the request would exceed the normal duties of employees assigned for this purpose, the Treasurer is to request from the CEO the scope of the work and associated costs reasonably necessary to fulfill the request and Convocation is to decide whether the request should be fulfilled.
- (e) If the Treasurer denies a request on the basis that it does not meet the requirements of paragraph 1, the bencher may refer the matter to Convocation (in camera) and Convocation is to decide whether the request should be fulfilled.
- (f) Information provided in response to a bencher's request for information will be provided to all benchers.
- (g) Information provided in response to a bencher's request for information remains confidential to the Law Society subject to Convocation's authority to make it public.

80. If adopted by Convocation, the policy will form part of the Practices and Policies.

E. LEGISLATIVE AMENDMENTS TO THE *LAW SOCIETY ACT

81. I am advised by Elliot Spears, General Counsel for the LSO, that in 2010, the LSO was made aware of significant legislative changes that the Ontario legislature was contemplating. Specifically, the LSO was advised of the Ontario legislature's Bill 65, An Act to revise the law in respect of not-for-profit corporations, which would enact the new Not-for-Profit Corporations

Act, 2010. This new Act would govern corporations without share capital, removing them from the governance of the Corporations Act. As a corporation without share capital, the LSO was one of the entities that would be removed from the governance of the Corporations Act and placed under the governance of the Not-for-Profit Corporations Act.

82. I am further advised that the LSO was asked to provide submissions on these changes. Former Chief Executive Officer Malcolm Heins made submissions to the legislature on August 23, 2010. He submitted that the new Not-for-Profit Corporations Act would fit poorly with the LSO's structure and regulatory mandate, and could in some instances, negatively affect the ability of the LSO to fulfill its public interest mandate. The LSO requested that it be exempt from the application of Not-for-Profit Corporations Act, and that s. 6 of the Law Society Act be amended to reflect this. He further noted that the LSO has the authority, pursuant to the Law Society Act, to make bylaws in the public interest with respect to many matters typically covered by legislation. (A copy of the written submission on Bill 65 dated August 23, 2010, is attached as Exhibit DD.)

83. The new Not-for-Profit Corporations Act came into force on October 19, 2021. The same day, s. 6 of the Law Society Act was amended to remove the LSO from the governance of the Corporations Act and to exempt the LSO from the applicability of the Not-for-Profit Corporations Act.

PART 1: GOVERNANCE FRAMEWORK OF THE LAW SOCIETY

Section 1: The Role of the Law Society

1. The Law Society of Ontario, established by the Law Society Act (“the Act”), regulates the practice of law and the provision of legal services in Ontario. According to the Act, a function of the Law Society is to ensure that:
  - a. all persons who practise law in Ontario or provide legal services in Ontario meet standards of learning, professional competence and professional conduct that are appropriate for the legal services they provide; and
  - b. the standards of learning, professional competence and professional conduct for the provision of a particular legal service in a particular area of law apply equally to persons who practise law in Ontario and persons who provide legal services in Ontario.
2. The Law Society is a corporation without share capital, governed by a decision-making body (Convocation) which is composed of elected, appointed and ex officio benchers. The Chair of Convocation is the Treasurer, who is the president and head of the Law Society. The Chief Executive Officer, under the direction of Convocation, manages the affairs and functions of the Society.
3. The Law Society is required to carry out its functions, duties and powers with regard to the following principles (from section 4.2 of the Act):
  - a. The Society has a duty to maintain and advance the cause of justice and the rule of law.
  - b. The Society has a duty to act so as to facilitate access to justice for the people of Ontario.
  - c. The Society has a duty to protect the public interest.
  - d. The Society has a duty to act in a timely, open and efficient manner.
  - e. Standards of learning, professional competence and professional conduct for licensees and restrictions on who may provide particular legal services should be proportionate to the significance of the regulatory objectives sought to be realized.

4. In keeping with the statutory principles above, Convocation is committed to governing the practice of law and the provision of legal services in a manner that will
  - a. achieve a reduction of barriers created by racism, unconscious bias and discrimination;
  - b. achieve better representation of Indigenous licensees, racialized licensees and licensees from all equality seeking groups in the legal professions; and
  - c. advance reconciliation, acknowledging a collective responsibility to support improved relationships between Indigenous and non-Indigenous peoples in Ontario and Canada.
5. The Law Society's authority to regulate is a delegated authority from the government of Ontario through the Act. In fulfilling its self-regulatory mandate, the Law Society regulates the practice of law and the provision of legal services, including those licensed to do so, in the public interest.

Section 2: Principles of Law Society Governance

6. These principles are the foundation for governance of the Law Society:
  - a. Convocation must govern in the public interest;
  - b. The structure for governance must enable varied perspectives, abilities and backgrounds to be represented at Convocation;
  - c. Decisions made by Convocation are to be the product of careful, thoughtful analysis and review;
  - d. Convocation is to make decisions that are free from conflict of interest, bias or improper influence;
  - e. Convocation is to apply best practices for its governance;
  - f. Convocation decision-making processes are to be consistent, transparent and informed by input from relevant committees, working groups and/or task forces as established by Convocation, and as required, through a process of engagement with stakeholders;

- g. Convocation will govern so as to maintain the confidence of the public and the professions;
- h. Convocation decision-making will be guided by a Strategic Plan developed with input from Convocation, management of the Law Society and those affected by the Plan, and that will be renewed on a regular basis;
- i. Convocation acknowledges that the appointment of lay benchers to Convocation by the Lieutenant Governor in Council on recommendation of the Attorney General for Ontario ensures that additional competencies and perspectives from the public are represented at Convocation.

Section 3: Responsibilities of Convocation

- 7. The benchers in Convocation are the board of directors of the Law Society and govern the affairs of the Law Society.
- 8. Convocation is responsible for ensuring that the Law Society's mandate is fulfilled and that the Law Society carries out its legal obligations.
- 9. Convocation is to govern the affairs of the Society effectively and efficiently, guided by a Strategic Plan it adopts for each bencher term.
- 10. Convocation is responsible for establishing policies for the governance of the legal professions in Ontario, including standards of learning, conduct and professional competence.
- 11. Convocation may establish and appoint the members of committees it requires to fulfill its governance role, but must not establish more committees than it needs for that purpose. All committees must have a mandate. Committees are to assist Convocation in setting policy on ongoing matters which further the core mandate and responsibilities of the Law Society.
- 12. In addition to committees, Convocation may establish task forces it requires to fulfill its governance role for time-limited specific policy initiatives.
- 13. Convocation is to ensure the integrity and effectiveness of the Law Society's adjudicative function through the Law Society Tribunal.

14. Convocation must be proactive while preserving the capacity to react appropriately to unforeseen challenges and issues.

PART 2: GOVERNANCE PROCESS AND DECISION-MAKING

Section 1: Convocation Process

15. Convocation, which is the meeting of benchers, is to exercise its responsibilities in accordance with the principles by which it is required to perform its functions, as set out in the Act.
16. Convocation is committed to transparency of its process, including a live webcast of the public portion of the meeting and the availability of a transcript and minutes of the public portion of the meeting.
17. Convocation is to be governed by the rules of procedure for Convocation as set out in Part V of By-Law 3.
18. The Treasurer is the president of the Law Society and is responsible for setting and managing the agenda for Convocation.
19. To the extent possible, the Treasurer is to utilize a consent agenda for matters required for decision by Convocation.
20. The Treasurer may impose such time limits for presentation of reports and discussion at Convocation as he or she sees fit, including time allotments for speakers, and benchers are required to observe them.
21. The Treasurer and benchers are to maintain the confidentiality of matters discussed at Convocation when Convocation meets in the absence of the public (in camera). Where Convocation determines that matters discussed in the absence of the public may be disclosed publicly, benchers may refer to them publicly.
22. Subject to the Treasurer's advice, reports to Convocation for information are to be taken as read and will not be presented.

Section 2: The Treasurer

23. As set out in the Act, the Treasurer is the president and the head of the Law Society.

24. The Treasurer is responsible for the strategic leadership of the Law Society and overseeing the development for Convocation's approval of the strategic priorities for the Law Society in consultation with benchers and senior management.
25. The Treasurer is responsible for chairing Convocation.
26. In consultation with committee chairs and Law Society management, the Treasurer is to coordinate the work and responsibility of committees and task forces to ensure policy issues are assigned to appropriate committees.
27. The Treasurer is the public representative of the Law Society and the spokesperson for the Law Society on matters of policy.
28. The Treasurer is to recommend to Convocation for appointment all individuals as members of committees, task forces and external boards or other organizations, and is to ensure that recommended appointees reflect an appropriate level of diversity on each committee, task force and in external appointments.
29. The Treasurer is responsible for receiving the report of the CEO on Law Society operations and as chair of the Compensation Committee, fulfilling the obligation of that Committee to evaluate the performance of the CEO on an annual basis. The Treasurer is to work with the CEO to ensure the alignment of operations with the Strategic Plan as approved by Convocation and oversee the annual performance plan for the CEO.
30. The Treasurer should have the following attributes and competencies:
  - a. strong facilitation skills;
  - b. demonstrated ability to encourage thoughtful decision-making, nurture collaborative relationships and foster confidence and trust;
  - c. the ability to chair meetings effectively, to ensure all points of view are heard and to lead discussion to a clear and timely conclusion;
  - d. strong communication skills;
  - e. excellent judgment;

- f. deep understanding of the major issues facing the regulation of the legal profession in Canada;
- g. ability to see both the short term and the longer term implications of any policy or operational issue;
- h. a commitment to openness, inclusion and transparency;
- i. understanding of the requirements of effective governance; and
- j. a willingness to commit the time required to the role during his or her term.

Section 3: Benchers

- 31. As directors, the benchers are responsible for governing the affairs of the Law Society.
- 32. In their capacity as directors of the Law Society and in exercising their powers and discharging their duties to the Law Society, benchers are required to
  - a. act honestly and in good faith with a view to the best interests of the Law Society, and
  - b. exercise the care, diligence and skill that a reasonably prudent person would exercise in comparable circumstances.
- 33. In all matters relating to their role as members of Convocation and its committees and task forces, benchers are to act solely in the public interest and to have regard to the principles mentioned in paragraph 3 above.
- 34. Benchers are to exercise their responsibilities as governors of the Law Society through stewardship, policy-making and adjudicative/regulatory functions:
  - a. In their stewardship role, benchers are to fulfill their responsibility through direction to the CEO that recognizes the CEO's responsibility to manage the affairs and functions of the Society and the responsibility of the benchers to govern the affairs of the Society;
  - b. As policy-makers, benchers are required to set standards, make rules and By-Laws and adopt policies to meet the objects described in the Act;
  - c. If and as members of the Law Society Tribunal, benchers are to exercise adjudicative functions pursuant to the Act, regulations under the Act, and in accordance with the Law Society's Tribunal Rules of Practice and Procedure,

- the Adjudicator Code of Conduct and other instruments governing the role of the adjudicator;
- d. If appointed to fulfill certain other statutory decision-making offices, for example, as members of the Proceedings Authorization Committee or as summary disposition benchers, benchers are required to exercise sound judgment and discretion.
35. Benchers may contribute to Law Society governance in numerous ways including as follows:
- a. Benchers are appointed by Convocation as chairs and vice-chairs of committees and task forces;
  - b. Benchers are appointed by Convocation as members of committees and task forces;
  - c. Benchers are appointed by Convocation as members of the Law Society Tribunal;
  - d. Benchers are appointed by Convocation to fulfil certain statutory functions and to serve on various external boards and organizations that include representatives of the Law Society.
36. Benchers are to hold themselves to the highest standards of integrity and trust in carrying out their responsibilities in the public interest, and must abide by the Bencher Code of Conduct.
37. Benchers must clearly distinguish between their governance role and the role of Law Society management, who are responsible under the leadership of the Chief Executive Officer for operational implementation of Convocation policy.
38. Benchers are to:
- a. be familiar with Law Society structure, mandate and governance policies and relevant legislation and jurisprudence;
  - b. attend orientation on taking office as a bencher;
  - c. attend continuing bencher development sessions as provided during their term of office; and

- d. ensure that they have sufficient time to commit to the role of benchers, including taking into account necessary travel time as required.

Section 4: Committee and Task Force Process

Committees and Task Forces

39. The following committees are established under the Act:
  - a. Compensation Fund Subcommittee
  - b. Paralegal Standing Committee
  - c. Proceedings Authorization Committee
40. The following standing committees of Convocation are established under By-Law 3, which includes their mandates:
  - a. Audit and Finance Committee
  - b. Access to Justice Committee
  - c. Equity and Indigenous Affairs Committee
  - d. Professional Development and Competence Committee
  - e. Professional Regulation Committee
  - f. Strategic Planning and Advisory Committee
  - g. Tribunal Committee
41. In addition to standing committees, other committees are established to support the work of Convocation, including the Compensation Committee.
42. Task forces will be established by Convocation from time to time for specific policy projects and other time limited tasks.

General

43. Committees and task forces are to adhere to their mandates as established by Convocation and may vary same only with the approval of Convocation.
44. Committees and task forces are to identify all reasonable policy options and implications to inform Convocation's decisions. Committees and task forces do not establish policy but assist Convocation in doing so.
45. All task forces must have clearly articulated terms of reference and a sunset clause.

46. Committees and task forces must not perform operational/administrative work.
47. In cases where their mandate affects the work or responsibilities of committees or other task forces, task forces should consult with those committees or task forces before submitting their final report to Convocation.
48. Committees and task forces meet in the absence of the public (in camera).
49. Committees may establish working groups for discrete, time limited issues that will benefit from the focus of a smaller group of committee members. The Chair with the committee's agreement is to establish the membership of the working group and the timeline for its report to the committee.
50. The provisions in this section of the Policy applicable to committees apply with necessary modifications to working groups of committees.

Role of the Chair

51. The Chair of a committee or task force is responsible for setting and managing the agenda for the meeting.
52. The Vice-Chair(s) of a committee or task force support the Chair and assume the role of the Chair in the Chair's absence.
53. The Chair is required to manage the work of the committee or task force within the scope of its mandate.
54. The Chair is to ensure that the matters on the agenda for a particular meeting are appropriate for the time available for the meeting and should strive to ensure that the time limitation established for the meeting is observed.
55. The Chair is to ensure that planning for the meeting's agenda takes into account the time needed by Law Society management to adequately and appropriately prepare materials for the meeting.
56. A plan and timetable for the work of their committee should be established on an annual basis in consultation with committee members, management and the Treasurer.

57. The Chair is responsible for ensuring that
  - a. materials for committee deliberations are appropriate for their purpose and include an appropriate level of detail to permit informed discussion;
  - b. reports to Convocation are provided at regular intervals;
  - c. matters for Convocation's decision include a motion that is clear in its meaning and purpose;
  - d. reports include an appropriate level of detail to permit informed decision-making; and
  - e. reports include, where appropriate, a range of options for each matter recommended for approval together with the implications thereof.

58. The results of committee and task force meetings reported to Convocation are public unless the committee or task force determines otherwise in accordance with Convocation's policy on confidentiality.

PART 3: CONVOCATION'S RELATIONSHIP WITH MANAGEMENT

Section 1: Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of the Law Society

59. In accordance with the Act and By-Law 2, under the direction of Convocation, the CEO is responsible for the day-to-day management and co-ordination of all aspects of the operation, administration, finance, organization, supervision and maintenance of all Law Society activities.

60. All authority and accountability of Law Society management to Convocation is through the authority and accountability of the CEO.

61. The CEO reports to Convocation. Convocation instructs the CEO through the Treasurer.

62. The CEO is the public representative of the Law Society and the spokesperson for the Law Society for management and operations.

Section 2: Role of the CEO

63. The CEO provides leadership to the Law Society's programs and operations and ensures their effective contribution to meeting the objectives set out in the Strategic Plan. In particular, the CEO:

- a. ensures that the programs and services offered by the Law Society contribute to its mission and reflect the Strategic Plan; and
  - b. ensures that Convocation has opportunities to consider the continuing relevance of the Strategic Plan in light of trends and other developments.
64. The CEO manages the resources of the Law Society. In particular, the CEO:
- a. Develops and presents the annual budget to the Audit and Finance Committee and ensures that actual revenues and expenses are in line with the budget approved by Convocation;
  - b. Ensures the provision of administrative and policy support for Convocation and all committees;
  - c. Determines overall staffing requirements of the Law Society and selects, appoints and oversees the performance of senior management. The CEO determines their remuneration, nurtures their development and ensures appropriate succession planning for senior positions;
  - d. Sets the tone of the Law Society, fostering a positive results-oriented organizational culture and promoting a philosophy of teamwork;
  - e. Establishes a healthy and safe work environment and a sound human resources management regime;
  - f. Implements a performance management process for all employees;
  - g. Ensures that all employees are appropriately trained to carry out the responsibilities of their positions;
  - h. Terminates the employment of individuals when necessary using appropriate and legally defensible procedures;
  - i. Ensures the soundness of accounting practices and financial systems; and
  - j. Ensures that the Law Society complies with all legal obligations and legislation covering taxation and related financial matters.
65. The CEO supports the work of Convocation and its committees and ensures effective implementation of policy decisions. In particular, the CEO:

- a. Collaborates with the Treasurer in the development of agendas for meetings of Convocation;
  - b. Works closely with Convocation in the periodic review of the Law Society's vision for the future and in the development and periodic updating of the Strategic Plan;
  - c. Ensures the development and timely distribution of materials for Convocation decision-making, including policy proposals on important issues;
  - d. Provides regular financial reports on operations, revenues, expenditures and cash position of the Law Society;
  - e. Ensures that an orientation program is provided for new members of Convocation and that ongoing bench development through continuing education about their roles is provided; and
  - f. Identifies and evaluates risks to the organization (people, property, finances, reputation and image) and implements measures to mitigate risks.
66. The CEO develops and maintains positive external relationships to advance the organization's interests at home and abroad. In particular, the CEO:
- a. Builds a broad base of understanding for the work of the organization amongst the profession, government officials, key stakeholders, the media and the public;
  - b. Builds and nurtures collaborative relationships with stakeholders, partners and others; and
  - c. Takes part in events as appropriate to promote the reputation of the Law Society and improve awareness of its mission and programs.

Section 3: CEO Performance Expectations and Review

67. As directed by Convocation, and in accordance with an annual performance plan agreed to between Convocation, through the Treasurer, and the CEO, the CEO is expected to achieve specified results as articulated in the Strategic Plan, monitor progress on results and report regularly on operational implementation of the Strategic Plan.

68. The Compensation Committee, in consultation with Convocation, is to carry out a CEO performance review based on the performance plan on an annual basis, and such review will include a self-assessment by the CEO.
69. The results of the performance review are to be reported to the CEO and Convocation for discussion in the absence of the public.

PART 4: STRATEGIC PLANNING CYCLE

70. The Law Society is to engage in a strategic planning exercise following the election of benchers and approve a Strategic Plan by the end of the election year.
71. The Strategic Plan is to assist Convocation in determining the initiatives and projects to be undertaken in the bencher term and in identifying the policy agenda for the work of standing or other committees, task forces and working groups.

Section 1: Role of the Strategic Planning and Advisory Committee

72. The Strategic Planning and Advisory Committee is responsible for management of the strategic planning exercise which includes a strategic planning meeting of benchers following each bencher election to prepare for Convocation's consideration and approval a Strategic Plan for the bencher term.
73. Through the Strategic Planning and Advisory Committee, Convocation approves its priorities and is to receive periodic reports on the progress on the priorities.
74. Two years into the bencher term, the benchers are to reconvene in a meeting to review the Strategic Plan. This will include an assessment of its progress and determination of any changes or adjustments that are required to the Plan as a result of developments or events that may reasonably affect the integrity of the Plan for the remaining two years of the bencher term.
75. The Treasurer is to provide oversight in the management of the Strategic Plan and may consult with the CEO to obtain information from operations for this purpose.

Section 2: Role of the CEO and Management

76. The CEO, together with the Law Society's Senior Management Team, is responsible for informing benchers on the operational (including financial) implications of the strategic planning during its formation and two years into the bencher term.
77. The CEO will monitor the progress of the implementation of the Strategic Plan and report regularly to the Treasurer and Convocation on its progress.

PART 5: BENCHER ORIENTATION AND PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Section 1: Orientation Program

78. Immediately following each bencher election, all benchers are required to attend an orientation program which will include, but is not limited to, information about:
- a. the Law Society's governance and organization structure
  - b. The roles and responsibilities of benchers
  - c. The roles and responsibilities of management
  - d. The Law Society budget
  - e. Convocation, committees and task forces
  - f. The Law Society Tribunal
  - g. Bencher professional development
  - h. Strategic planning
  - i. The Law Society's commitment to equality, diversity and inclusion
  - j. The Law Society's commitment to Indigenous cultural competence.

Section 2: Bencher Professional Development Program

79. Benchers are required to attend various professional development sessions throughout the bencher year that are designed to orient, educate and equip benchers for their governance responsibilities.
80. Bencher attendance is monitored and is to be reported to the Treasurer, who will take appropriate steps to ensure bencher attendance at the sessions.

PART 6: CONVOCATION AND BENCHER EVALUATION

81. Convocation is committed to periodically reviewing and considering its effectiveness in carrying out its responsibilities.

82. As part of this commitment to ongoing assessment and improvement, benchers are to complete an annual evaluation in a form provided by the Law Society on the effectiveness of Convocation, the results of which will be compiled and reported to Convocation in the aggregate, without attribution.
83. The Treasurer will determine the action, if any, to be taken in response to the annual evaluation respecting the effectiveness of Convocation in carrying out its responsibilities.
84. Benchers are committed to self-reflection on board process and effectiveness.
85. As part of this commitment, each bencher is required to complete an annual self-reflection survey in a form provided the Law Society on their effectiveness as a bencher, the results of which will be provided to the Treasurer for review and, as required, discussion between the Treasurer and the bencher.

PART 7: COMPLIANCE

Section 1: Agreement

86. The Treasurer and benchers agree to comply with the Governance Practices and Policies, which incorporates the Bencher Code of Conduct at Appendix A, and commit to exercising diligence in fulfilling their roles and duties and meeting the standards for governance in the Governance Practices and Policies.
87. The Treasurer and each bencher are required complete the Declaration of Adherence in the form provided in Appendix B to the Governance Practices and Policies upon election or appointment as a bencher.
88. Benchers are encouraged to seek to address matters of compliance with the Governance Practices and Policies among themselves, where appropriate, as respectful and timely dialogue is encouraged as a way to deal with these matters. Benchers may also seek the assistance of the Treasurer or an appropriate neutral bencher colleague to discuss and deal with an issue.

PART 1 INTRODUCTION

I Purpose and Application

1. The Law Society of Ontario Benchers Code of Conduct (the “Code”) sets out the ethical responsibilities of the Law Society’s benchers. As a regulator of the conduct of professionals, the Law Society recognizes a corresponding obligation on the part of the benchers to conduct themselves with the highest degree of ethical behaviour and integrity.
2. Benchers conduct should support the fulfillment of the Law Society’s mandate and maintain public confidence in the Law Society. Benchers adherence to the Code helps to foster a culture of honesty, integrity and accountability at the Law Society.
3. The Code applies to all Law Society benchers, including the Treasurer. The Code applies to the following areas of benchers responsibility: as members of Convocation, committees, task forces, working groups and related boards. Benchers who are Law Society Tribunal members are also subject to the Adjudicator Code of Conduct.

II Definitions

4. In the Code,

Benchers means elected, appointed, ex officio, emeritus benchers and includes ex officio and emeritus Treasurers;

Ethics Lead means the Treasurer of the Law Society;

Harassment means engaging in a course of vexatious comment or conduct that is known or ought reasonably to be known to be unwelcome;

Law Society means the Law Society of Ontario;

Treasurer means the currently elected Treasurer/President of the Law Society;

Tribunal means the Hearing Panel and the Appeal Panel of the Law Society Tribunal;

Sexual Harassment means an incident or series of incidents involving unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favours, or other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature

- a. when such conduct might reasonably be expected to cause insecurity, discomfort, offence, or humiliation to the recipient(s) of the conduct;
- b. when submission to such conduct is made implicitly or explicitly a condition for a professional services;
- c. when submission to or rejection of such conduct is used as a basis for any employment decision (including, but not limited to, allocation of files, matters of promotion, raise in salary, job security, and benefits affecting the employee); or
- d. when such conduct has the purpose or the effect of interfering with a person's work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment.

Management means an individual or individuals employed by the Law Society of Ontario;

CEO means the Chief Executive Officer of the Law Society of Ontario, appointed by Convocation.

III Principles

5. As stewards and governors of the Law Society, benchers are held to high standards of ethical conduct. In carrying out their responsibilities, benchers are to observe the following principles:
  - a. Benchers must not act for personal or third-party gain;
  - b. Benchers commit to carrying out their duties with diligence and in good faith;
  - c. Benchers must adhere to the spirit and letter of the laws of Canada, Ontario and the policies and procedures of the Law Society, including the Code;
  - d. Benchers must arrange their professional and personal affairs in a manner that will bear close public scrutiny to prevent conflicts of interest from arising;
  - e. Benchers must act and be seen to act in accordance with the values and principles within the Code;
  - f. Benchers are to seek advice, as appropriate, on their responsibilities for adherence to the Code.

PART 2                   BENCHER CONDUCT

I           Professionalism

6. Benchers are to carry out all bencher-related duties in the public interest, must act professionally and ethically and are to hold themselves to the highest standards of integrity and trust in carrying out their responsibilities.
7. Benchers should cultivate flexibility, open-mindedness and an understanding that with good faith and integrity, benchers can come to different conclusions on the Law Society matters that they deal with.
8. Benchers are to conduct themselves in a way that contributes to a respectful, inclusive and safe work environment that is free from violence, discrimination and harassment. Interactions with management, fellow benchers and the public are to be courteous and respectful.
9. Benchers must not engage in conduct that constitutes discrimination, harassment or sexual harassment towards bencher colleagues, management or any other person connected with a bencher's duties.
10. As holders of a public office, benchers should be aware that that their conduct outside of their bencher duties may have a negative impact on the reputation of the Law Society. As such, benchers must not engage in harmful or criminal conduct in their other activities.
11. Benchers must clearly distinguish between their governance role and the role of Law Society management, who are responsible under the leadership of the Chief Executive Officer for operational implementation of Convocation policy.
12. Benchers are to:
  - a. prepare appropriately for and regularly attend Convocation, meetings of committees, task forces and working groups of which they are members;
  - b. attend meetings of external bodies to which they are assigned or appointed;
and
  - c. observe the rules of procedures for Convocation found in By-Law 3.

II Confidentiality

13. Committee and task force meetings are held in the absence of the public and are confidential. Some portions of Convocation are also held in the absence of the public and are confidential. Benchers are required to maintain the confidentiality of materials for and the deliberations of meetings or portions of meetings that are held in the absence of the public and to not comment publicly on matters that have been considered in the absence of the public.
14. With respect to committees and task forces, this obligation applies to the extent that such materials or deliberations are not included in the committee's or task force's public report to Convocation. Further, the chair of a committee or task force when presenting a public report to Convocation or a bencher who attended the committee or task force meeting who speaks to the report at Convocation may provide required context or clarification about the committee's or task force's work or process that occurred during a meeting that results in the report. Benchers should be mindful of their obligations respecting confidentiality if they comment publicly about a particular issue that is before a committee or task force.
15. Benchers are often provided with confidential documents or information, electronically or in other formats. Benchers must not share, copy (other than for personal use), transmit or disclose any materials or information that they receive in their capacity as a bencher that is confidential, sensitive or proprietary to the Law Society.
16. Where formerly confidential information is released to the public by Convocation, benchers may refer to this information subsequent to any such release by Convocation.
17. Benchers must not use confidential information for personal gain or any improper purpose.
18. Benchers must not seek out confidential information from management that is not required for their bencher work.

III Whistleblowing

19. Benchers should encourage disclosure of wrongdoing at the Law Society to ensure that the Law Society abides by its Business Conduct Policy.

IV Avoiding Improper Use of Influence

20. Benchers must not use their positions in an improper way to further their private interests or those of associates, friends or relatives. Benchers must not use, or attempt to use, their authority or influence for the purpose of intimidating, threatening, coercing, commanding or influencing management with the intent of interfering with management's duties or another person's interests, including the duty to disclose improper activity.
21. Benchers must refrain from influencing or interfering in the award of external contracts or offers of employment at the Law Society to their partners, firms, associates or family members. It is the role and responsibility of Law Society management to follow fair, transparent and defensible processes for the award of Law Society contracts and the recruitment of employees.

V Public Statements

22. The spokesperson for the Law Society is the Treasurer for policy issues and the CEO for operational issues, or their designates. Where benchers are not so designated, they should make it clear in any public statement that they are not speaking for the Law Society but in their own capacity.

VI Relationship with Management

23. Under the direction of the CEO of the Law Society, who is accountable to Convocation, management supports the operations of the Law Society. In their relationship with members of Law Society management, benchers must be respectful of management's role and their professional responsibilities.
24. No bencher shall attempt to induce a member of the Law Society management to engage in partisan political activities or subject such member to threats or discrimination for refusing to engage in such activities.

VII Use of Law Society Resources

25. Benchers must not use, or permit the use of, Law Society facilities, equipment, supplies, services, management or other resources for activities other than the business of the Law Society. Nor must any bencher obtain personal financial gain from the use or sale of Law Society-developed intellectual property (for example, inventions, creative writings and drawings), computer programs, technical innovations, or other items capable of being patented, since all such property remains exclusively that of the Law Society.

VIII Political Activity

26. Benchers must observe a boundary between their role as governors and political activity. Benchers must not use property of the Law Society (including materials, management's time, technology, proprietary material and confidential information) for political or partisan purposes including when running for office as an elected bencher.

IX Benchers in the Law Society's Regulatory Process

27. Benchers who are licensees who are the subject of a conduct, capacity or competence application before the Law Society Tribunal shall withdraw from all activities giving rise to a conflict of interest as a bencher as a result of the application until those proceedings are formally concluded, including any appeals.
28. A bencher who is a licensee whose license is suspended following a finding of professional misconduct or conduct unbecoming is not permitted to act as a bencher as of the date of the order suspending the license or as of the date of the final appeal order with respect to the suspension and for the duration of the suspension.
29. A bencher who is a licensee whose license is suspended as a result of an interlocutory suspension order is not permitted to act as a bencher as of the date of the order and for the duration of the suspension.
30. A bencher who is a licensee whose license is suspended as a result of a summary order under sections 46 to 49 inclusive of the Law Society Act is not permitted to act as a bencher as of the date of the order. If the bencher fails within three months of the date the suspension begins to take the action that will end the suspension, he or she is not permitted to act as a bencher for the duration of the suspension.

PART 3                      CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

I            Introduction

31. As directors, benchers can be expected to have conflicts between their roles and other interests from time to time. Managing conflicts fairly, effectively and transparently serves the public interest. Avoiding conflicts of interest contributes to confidence by the public and the profession that both policy and adjudicative decision-making is being made free from external or improper interest, favour or bias.

II          Benchers Serving on Committees and in Convocation

32. Benchers are to identify material conflicts between their personal and/or professional responsibilities or interests and matters for deliberation in committee and/or in Convocation. In considering whether there is a conflict, benchers should ask themselves whether or not a well-informed, reasonable member of the public would conclude that their decision-making could be influenced by duties owed to others or to personal interests. In doing so, the focus should be on actions, not on motives. Conflicts of interest should be considered not just from the bencher's own perspective but also from the perspective of licensees, stakeholders and the public whose confidence in the Law Society must be maintained.
33. Benchers should not participate in discussion of or decision on a matter where the bencher or the bencher's firm acts for a client whose interests will be significantly affected by Convocation's decision, or where the bencher or the bencher's firm is, through the professional relationship with the client, in possession of confidential information related to the issue under consideration which may tend to influence the bencher's decision on the matter.
34. Where a bencher is an employee, the bencher should not participate in the discussion of or decision on a matter where the bencher's employer has a significant interest, which is distinct from the interests of the professions at large, in a matter before Convocation, or where the bencher, because of the employment relationship, is in possession of confidential information pertaining to the issue under consideration which may tend to influence the bencher's decision on the matter.

35. Upon recognizing a conflict, the bencher is to declare the conflict and remove themselves from the consideration or discussion of the matter related to the conflict.
36. A bencher who is a member of the Professional Regulation Committee or the Proceedings Authorization Committee shall not also be a member of the Tribunal Committee.
37. Benchers are encouraged to discuss potential conflicts with the Ethics Lead or with experienced and neutral colleagues whenever there is a question in the mind of the bencher as to whether they ought to withdraw from a discussion, a vote, or both.

III Benchers and Regulatory Functions

38. Benchers must not:
  - a. act for licensees before the Law Society Tribunal;
  - b. act for the Law Society or a licensee as counsel in the matter of a Law Society complaint, audit or investigation;
  - c. provide written or oral evidence as a character witness in support of a party before the Law Society Tribunal unless the party demonstrates that the inability to put such evidence before the Panel would unfairly prejudice the party, in accordance with s. 63 of the Adjudicator Code of Conduct;
  - d. provide written or oral expert evidence for a party before the Law Society Tribunal unless the party demonstrates that the inability to put such evidence before the Panel would unfairly prejudice the party; or
  - e. act as a supervisor or mentor of a licensee who is in the Law Society's regulatory process.
39. It is not a breach of the Code for members of a bencher firm to act for a licensee with respect to a Law Society complaint, audit or investigation or to appear as counsel before the Law Society Tribunal, provided there is no actual conflict of interest.

40. It is not a breach of the Code for members of a bencher firm to represent the Law Society on a matter or before the Law Society Tribunal provided there is no actual conflict of interest and they are chosen through a process for the selection of outside counsel that includes appropriate and specific selection criteria.
41. Benchers who are members of the Proceedings Authorization Committee shall recuse themselves from consideration of a matter before the Committee in circumstances where their decision-making on a matter before the Committee could be influenced by duties owed to others or to personal interests.
42. A bencher or a bencher firm may act for the Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company ("LawPRO") on a matter provided there is no conflict of interest and they are chosen through an independent process for the selection of outside counsel.

IV Outside Activities

43. Benchers are to arrange their outside affairs, external appointments and other responsibilities to provide sufficient time to carry out their Law Society duties and attend meetings as required under By-Law 3.
44. Where a particular outside activity places a bencher in a conflict between his or her duties as a bencher and that outside activity on an ongoing basis, the bencher should consider resigning as a bencher or withdrawing from the outside activity to resolve the conflict.

V Acceptance of Gifts and Benefits

45. Benchers may not accept gifts, benefits or hospitality connected to their work as benchers with the exception of the following:
  - a. attendance at meetings, dinners, receptions or continuing professional development sessions hosted by legal organizations, associations or other Law Societies, where the bencher is attending as part of his or her role as a bencher, as an invited speaker, or to represent the Treasurer; and
  - b. nominal gifts which are received as an incident of protocol.

VI Post-Term Responsibilities

46. Upon a person ceasing to be a bencher or becoming an emeritus Treasurer or an emeritus bencher who has no engagement with the Law Society, for a period of one year, the person is not permitted to engage in any of the following:
- a. Appearing as counsel for a licensee before the Law Society Tribunal;
  - b. Acting as counsel for a licensee in Law Society regulatory matters;
  - c. Appearing as a character witness or an expert witness before the Law Society Tribunal as described in paragraph 36; and
  - d. Acting as a supervisor or a mentor for a licensee who is in the regulatory process.

PART 4 COMPLIANCE

47. The Treasurer is the Ethics Lead for Convocation and may be consulted for advice by benchers concerning compliance with the Code.
48. It is the responsibility of each bencher to hold herself or himself accountable for complying with the Code.
49. Benchers also have a responsibility to hold each other accountable for complying with the Code.

I Referral of Issue

50. A person who has information suggesting that a bencher has not complied or is not complying with the Code may refer the information in writing to the Treasurer.
51. The Treasurer shall notify the bencher who is the subject of the issue disclosed in the information (“the subject bencher”) and provide them with the information.
52. The subject bencher shall be given an opportunity to provide a written response to the issue to the Treasurer.

II Role of the Treasurer

53. Upon receipt of the response from the subject bencher or if no response is provided, the Treasurer shall determine the appropriate action and may:
- a. Conclude his or her review of the issue and
    - i. take no action;

- ii. caution the subject bencher about the issue;
  - iii. require an apology from the subject bencher to those affected by conduct related to the issue;
  - iv. require an undertaking from the subject bencher with respect to conduct related to the issue;
  - v. advise the subject bencher on any other steps to be taken to remedy or resolve the issue; or
- b. Where he or she reasonably believes that it is in the interests of fairness and the integrity of the Law Society's governance process to do so, refer the issue to an independent third party investigator for review and investigation with appropriate terms of engagement for the investigation.

III Treasurer's Report to Convocation

54. Where the Treasurer concludes his or her review with any of the steps set out in paragraph 53 a. ii. through v., he or she shall report the matter to Convocation.
55. The Treasurer's report to Convocation shall form part of the public record of Convocation.

IV Investigator's Report

56. Where the Treasurer refers the issue to an investigator, the investigator shall provide a written report to the Treasurer upon completing the investigation.
57. Based on the investigator's report, the Treasurer may:
- a. Conclude the review of the issue and provide a report to Convocation as described in paragraph 54; or
  - b. Determine that the issue should be referred to Convocation for the purpose of determining compliance with the Code.

V Referral for Determination and Role of Convocation

58. The Treasurer may refer an issue to Convocation for a determination of whether the Code has not been complied with.
59. The referral shall be in writing and the issue shall be considered and determined by at least a quorum of Convocation in the absence of the public.

60. The Law Society's rules of practice and procedure apply, with necessary modifications, to the consideration of the issue by Convocation. Where the rules of practice and procedure are silent with respect to a matter of procedure, the Statutory Powers Procedure Act applies to the consideration of the issue by Convocation.
61. After considering the issue, Convocation shall determine whether or not the Code has been complied with and shall provide written reasons for its decision.
62. Following the preparation of its decision and reasons, Convocation shall provide the decision and reasons to the subject bencher.
63. Where Convocation determines that the Code has not been complied with by the subject bencher, Convocation may
  - a. reprimand the subject bencher, or
  - b. suspend for a period of time certain rights and privileges of the subject bencher.
64. The decision of Convocation under this part is final.
65. Convocation shall report publicly on the issue once it has been concluded pursuant to paragraph 63.

APPENDIX B: Declaration of Adherence

LAW SOCIETY OF ONTARIO BENCHER DECLARATION OF ADHERENCE

I acknowledge that as a member of Convocation:

1. I am aware of my obligations as a bencher of the Law Society of Ontario under the Law Society Act and agree to abide by the Act, the By-laws, the rules of conduct (if a licensee) and the policies applicable to members of Convocation.

23. (1) Subject to subsection (2), a motion and an amendment to a motion may be debated by the members present at the meeting.

Debate prohibited

(2) The following motions shall not be debated:

1. A motion to adjourn a debate.
2. A motion to proceed to the next business.
3. A motion to table.

Time limits

24. (0.1) The Treasurer may set time limits for a debate or any part thereof and for any speech to a matter.

Procedures for debate

(0.2) At a meeting in which members participate by electronic means, the Treasurer may establish procedures for debate if such procedures are not settled by this Part or by the most recent edition of Bourinot's Rules of Order.

Order of speaking

(1) In a debate, members are entitled to speak to a motion or an amendment to a motion in the following order:

1. The member who proposed the motion or amendment.
2. The member who seconded the motion or amendment.
3. Any other member present at the meeting when recognized by the Treasurer.

Reserving right to speak

(2) The member who seconds a motion or an amendment to a motion may reserve the right to speak until a later time in the debate.

Limits on speaking

25. (1) Subject to subsection (2), a member is entitled to speak to a motion or an amendment to a motion only once.

Exception

- (2) A member may speak to a motion or an amendment a second time if,
- (a) all members present at the meeting have exercised, or declined to exercise, their right to speak to the motion or amendment; and
  - (b) the member does not repeat anything already said by any other member.

RULING OF TREASURER

Treasurer may make rulings

26. The Treasurer may make rulings as to the conduct of the meeting and, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the Treasurer may rule upon the propriety, acceptability, form and substance of any motion or amendment to a motion proposed at a meeting.

Appeal of ruling of Treasurer

27. (1) Subject to subsection (2), a ruling of the Treasurer may be appealed by any member present at the meeting.

Appeal prohibited

(2) No member is entitled to appeal a ruling of the Treasurer that a matter may not be made the subject of debate or motion by the meeting because,

- (a) it is a matter in respect of which a hearing may be conducted under the Act, regulations, by-laws or rules of practice and procedure; or
- (b) it is a matter that is pending before an adjudicative body for determination.

Time for making appeal

28. Where a member wishes to appeal a ruling of the Treasurer, the appeal shall be made immediately after the ruling.

Debate permitted

29. (1) Subject to subsection (2), an appeal of a ruling of the Treasurer may be debated by the members present at the meeting.

Debate prohibited

(2) An appeal of a ruling of the Treasurer relating to inappropriate language or behaviour shall not be debated.

Application of ss. 24 and 25

30. Sections 24 and 25 apply, with necessary modifications, to a debate of an appeal of a ruling of the Treasurer.

Treasurer's reasons for ruling

31. (1) After an appeal of a ruling of the Treasurer has been made, and before commencement of debate of the appeal, if permitted, the Treasurer is entitled to give the reasons, including any authority, for the ruling.

Same

(2) After debate of an appeal of a ruling of the Treasurer concludes, the Treasurer is entitled,

- (a) to answer any points raised during the debate; and
- (b) to give, or to repeat, the reasons, including any authority, for the ruling.

Disposition by vote

32. (1) An appeal of a ruling of the Treasurer shall be disposed of by a vote on the question: "Should the ruling of the Treasurer be upheld?"

Call for vote on appeal where debate on appeal prohibited

(2) Where debate on an appeal of a ruling of the Treasurer is prohibited, the Treasurer shall call for a vote on the appeal after exercising, or declining to exercise, the rights given to the Treasurer in subsection 31 (1).

Call for vote on appeal where debate on appeal permitted

(3) Where debate on an appeal of a ruling of the Treasurer is permitted, the Treasurer shall call for a vote on the appeal after debate has concluded and the Treasurer has exercised, or declined to exercise, the rights given to the Treasurer in subsection 31 (2).

VOTING

No appeal from call for vote

33. No member is entitled to appeal a call by the Treasurer for a vote on a motion, an amendment to a motion or an appeal of a ruling.

Order of voting on motions and amendments to motions

34. (1) All amendments to a motion shall be put to a vote before the motion is put to a vote.

Order of voting on amendments to motions

(2) Amendments to a motion shall be put to a vote in the following order:

1. The second amendment proposed.
2. The first amendment proposed.

Entitlement to vote

35. Every member present at a meeting, whose licence is not suspended, is entitled to one vote on each question put to the meeting.

Treasurer may not vote

36. Subject to section 40, the Treasurer shall not vote on any motion, amendment to a motion or appeal of a ruling.

Proxy voting prohibited

37. Votes may not be cast by proxy.

Manner of voting

38. Voting shall be by a show of hands or, for members participating in the meeting through electronic means, by electronic means.

39. [Revoked.]

Resolution of question

40. (1) Subject to subsection (3), each question put to the meeting shall be determined by the majority of the votes cast.

Treasurer may exercise casting vote

(2) In the case of a tied vote, except on a vote of an appeal of a ruling of the Treasurer, the Treasurer shall have a casting vote.

Resolution of question: appeal of ruling of Treasurer

(3) A ruling of the Treasurer shall be upheld on appeal when,

- (a) the majority of votes cast are in favour of upholding the ruling of the Treasurer; or
- (b) the vote on the appeal results in a tie.

Entry in minutes

41. Whenever voting has been by or includes a show of hands, an entry in the minutes of the meeting to the effect that the Treasurer declared a motion carried, an amendment to a motion approved or a ruling upheld after accounting for the show of hands is conclusive evidence of the fact without proof of the number or proportion of the votes made by show of hands recorded in favour of or against the motion, amendment or ruling.

Communication of resolutions to Convocation

42. (1) All motions carried at a meeting of members shall be,

(a) communicated to Convocation at its first regular meeting after the meeting of members; and

(b) considered by Convocation within six months of the meeting of members.

Convocation not bound by resolutions of meeting

(2) A motion carried at a meeting of members is not binding on Convocation.

BENCHERS, CONVOCATION AND COMMITTEES

PART I

BENCHERS

ELECTION OF BENCHERS LICENSED TO PRACTISE LAW

GENERAL

Definitions

1. In this Part,

“bencher” means a bencher licensed to practise law in Ontario as a barrister and solicitor;

“Elections Officer” means the person who is assigned by the Chief Executive Officer the responsibility of administering and enforcing the provisions of this Part and Part I.1;

“election of benchers” means an election of benchers licensed to practise law in Ontario as barristers and solicitors;

“elector” means a person who is entitled under this Part to vote in an election of benchers;

“holiday” means,

- (a) any Saturday or Sunday;
- (b) Good Friday;
- (c) Easter Monday; and
- (d) Victoria Day;

“licensee” means a person licensed to practise law in Ontario as a barrister and solicitor.

Interpretation: reference to a day

2. (1) In this Part, a reference to a day or time shall be a reference to a day or time in an election year.

Same: commencement, etc. of event

(2) In this Part, except where a contrary intention appears, if the day on which an event is to take place, commence or end falls on a holiday, the event shall take place, commence or end on the next day that is not a holiday.

Same: residing in electoral region

(3) For the purposes of this Part, an elector resides in an electoral region if his or her business address, or, where an elector does not have a business address, home address, as indicated on the records of the Society on the second Wednesday in April, is within the electoral region.

ELECTION DAY

Election day

3. There shall be an election of benchers in 2007 and in every fourth year thereafter on the last day in April that is not a holiday.

ELECTIONS OFFICERS

Treasurer to preside over election

4. (1) Subject to subsection (4), an election of benchers shall be presided over by the Treasurer.

Interpretation

(1.1) In this section, “non-candidate licensee” means a person licensed to practise law in Ontario as a barrister and solicitor who is not a candidate in an election of benchers under this Part or a person licensed to provide legal services in Ontario who is not a candidate in an election of benchers under Part I.1.

Appointment of assistant

(2) The Treasurer may appoint a non-candidate licensee to assist the Treasurer in exercising the powers and performing the duties of the Treasurer under this Part.

Appointment of licensee to act in absence of Treasurer

(3) The Treasurer shall appoint a non-candidate licensee to exercise the powers and perform the duties of the Treasurer under this Part whenever the Treasurer is unable to act.

Where Treasurer is candidate in election

(4) If the Treasurer is a candidate in an election of benchers, Convocation shall, as soon as practicable after the Treasurer’s nomination as a candidate is accepted, appoint a non-candidate licensee to preside over the election and to exercise the powers and perform the duties of the Treasurer under this Part.

Elections Officer to conduct election

5. (1) An election of benchers shall be conducted by the Elections Officer.

Elections Officer to establish procedures, etc.

(2) The Elections Officer shall,

(a) by December 31 of the year immediately preceding an election year,

(i) establish all procedures, requirements and specifications required to be established with respect to the nomination of candidates for the election, and

(ii) establish the procedures by which electors may vote; and

(b) by January 31 of an election year, publish all procedures, requirements and specifications established in respect of the election.

ELECTORAL REGIONS

Electoral regions

6. (1) The following electoral regions are established:

1. The Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region, composed of the City of Toronto.
2. The Province of Ontario “B” Electoral Region, composed of the area in Ontario outside the City of Toronto.

Same

(2) Within the Province of Ontario “B” Electoral Region, the following additional electoral regions are established:

1. The Northwest Electoral Region, composed of the territorial districts of Kenora, Rainy River and Thunder Bay.
2. The Northeast Electoral Region, composed of the territorial districts of Algoma, Cochrane, Manitoulin, Nipissing, Parry Sound, Sudbury and Timiskaming.
3. The East Electoral Region, composed of,
  - i. the counties of Frontenac, Hastings, Lanark, Lennox and Addington, Prince Edward and Renfrew,
  - ii. the united counties of Leeds and Grenville, Prescott and Russell and Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, and
  - iii. the City of Ottawa.
4. The Central East Electoral Region, composed of,

- i. the District Municipality of Muskoka,
- ii. the counties of Haliburton, Northumberland, Peterborough and Simcoe,
- iii. the regional municipalities of Durham and York, and
- iv. the City of Kawartha Lakes.

5. The Central West Electoral Region, composed of,

- i. the counties of Bruce, Dufferin, Grey and Wellington, and
- ii. the regional municipalities of Halton and Peel.

6. The Central South Electoral Region, composed of,

- i. the counties of Brant, Haldimand and Norfolk,
- ii. the regional municipalities of Niagara and Waterloo, and
- iii. the City of Hamilton.

7. The Southwest Electoral Region, composed of,

- i. the counties of Elgin, Essex, Huron, Lambton, Middlesex, Oxford and Perth, and
- ii. the Municipality of Chatham-Kent.

Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region

(3) Twenty benchers shall be elected for the Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region as follows:

1. One bencher shall be elected on the basis of the votes cast by electors residing in the electoral region.
2. Nineteen benchers shall be elected on the basis of the votes cast by all electors.

Province of Ontario “B” Electoral Region

(4) Twenty benchers shall be elected for the Province of Ontario “B” Electoral Region as follows:

1. One bencher shall be elected for each electoral region described in paragraphs 1 to 7 of subsection (2) on the basis of the votes cast by electors residing in the electoral region.
2. Thirteen benchers shall be elected on the basis of the votes cast by all electors.

CANDIDATES

Who may be candidate

7. (1) Every licensee may be a candidate in an election of benchers if,

(a) on June 1 of the year of the election, the licensee would not have held the office of elected bencher for 12 or more years;

(a.1) the licensee is nominated as a candidate in accordance with section 8;

(b) at the time of signing a nomination form containing the licensee's nomination as a candidate,

(i) the licensee's business address, or, where the licensee has no business address, home address, as indicated on the records of the Society, is within Ontario, and

(ii) the licensee's licence is not suspended; and

(c) prior to the close of nominations, the licensee, if they have not previously been an elected bencher, has completed the Society's candidate orientation and education course in the format specified by the Elections Officer.

Deemed to have held office for the specified number of years

(2) For the purpose of subsection (1), a licensee shall be deemed to have held the office of elected bencher for the number of years specified in the subsection if,

(a) the licensee was elected as a bencher in or at any time after the election of benchers immediately preceding the election of benchers for which he or she seeks to qualify as a candidate;

(b) the licensee would have held the office of elected bencher for the number of years specified in the subsection if the licensee had remained in office until the benchers elected in the next election of benchers took office; and

(c) the licensee resigned from the office of elected bencher prior to the benchers in the next election of benchers taking office.

Application of subsection (2)

(3) Subsection (2) applies to a licensee even if the licensee resigned from the office of elected bencher before the subsection came into effect.

Nomination and consent

8. (1) Every candidate in an election of benchers must,

(a) be nominated by at least five licensees whose licences are not suspended at the time of signing the nomination form; and

(b) consent to the nomination.

Nomination form

(2) The nomination of a person as a candidate in an election of benchers and the person's consent to the nomination shall be contained in a nomination form provided by the Society.

Signatures

(3) The nomination form must be signed by the person being nominated as a candidate and the five licensees who are nominating the person as a candidate.

Due date

(4) The nomination form must be submitted to the Society by means that meet the specifications established by the Elections Officer before the close of nominations at 5 p.m. on the last Friday in February.

Examination of nomination forms

9. (1) After a nomination form has been submitted, the Elections Officer shall cause the form to be examined and,

(a) if the requirements specified in sections 7 and 8 have been complied with, the nomination shall be accepted; or

(b) if the requirements specified in sections 7 and 8 have not been complied with, the nomination shall be rejected.

Results of examination of nomination form

(2) The Elections Officer shall communicate the results of the examination of a nomination form to the candidate whose nomination is contained therein.

Nomination form: optional accompanying material

10. (1) A person being nominated as a candidate in an election of benchers may submit the following materials along with the nomination form:

1. A photograph of the candidate that meets all specifications established by the Elections Officer.
2. A statement that is of not more than 120 words, including headings, titles and other similar parts of the statement, containing biographical information about the candidate and that meets all other specifications established by the Elections Officer.
3. An election statement that is of not more than 350 words, including headings, titles and other similar parts of the statement, and that meets all other specifications established by the Elections Officer.

Statement containing biographical information: required content

(1.1) If a candidate opts to submit the statement containing biographical information mentioned in paragraph 2 of subsection (1), the candidate shall include in the statement an email address that voters may use to communicate with the candidate.

Deadline for receipt of accompanying material

(2) Subject to subclause 20 (3) (b) (iii), the material referred to in subsection (1) must be received in the office of the Elections Officer at Osgoode Hall before the time for the close of nominations mentioned in subsection 8 (4).

Withdrawal of candidates

11. A candidate may withdraw from an election of benchers by giving the Elections Officer written notice of his or her withdrawal within seven days after the time for the close of nominations mentioned in subsection 8 (4).

ELIGIBILITY FOR ELECTION

Who may not be elected

12. (1) No candidate shall be elected as bencher if, at the time of his or her election,
  - (a) the candidate is no longer licensed to practise law in Ontario as a barrister and solicitor or the candidate's licence is suspended;
  - (b) the candidate is not eighteen or more years of age;
  - (c) the candidate is an undischarged bankrupt; or
  - (d) the candidate does not consent to the candidate's election.

Who may be elected for electoral region

(2) A candidate is eligible to be elected as benchers for an electoral region if, at the time of his or her election, the candidate's business address, or, where the candidate has no business address, home address, as indicated on the records of the Society, is within the electoral region.

ACCLAMATION

Election by acclamation

13. If after the acceptance of all valid nominations, the number of candidates eligible to be elected as benchers for an electoral region is the same as or fewer than the number of benchers to be elected for that electoral region, the Elections Officer shall declare the candidates to have been elected as benchers for that electoral region.

POLL

Poll

14. If after the acceptance of all valid nominations, the number of candidates eligible to be elected as benchers for an electoral region is greater than the number of benchers to be elected for that electoral region, a poll shall be conducted to elect the required number of benchers for that electoral region.

Anonymity of elector and secrecy of votes

15. The procedures for conducting a poll shall be such that the anonymity of an elector and secrecy of the elector's votes are preserved.

QUALIFICATION OF ELECTORS

Qualification of electors

16. A licensee whose licence is not suspended on the second Wednesday in April is entitled to vote in an election of benchers.

Eligibility to elect benchers for electoral regions

17. (1) An elector is eligible to elect the benchers for the Province of Ontario "A" Electoral Region who is to be elected on the basis of the votes cast by electors residing in the electoral region if the elector resides in the electoral region.

Same

(2) An elector is eligible to elect a benchner for an electoral region mentioned in paragraphs 1 to 7 of subsection 6 (2) if the elector resides in the electoral region.

LIST OF ELECTORS

Electors list

18. On or shortly after the third Wednesday in April, the Elections Officer shall prepare a list of all persons entitled to vote in an election of benchers.

ELECTION MATERIALS

Election materials: preparation

19. (1) For the purposes of and prior to conducting the poll mentioned in section 14, the Elections Officer shall,

(a) prepare an election ballot, showing the names of all candidates who may be eligible to be elected as benchner for each electoral region; and

(b) publish in electronic medium information about the candidates in the election of benchers, including the names of all candidates and, if available, the photograph, biography and, subject to subsection (3), election statement of each candidate.

Same

(2) In causing the election ballot to be prepared, the Elections Officer shall ensure that it is prepared in a manner that preserves the anonymity of the voters and the secrecy of their votes.

No publication of certain election statements unless approved

(3) The Elections Officer shall not publish any election statement that in the Election Officer's opinion may be libelous or may be in breach of the Rules of Professional Conduct unless the election statement has been approved by a committee of benchers in accordance with section 20.

Appointment of committee to approve election statements

20. (1) If necessary, the Treasurer shall appoint two or more lay benchers to approve election statements.

Referral of election statements

(2) The Elections Officer shall refer to the lay benchers appointed under subsection (1) all election statements that in the Election Officer's opinion may be libelous or may be in breach of the Rules of Professional Conduct.

Same

(3) The lay benchers appointed under subsection (1) shall consider all election statements that are referred to them and, in respect of each election statement, shall,

(a) approve the election statement; or

(b) if they are of the opinion that the election statement may be libelous or may be in breach of the Rules of Professional Conduct,

(i) return the election statement to the candidate who submitted it,

(ii) provide the candidate a written explanation of the objections to the election statement, and

(iii) specify the time by which the candidate may submit to the committee a redrafted election statement.

Consideration of redrafted election statements

(4) The lay benchers appointed under subsection (1) shall consider all redrafted election statements that are submitted to them in accordance with subsection (3), and, in respect of each redrafted election statement, shall,

(a) approve the redrafted election statement; or

(b) if they are of the opinion that the redrafted election statement may be libelous or may be in breach of the Rules of Professional Conduct,

(i) return the redrafted election statement to the candidate who submitted it,

(ii) provide the candidate a written explanation of the objections to the redrafted election statement, and

(iii) advise the candidate that no election statement shall be published under the candidate's name.

Decision final

(5) A decision made under subsection (4) is final.

Election materials: publication

21. As soon as practicable after the Elections Officer has prepared the electors list and the election materials required under section 19, the Elections Officer shall,

(a) cause to be published in the Ontario Reports and on the Society's website a notice with respect to the election of benchers that includes details on when and how an elector may access available information about the candidates in the election of benchers and when and how an elector may vote in the election of benchers; and

(b) email the notice mentioned in clause (a) to every elector, at the elector's business email address or, where the elector has no business email address, home email address, as indicated on the records of the Society.

VOTING

Voting for candidates

22. An elector may vote for,

(a) not more than 20 candidates who may be eligible to be elected as bencher for the Province of Ontario "A" Electoral Region; and

(b) not more than 20 candidates who may be eligible to be elected as bencher for the Province of Ontario "B" Electoral Region.

Voting procedures

23. Electors shall cast their votes in accordance with the procedures established by the Elections Officer.

COUNTING THE VOTES

Elections Officer to cause counting of votes

24. Beginning immediately after the deadline for casting votes on election day, the Elections Officer shall cause the votes for each candidate to be counted in accordance with sections 25 to 29.

Valid votes

25. (1) Subject to subsections (2) and (3), only votes cast by electors for candidates eligible to be elected as bencher shall be counted.

Disqualified votes

(2) If an elector votes for more than 20 candidates who were shown on the election ballot to have been eligible to be elected as benchers for the Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region, none of the elector’s votes for those candidates shall be counted.

Same

(3) If an elector votes for more than 20 candidates who were shown on the election ballot to have been eligible to be elected as benchers for the Province of Ontario “B” Electoral Region, none of the elector’s votes for those candidates shall be counted.

Same number of votes

26. (1) For the purposes of the count of votes under section 27, the declaration of results under subparagraph i of paragraph 1 of subsection 29 (2) and the declaration of results under paragraph 2 of subsection 29 (2), if two or more candidates have the same number of votes and that number is the largest, the Elections Officer shall, in the presence of the Treasurer, randomly select one candidate to be the candidate who has the largest number of votes.

Same

(2) For the purposes of the count of votes under section 28, the declaration of results under subparagraph ii of paragraph 1 of subsection 29 (2) and the declaration of results under paragraph 3 of subsection (2), if two or more candidates have the same number of votes, but the number of benchers remaining to be elected is fewer than the number of candidates having the same number of votes, the Elections Officer shall, in the presence of the Treasurer, randomly select the necessary number of candidates to be elected as benchers.

Counting votes: benchers elected on basis of votes cast by electors residing in electoral region

27. (1) For the Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region, the votes cast by electors residing in the electoral region for each candidate eligible to be elected as benchers from the electoral region shall be counted.

Same

(2) For each electoral region described in paragraphs 1 to 7 of subsection 6 (2), the votes cast by electors residing in the electoral region for each candidate eligible to be elected as benchers for the electoral region shall be counted.

Removal of candidate from pool of candidates

(3) For the Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region, the candidate eligible to be elected as bencher for the electoral region who has the largest number of votes from electors residing in the electoral region, as determined by the count of votes under subsection (1), shall be removed from the pool of candidates eligible to be elected as bencher for the purposes of the count of votes under subsection 28 (1).

Same

(4) For each electoral region described in paragraphs 1 to 7 of subsection 6 (2), the candidate eligible to be elected as bencher for the electoral region who has the largest number of votes from electors residing in the electoral region, as determined by the count of votes under subsection (2), shall be removed from the pool of candidates eligible to be elected as bencher for the purposes of the count of votes under subsection 28 (2).

Counting votes: Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region

28. (1) For the Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region, the votes cast by all electors for each candidate eligible to be elected as bencher for the electoral region shall be counted.

Same: Province of Ontario “B” Electoral Region

(2) For the Province of Ontario “B” Electoral Region, the votes cast by all electors for each candidate eligible to be elected as bencher for the electoral region shall be counted.

Report of result to Convocation

29. (1) Immediately after the count of votes under sections 27 and 28 has been completed, the Elections Officer shall report the results to Convocation.

Declaration of results

(2) Immediately after reporting the results to Convocation, the Elections Officer shall declare the following candidates to have been elected as benchers:

1. For the Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region,
  - i. the candidate eligible to be elected as bencher for the electoral region who has the largest number of votes from electors residing in the electoral region, as determined by the count of votes under subsection 27 (1), and
  - ii. the nineteen candidates eligible to be elected as bencher for the electoral region who have the largest number of votes from all electors, as determined by the count of votes under subsection 28 (1).

2. For each electoral region described in paragraphs 1 to 7 of subsection 6 (2), the candidate eligible to be elected as benchner for the electoral region who has the largest number of votes from electors residing in the electoral region, as determined by the count of votes under subsection 27 (2).

3. For the Province of Ontario “B” Electoral Region, the thirteen candidates eligible to be elected as benchner for the electoral region who have the largest number of votes from all electors, as determined by the count of votes under subsection 28 (2).

Publication of Results

(3) The Elections Officer shall publish the election results on the Society’s website, and those results shall include the names of the candidates and the number of votes cast for each candidate.

Taking office

30. (1) The benchners who are elected in an election of benchners shall take office on the later of the following dates:

1. The day on which Convocation has its regular meeting in May.
2. The day on which Convocation has its first regular meeting of Convocation following the declaration of results under section 29.

Term of office

(2) Subject to any by-law that provides for the removal of benchners from office, the benchners who take office under subsection (1) shall remain in office until their successors take office.

Failure to elect

31. (1) If in an election of benchners no candidate is elected as benchner for the Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region on the basis of the votes cast by electors residing in the electoral region, Convocation shall, at its regular meeting in May or at its first regular meeting following the declaration of results under section 29, whichever takes place later, elect as a benchner for the electoral region,

(a) if there are candidates whose business addresses, or, where candidates have no business address, home addresses, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, are within the electoral region, one of the candidates who was not elected as bencher; or

(b) if no candidate is available for election under clause (a), a licensee whose business address, or, where a licensee does not have a business address, home address, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, is within the electoral region.

Same

(2) If in an election of benchers no candidate is elected as bencher for an electoral region described in paragraphs 1 to 7 of subsection 6 (2) on the basis of the votes cast by electors residing in the electoral region, Convocation shall, at its regular meeting in May or at its first regular meeting following the declaration of results under section 29, whichever takes place later, elect as a bencher for the electoral region,

(a) if there are candidates whose business addresses, or, where candidates have no business address, home addresses, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, are within the electoral region, one of the candidates who was not elected as bencher; or

(b) if no candidate is available for election under clause (a), a licensee whose business address, or, where a licensee does not have a business address, home address, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, is within the electoral region.

Same

(3) If in an election of benchers fewer than the required number of benchers are elected for the Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region or the Province of Ontario “B” Electoral Region on the basis of the votes cast by all electors, Convocation shall, at its regular meeting in May or at its first regular meeting following the declaration of results under section 29, whichever takes place later, elect as benchers for the electoral region,

(a) if there are candidates whose business addresses, or, where candidates have no business address, home addresses, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation are within the electoral region, the required number of candidates who were not elected as bencher;

(b) if there are no candidates available for election under clause (a), or if all candidates have already been elected under clause (a), the required number of licensees whose business addresses, or, where licensees have no business address, home addresses, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, is within the electoral region.

Who may not be elected

32. No person shall be elected as benchers under section 31 if the person does not meet the requirements under section 12.

Taking office and term of office

33. The benchers who are elected under section 31 shall take office immediately after their election and, subject to any by-law that provides for the removal of benchers from office, shall remain in office until their successors take office.

Right to petition

34. Any elector may petition Convocation against the election of a benchers under section 29.

Time for making petition

35. No petition shall be made after fifteen days after the declaration of results under section 29.

Filing a petition

36. (1) A petitioner shall, within fifteen days after the declaration of results under section 29, file in the office of the Elections Officer at Osgoode Hall a written petition setting out the grounds upon which the election of a benchers is disputed

Service of petition

(2) A petitioner shall serve on the benchers whose election the petitioner disputes a copy of the written petition filed in the office of the Elections Officer at Osgoode Hall.

Time for service

(3) Service under subsection (2) shall be effected not later than the twentieth day after the declaration of results under section 29.

Benchers' status during consideration of petition

37. A benchers whose election is disputed shall continue in office until Convocation determines that he or she was not eligible to be elected as benchers or was not duly elected.

Appointment of committee to consider petition

38. (1) Where a petition is filed under subsection 36 (1), Convocation shall appoint a committee of two or more benchers to consider the petition.

Procedure

(2) Subject to subsection (3), the procedure applicable to the consideration of a petition by a committee of benchers shall be determined by the committee and, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the committee may determine who may make submissions to it, when and in what manner.

Right to make submissions

(3) A petitioner and the bencher whose election the petitioner disputes are entitled to make submissions about the petition to the committee of benchers appointed to consider the petition.

Notice of appointment of committee, etc.

(4) The Elections Officer shall give notice to a petitioner and the bencher whose election the petitioner disputes of the appointment of a committee of benchers to consider the petition and of the procedure applicable to the consideration of the petition, including the manner in which the petitioner and the bencher will be permitted to make submissions to the committee.

Report to Convocation

39. (1) A committee of benchers appointed to consider a petition shall report to Convocation on its consideration of the petition.

Decision of Convocation

(2) Convocation shall consider the report of a committee of benchers on a petition and shall decide whether a bencher whose election is disputed was eligible to be elected as bencher and was duly elected.

Notice of decision

(3) Convocation shall give notice of its decision on a petition, including the reasons for the decision, to the petitioner and the bencher whose election the petitioner disputed.

Payment of expenses

40. (1) When Convocation decides that a bencher whose election is disputed was eligible to be elected as bencher and was duly elected, Convocation may require the petitioner who disputed the bencher's election to pay to the bencher all or part of the expenses incurred by the bencher in responding to the petition.

Same

(2) When Convocation decides that a bencher whose election is disputed was not eligible to be elected as bencher or was not duly elected, Convocation may require the bencher to pay to the petitioner who disputed the bencher's election all or part of the expenses incurred by the petitioner in making the petition.

RETENTION OF ELECTION RESULTS

How long to be retained

41. The Elections Officer shall retain the results from an election of benchers until the next election of benchers.

VACANCIES DURING TERM OF OFFICE

Interpretation: "candidate"

42. (1) For the purposes of this section, "candidate" includes a candidate elected as bencher.

Vacancy in electoral region: election on basis of votes cast by electors residing in electoral region

(2) If a bencher who was elected for an electoral region on the basis of the votes cast by electors residing in the electoral region resigns, is removed from office or for any reason is unable to continue in office, Convocation shall, as soon as practicable, elect as bencher for the electoral region a candidate in the most recent election of benchers,

(a) whose business address, or where a candidate has no business address, home address, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, is within the electoral region; and

(b) who, among all similar candidates, had the largest number of votes from electors residing in the electoral region.

No candidate available for election under ss. (2)

(3) If no candidate is available for election under subsection (2), Convocation shall elect a licensee whose business address, or, where a licensee has no business address, whose home address, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day the election by Convocation, is within the electoral region.

Vacancy in electoral region: election on basis of votes cast by all electors

43. (1) If a bencher, who was elected for the Province of Ontario “A” Electoral Region or the Province of Ontario “B” Electoral Region on the basis of the votes cast by all electors, resigns, is removed from office, is elected as bencher under section 42 or for any reason is unable to continue in office, Convocation shall, as soon as practicable, elect as bencher for the electoral region a candidate in the most recent election of benchers,

(a) who was not elected as bencher;

(b) whose business address, or where a candidate has no business address, home address, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, is within the electoral region; and

(c) who, among all similar candidates, had the largest number of votes from all electors.

No candidate available for election under subsection (1)

(2) If no candidate is available for election under subsection (1), Convocation shall elect a licensee whose business address, or, where a licensee has no business address, whose home address, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, is within the electoral region.

Application of s. 42

44. (1) Section 42 applies, with necessary modifications, to,

(a) a bencher elected under section 13 to fill the office of a bencher elected for an electoral region on the basis of the votes cast by electors residing in the region;

(b) a bencher elected under subsection 31 (1);

(c) a bencher elected under subsection 31 (2); and

(d) a bencher elected under section 42.

Application of s. 43

(2) Section 43 applies, with necessary modifications, to,

(a) a bencher elected under section 13 to fill the office of a bencher elected for an electoral region on the basis of the votes cast by all electors;

(b) a bencher elected under subsection 31 (3); and

(c) a bencher elected under section 43.

Who may not be elected to fill vacancy

45. No person shall be elected as bencher under section 42 or 43 if the person is not eligible to be elected as bencher under section 12.

Term of office

46. A bencher who is elected under section 42 or 43 shall take office immediately after his or her election and, subject to any by-law that provides for the removal of benchers from office, shall remain in office until his or her successor takes office.

ELECTION DAY

Election day

46.2. There shall be an election of benchers in 2019 and every fourth year thereafter on the last day in April that is not a holiday.

CANDIDATES

Who may be a candidate

46.2.1. (1) Every licensee may be a candidate in an election of benchers if,

(a) on June 1 of the year of the election of benchers, the licensee would not have held office as an elected bencher for 12 or more years;

(b) the licensee is nominated as a candidate in accordance with section 8 of Part I as that section applies to this Part; and

(c) at the time of signing a nomination form containing their nomination as a candidate,

(i) the licensee's business address, or, where the person has no business address, home address, as indicated on the records of the Society, is within Ontario, and

(ii) the licensee's licence is not suspended.

(d) prior to the close of nominations, the licensee, if they have not previously been an elected bencher, has completed the Society's candidate orientation and education course in the format specified by the Elections Officer.

Interpretation

(2) For the purpose of subsection (1), the number of years specified in the subsection shall be deemed to include the time a licensee was appointed as a bencher or appointed or elected as a member of the Committee.

ELIGIBILITY FOR ELECTION

Who may not be elected

46.3. No candidate shall be elected as bencher if, at the time of their election,

(a) the candidate's business address, or, where the candidate has no business address, home address, as indicated on the records of the Society, is outside Ontario;

(b) the candidate is no longer licensed to provide legal services in Ontario or the candidate's licence is suspended;

(c) the candidate is not eighteen or more years of age;

- (d) the candidate is an undischarged bankrupt; or
- (e) the candidate does not consent to the candidate's election.

ACCLAMATION

Election by acclamation

46.3.1. If, after the acceptance of all valid nominations under section 9 of Part I, as that section applies to this Part, the number of candidates eligible to be elected as benchers is not more than five, the Elections Officer shall declare each of the candidates to have been elected as benchers.

POLL

Poll

46.4. (1) If, after the acceptance of all valid nominations under section 9 of Part I, as that section applies to this Part, the number of candidates eligible to be elected as benchers is more than five, a poll shall be conducted to elect five benchers.

Anonymity of elector and secrecy of votes

(2) The procedures for conducting a poll shall be such that the anonymity of an elector and secrecy of the elector's votes are preserved.

QUALIFICATION OF ELECTORS

Qualification of electors

46.4.1. A licensee whose licence is not suspended on the second Wednesday in April is entitled to vote in an election of benchers.

LIST OF ELECTORS

Electors list

46.4.2. On or shortly after the third Wednesday in April, the Elections Officer shall prepare a list of all persons who are entitled to vote in an election of benchers.

ELECTION MATERIALS

Election materials: preparation

46.4.3. (1) For the purposes of and prior to conducting the poll mentioned in section 46.4, the Elections Officer shall,

(a) prepare an election ballot showing the names of all candidates who may be eligible to be elected as benchers; and

(b) publish in electronic medium information about the candidates in the election of benchers, including the names of the candidates and, if available, the photograph, biography and, subject to subsection (3), election statement of each candidate.

Same

(2) In causing the election ballot to be prepared, the Elections Officer shall ensure that it is prepared in a manner that preserves the anonymity of the voters and the secrecy of their votes.

No publication of certain election statements unless approved

(3) The Elections Officer shall not publish any election statement that in the Election Officer's opinion may be libelous or may be in breach of the rules of professional conduct applicable to paralegals unless the election statement has been approved by a committee of benchers in accordance with section 20 of Part I, as that section applies for the purposes of this Part.

VOTING

Voting for candidate

46.5. In a poll conducted in an election of benchers, electors,

(a) may vote for up to five candidates; and

(b) shall cast their votes in accordance with the procedures established by the Elections Officer.

COUNTING THE VOTES

Elections Officer to cause counting of votes

46.6. (1) Beginning immediately after the deadline for casting votes on election day, the Elections Officer shall cause the votes for each candidate to be counted in accordance with this section.

Valid votes

(2) Subject to subsections (3) and (4), only votes cast by electors for candidates eligible to be elected as benchers shall be counted.

Disqualified votes

(3) If an elector votes for more than five candidates, none of the elector's votes for those candidates shall be counted.

Same number of votes

(4) If two or more candidates have the same number of votes, but the number of persons remaining to be elected as benchers is fewer than the number of candidates having the same number of votes, the Elections Officer shall, in the presence of the Treasurer, randomly select, from the candidates having the same numbers of votes, the necessary number of candidates to be elected as benchers.

Report of results to Convocation

46.7. (1) Immediately after the count of votes has been completed under section 46.6, the Elections Officer shall report the results to Convocation.

Declaration of results

(2) Immediately after reporting the results to Convocation, the Elections Officer shall declare to have been elected as benchers the five candidates eligible to be elected as benchers who have the five largest number of votes.

Report and publication of results

(3) The Elections Officer shall publish the election results on the Society's website, and those results shall include the names of the candidates and the number of votes cast for each candidate.

Failure to elect

46.8. (1) If in an election of benchers fewer than the required number of benchers are elected, Convocation shall, at its regular meeting in May or at its first regular meeting following the declaration of results under subsection 46.7 (2), whichever takes place later, elect as benchers,

(a) if there are candidates whose business addresses, or where candidates have no business address, home addresses, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation are within Ontario, the required number of candidates who were not elected as bencher;

(b) if there are no candidates available for election under clause (a), or if all candidates have already been elected under clause (a), the required number of licensees whose business addresses, or, where the licensee has no business address, home addresses, as indicated records on the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, is within Ontario.

Who may not be elected

(2) No person shall be elected as bencher under subsection (1) if the person is not eligible to be elected as bencher under section 46.3.

Taking office and term of office

46.9. The benchers who are elected under section 46.8 shall take office immediately after their election and, subject to any by-law that provides for the removal of benchers from office, shall remain in office until their successors take office.

VACANCIES DURING TERM OF OFFICE

Filling vacancy: election of candidate from previous election of benchers

46.10. (1) If a bencher resigns from office, is removed from office or for any other reason is unable to continue in office, Convocation shall, as soon as is practicable, elect as bencher a candidate in the most recent election of benchers,

(a) who was not elected as bencher;

(b) whose business address, or, where the person has no business address, home address, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, is within Ontario; and

(c) who, among the candidates not elected in the most recent election of benchers, had the largest number of votes.

No candidate available for election under subsection (1)

(2) If no candidate is available for election under subsection (1), Convocation shall elect a licensee whose business address, or, where a licensee has no business address, whose home address, as indicated on the records of the Society on the day of the election by Convocation, is within Ontario.

Application of section 46.10

46.11. (1) Section 46.10 applies, with necessary modifications, to,

- (a) a bencher elected under section 46.3.1; and
- (b) a bencher elected under section 46.8.

Who may not be elected to fill vacancy

(2) No person shall be elected as bencher under section 46.10 if the person is not eligible to be elected as bencher under section 46.3.

Taking office and term of office

(3) A candidate who is elected under section 46.10 shall take office immediately thereafter and, subject to any by-law that provides for the removal of benchers, shall remain in office until her or his successor takes office.

PART II

HONORARY BENCHERS

Convocation may make honorary benchers

47. Convocation may make any person an honorary bencher.

Transition

48. Every person who is an honorary bencher of the Society immediately before May 1, 2007 is an honorary bencher of the Society.

Emeritus benchers

48.1. (1) There shall be a class of honorary benchers known as emeritus benchers.

Former Treasurers

(2) Every person who has held the office of Treasurer, if and while they are a licensee, is an emeritus bencher.

Benchers by virtue of office not emeritus benchers

(3) Despite subsection (2), any person who is a bencher by virtue of office is not an emeritus bencher.

Licence in abeyance

(4) Subsection (2) does not apply to a person whose licence is in abeyance under section 31 of the Act.

Right to participate in debate at Convocation

(5) An emeritus bencher may take part in a debate in Convocation.

Removal of right

(6) Despite subsection (5), an emeritus bencher who fails to attend Convocation held under section 77 four consecutive times may not take part in any debate at Convocation until after they attend three of any five consecutive times Convocation is held under section 77 after they lose the right to take part in a debate at Convocation.

Excused from attending Convocation

(7) On their application, where there is good and sufficient reason to do so, the Treasurer may excuse an emeritus bencher from the requirement to attend Convocation for a definite or indefinite period and, where the Treasurer has done so, while the emeritus bencher is excused from the requirement to attend Convocation, subsection (6) does not apply to the emeritus bencher.

PART II.1

BENCHERS BY VIRTUE OF OFFICE

Former Treasurers: right to participate in debate at Convocation

48.2. (1) A bencher by virtue of office under section 14 of the Act may take part in a debate at Convocation.

Removal of right to participate in debate at Convocation

(2) Despite subsection (1), a bencher by virtue of office under section 14 of the Act who fails to attend Convocation held under section 77 four consecutive times may not take part in any debate at Convocation until after they attend three of any five consecutive times Convocation is held under section 77 after they lose the right to take part in a debate at Convocation.

Excused from attending Convocation

(3) On their application, where there is good and sufficient reason to do so, the Treasurer may excuse a bencher by virtue of office under section 14 of the Act from the requirement to attend Convocation for a definite or indefinite period and, where the Treasurer has done so, while the bencher by virtue of office under section 14 of the Act is excused from the requirement to attend Convocation, subsection (2) does not apply to them.

PART III

BENCHERS: ADMINISTRATION

REMUNERATION

Interpretation

49. (1) In this section and in sections 50 and 51,

“election of benchers” means an election of benchers under Part I or an election of benchers under Part I.1;

“full day” means a total of more than 3 hours in a period of 24 hours; “half day” means a total of not more than 3 hours in a period of 24 hours;

“payee” means a person who is entitled to receive remuneration from the Society under section 50;

“remuneration year” means,

(a) the period beginning on the day, in one calendar year, on which Convocation has its first regular meeting after an election of benchers and ending, in the following calendar year, on May 31,

(b) the twelve-month period beginning on June 1 in one calendar year and ending on May 31 in the following calendar year, and

(c) the period beginning on June 1 in one calendar year and ending, in the following calendar year, on the day before the day on which Convocation has its first regular meeting after an election of benchers;

“work” means any of the following activities and includes reasonable time traveling to or from the activity:

1. Attending a Convocation, provided the payee has the right to take part in a debate at Convocation,
2. Attending a meeting of a standing or other committee, including the Proceedings Authorization Committee and any subcommittee of a standing or other committee or the Proceedings Authorization Committee, of which the payee is a member,
3. Attending a meeting of a standing or other committee, including the Proceedings Authorization Committee and any subcommittee of a standing or other committee or the Proceedings Authorization Committee, of which the payee is not a member, at the request of the chair of the committee,
4. Attending an information session organized by the Society exclusively for all or any group of payees,
5. Attending a program of education or training required by the Society for payees as such,
6. Hearing a hearing before the Hearing Division or Appeal Division,
7. Preparing reasons for a decision or order of the Hearing Division or Appeal Division,
8. Conducting a pre-hearing conference in a proceeding before the Hearing Division,
9. Performing activities, as vice-chair of the Hearing Division or Appeal Division, that are integral to the office of vice-chair of the Hearing Division or Appeal Division,
10. Performing activities, as a member of the Hearing Division or Appeal Division, that relate to the management of a proceeding before the Hearing Division or Appeal Division,

11. Performing activities, as a person appointed by Convocation for the purpose of making orders under sections 46, 47, 47.1, 48 and 49 of the Act, that are integral to the role of that person under sections 46, 47, 47.1, 48 and 49 of the Act,

12. Attending a meeting, other than a Convocation or a meeting of a standing or other committee, at the direction of the Treasurer or Convocation,

13. Performing activities as a director of an organization, to which position the payee was appointed, or nominated for appointment, by Convocation, provided that the performing of the activities would entitle any other director of the organization to be remunerated by the organization for performing the activities.

Interpretation of “work” during temporary suspension period

(1.1) Beginning on April 9, 2020 and ending on the earlier of June 30, 2020 and the day before the first day after April 9, 2020 on which a meeting of Convocation or a standing or other committee may be attended in person, the definition of “work” contained in subsection (1) is temporarily suspended and the following definition of “work” is in effect during the temporary suspension period only:

“work” means any of the following activities and includes reasonable time traveling to or from the activity:

1. Attending a meeting of the Proceedings Authorization Committee or any subcommittee of the Proceedings Authorization Committee as a member thereof,
2. Attending a meeting of the Proceedings Authorization Committee or any subcommittee of the Proceedings Authorization Committee as a non-member at the request of the chair of the Committee,
3. Hearing a hearing before the Hearing Division or Appeal Division,
4. Preparing reasons for a decision or order of the Hearing Division or Appeal Division,
5. Conducting a pre-hearing conference in a proceeding before the Hearing Division,
6. Performing activities, as vice-chair of the Hearing Division or Appeal Division, that are integral to the office of vice-chair of the Hearing Division or Appeal Division,
7. Performing activities, as a member of the Hearing Division or Appeal Division, that relate to the management of a proceeding before the Hearing Division or Appeal Division.

Suspension of application of subsection (1.1) on compassionate grounds

(1.2) On application by a person mentioned in subsection 50 (1), (1.1) or (3), the Treasurer may on compassionate grounds suspend the application of subsection (1.1) in respect of the person.

Entitlement

50. (1) Subject to subsection (2), every elected bencher, every bencher who holds office under subsection 12 (1) of the Act, every bencher who holds office under subsection 12 (2) of the Act and every bencher who holds office under section 14 of the Act is entitled to receive from the Society remuneration,

(a) for each half day of work performed for the Society in a remuneration year, after the first 26 half or full days of work performed for the Society in that remuneration year, in an amount determined by Convocation from time to time; and

(b) for each full day of work performed for the Society in a remuneration year, after the first 26 half or full days of work performed for the Society in that remuneration year, in an amount determined by Convocation from time to time.

Entitlement

(1.1) Subject to subsection (2), every emeritus bencher is entitled to receive from the Society remuneration,

(a) for each half day of work performed for the Society in a remuneration year, in an amount determined by Convocation from time to time; and

(b) for each full day of work performed for the Society in a remuneration year, in an amount determined by Convocation from time to time.

Limits on remuneration: performing activities as director of another organization

(2) A payee is not entitled to receive from the Society remuneration for performing activities as a director of an organization if the payee is remunerated, directly or indirectly, by the organization for performing the activities.

Entitlement

(3) Subject to subsections (4) and (5), every lay bencher is entitled to receive from the Society remuneration,

(a) for each half day of work performed for the Society in a remuneration year, in an amount determined by Convocation from time to time; and

(b) for each full day of work performed for the Society in a remuneration year, in an amount determined by Convocation from time to time.

Limits on remuneration: lay benchers

(4) A lay bencher is not entitled to receive from the Society remuneration for performing an activity mentioned in paragraphs 1 to 5 and 11 to 13 of the definition of “work” contained in subsection 49 (1) unless it is,

(a) the reasonable time traveling to or from the activity; or

(b) in the case of the activity mentioned in paragraph 5 of the definition of “work” contained in subsection 49 (1), a program of education or training required by the Society for the lay bencher as a member of the Hearing Division or Appeal Division.

Limits on remuneration: lay bencher remunerated by the Government of Ontario

(5) If, under subsections (3) and (4), a lay bencher is entitled to receive from the Society remuneration for performing an activity, if the lay bencher is also entitled to receive from the Government of Ontario remuneration for performing the same activity, the lay bencher is only entitled to receive from the Society remuneration for performing the activity in an amount that equals the amount, if any, by which the amount that the Society would ordinarily pay the lay bencher exceeds the amount that the Government of Ontario would pay the lay bencher.

Claiming remuneration

51. (1) Subject to subsection (2), a payee may claim remuneration by submitting to the Society a claim for remuneration in a form provided by the Society.

Same

(2) A payee shall,

(a) claim remuneration for work performed for the Society within a reasonable period of time after the payee has performed the work; and

(b) claim all remuneration in respect of a remuneration year by not later than six months after the end of the remuneration year.

Payment of remuneration to payee

- (3) Remuneration to which a payee is entitled shall be paid by the Society,
- (a) within a reasonable period of time after the payee submits a claim for remuneration;
and
- (b) within the calendar year in which the payee submits a claim for remuneration.

Same

(4) Remuneration shall be paid to the individual payee claiming the remuneration or, at the direction of the individual payee, to a business entity of which the payee is a partner, sole proprietor, shareholder or other owner or of which the payee is an employee.

DISBURSEMENTS

Disbursements

52. Every bencher and every emeritus bencher is entitled to be reimbursed by the Society for reasonable expenses incurred by him or her in the performance of his or her duties for or on behalf of the Society.

INDEMNIFICATION

Indemnification of benchers, etc.

53. (1) Subject to subsection (4), the Society shall indemnify every bencher, officer of the Society, former bencher, former officer of the Society and other individual who, not being a bencher or officer of the Society, acts or acted as a bencher or officer of the Society at the request of the Society against all costs, charges and expenses, including an amount paid to settle an action or satisfy a judgment, reasonably incurred by the person in respect of any civil, criminal, administrative, investigative or other proceeding in which the person is involved because of the person's association with the Society.

Advance of costs

(2) The Society may advance moneys to a person referred to in subsection (1) for the costs, charges and expenses of a proceeding referred to in subsection (1).

Repayment of moneys

(3) If a person referred to in subsection (1) does not fulfil the conditions of subsection (4), the person shall repay moneys advanced to him or her under subsection (2).

Limitation

(4) The Society shall not indemnify a person referred to in subsection (1) unless the person,

- (a) acted honestly and in good faith with a view to the best interests of the Society;
- (b) in the case of a criminal or administrative proceeding resulting in a monetary penalty, the person had reasonable grounds for believing that his or her conduct was lawful; and
- (c) in the case of a proceeding under the Lobbying Act (Canada), including an investigative proceeding, communicated on behalf of the Society with a public office holder, as defined in the Lobbying Act (Canada), only with the prior written authorization of the Treasurer or the Chief Executive Officer.

Insurance

(5) The Society may purchase and maintain insurance for the benefit of every person referred to in subsection (1) against any liability incurred by the person in the person's capacity as a bencher or officer.

PART IV

TREASURER

ELECTION OF TREASURER

Time of election

54. (1) Subject to subsection (2), there shall be an election of Treasurer every year on the third Wednesday in June.

Same

(2) If after the close of nominations of candidates under subsection 55 (3) or (4), there are two or more candidates, and if before the day of the election of Treasurer under subsection (1), all of the candidates, but one, cease, for any reason, to be candidates, there shall be an election of Treasurer on the later of the third Wednesday in June and the day that is ten business days after the day of the close of nominations of candidates under subsection 55 (5).

Nomination of candidates

55. (1) A candidate for election as Treasurer shall be nominated by not more than two benchers who are entitled to vote in Convocation.

Nomination in writing

(2) The nomination of a candidate shall be in writing, signed by the candidate to indicate his or her consent to the nomination, signed by the two benchers nominating the candidate, and submitted to the secretary prior to the close of nominations of candidates.

Time for close of nominations

(3) Subject to subsection (4), the close of nominations of candidates shall be 5 p.m. on the second Thursday in May.

Exception

(4) In a year in which there is an election of benchers, the close of nominations of candidates shall be 5 p.m. on the Friday immediately after the day on which Convocation has its regular meeting in May.

Nominations reopened

(5) If after the close of nominations of candidates under subsection (3) or (4), there are two or more candidates, and if before the day of the election of Treasurer under subsection 54 (1), all of the candidates, but one, cease, for any reason, to be candidates,

(a) the period for nominations of candidates shall be reopened; and

(b) the new close of nominations of candidates shall be 5 p.m. on the day that is ten business days after the day on which the secretary sends the notice under section 57.

Invalid nomination

(6) A nomination that is made by more than two benchers who are entitled to vote in Convocation, that is not made in writing, that is not signed by the candidate, that is not signed by the two benchers nominating the candidate or that is not submitted to the secretary prior to the close of nominations of candidates is invalid and the candidate who is the subject of the nomination shall not be a candidate in the election of Treasurer.

Withdrawal of candidates

56. A candidate may withdraw from an election of Treasurer at any time before the day of the election of Treasurer by giving the secretary written notice of their withdrawal.

Reduction in number of candidates: notice

57. If, after the close of nominations of candidates under subsection 55 (3) or (4), there are two or more candidates, and if before the day of the election of Treasurer under subsection 54 (1), all of the candidates, but one, cease, for any reason, to be candidates, not later than five business days after the day on which one candidate remains, the secretary shall send to each bencher entitled to vote in an election of Treasurer a notice stating,

- (a) the day on which the notice is sent;
- (b) that the period for nominations of candidates has re-opened;
- (c) the new time for close of nominations;
- (d) that any ballots received at the poll shall be discarded;
- (e) the time for the beginning of the new poll; and
- (f) the day on which there shall be an election of Treasurer.

Notice of candidates to benchers

58. After the close of nominations of candidates, the secretary shall, as soon as practicable, notify each bencher entitled to vote in an election of Treasurer of the candidates and of the benchers who nominated each candidate.

Election by acclamation

59. (1) If after the close of nominations of candidates, there is only one candidate, the secretary shall declare that candidate to be elected as Treasurer.

Same

(2) Despite any provision to the contrary in this Part, if, after the close of nominations of candidates under subsection 55 (5), there are two or more candidates, but on the day on which there shall be an election of Treasurer, there is only one candidate, the secretary shall declare that candidate to be elected as Treasurer.

Poll

60. (1) If after the close of nominations of candidates, there are two or more candidates, a poll shall be conducted to elect a Treasurer.

Anonymity of voting bencher and secrecy of vote

(2) The procedures for conducting a poll shall be such that the anonymity of a voting bencher and the secrecy of the bencher's vote are preserved.

Electronic procedures

60.1. If a poll is required to elect a Treasurer, the secretary shall,

(a) as soon as practicable after the close of nominations, establish the electronic procedures by which benchers entitled to vote in the election of Treasurer may vote; and

(b) prior to the opening of the poll, publish for benchers entitled to vote in the election of Treasurer the electronic procedures established in respect of the election of Treasurer.

Treasurer is candidate in election

61. If the Treasurer is a candidate in an election of Treasurer, the Treasurer shall appoint a bencher who is a chair of a standing committee of Convocation and who is not a candidate in the election for the purpose of performing the duties and exercising the powers of the Treasurer under this Part.

Right to vote

62. (1) Every bencher entitled to vote in Convocation is entitled to vote in an election of Treasurer.

List of voters

(2) If a poll is required to elect a Treasurer, after the close of nominations of candidates, the secretary shall prepare a list of benchers entitled to vote in an election of Treasurer.

List to show who has voted

(3) Beginning at the opening of the poll and ending at the closing of the poll, the secretary shall mark on the list prepared under subsection (2) whenever a bencher casts a ballot so that, at any time, the list will show the benchers who have cast ballots and the benchers who have not yet cast ballots in the election of Treasurer, and the secretary shall make this list available for inspection to candidates in the election of Treasurer and benchers entitled to vote in the election of Treasurer.

Conducting poll

63. (1) A poll shall be conducted,

(a) beginning at 9 a.m. on the second Wednesday in June and ending at 5 p.m. on election day; or

(b) if after the close of nominations of candidates under subsection 55 (3) or (4), there are two or more candidates, and if before the day of the election of Treasurer under subsection 54 (1), all of the candidates, but one, cease, for any reason, to be candidates, beginning at 9 a.m. on the day that is three business days after the day of the close of nominations of candidates under subsection 55 (5) and ending at 5 p.m. on election day under subsection 54 (2).

Method of voting

(2) A bencher shall cast their vote at the poll in accordance with the electronic procedures established by the secretary.

Marking a ballot

(3) A bencher voting at the poll shall mark the ballot in accordance with subsection (4) or (5).

Two candidates

(4) If there are not more than two candidates, a bencher shall vote for one candidate only and shall indicate the candidate of their choice by placing a mark beside the name of the candidate.

More than two candidates

(5) If there are three or more candidates, a bencher shall rank the candidates in order of preference by placing the appropriate number beside the name of each candidate.

Ballots to be discarded

(6) If after the close of nominations of candidates under subsection 55 (3) or (4), there are two or more candidates, and if before the day of the election of Treasurer under subsection 54 (1), all of the candidates, but one, cease, for any reason, to be candidates, the secretary shall cause to be discarded the ballots received at the poll conducted after the close of nominations under subsection 55 (3) or (4).

64. [Revoked].

65. [Revoked].

Counting votes

66. (1) Beginning immediately after the closing of the poll on election day, the secretary shall cause the votes cast for each candidate to be counted.

Same

(2) If at the poll votes were cast for candidates by rank of preference, the secretary shall cause the votes cast for each candidate to be counted with the assumption that a bencher's candidate of choice was the candidate on the ballot given the highest rank by the bencher.

Report of results: two candidates

67. (1) If on any ballot there are not more than two candidates, immediately after counting the votes cast for each candidate, the secretary shall report the results to each bencher entitled to vote in the election and shall declare to be elected as Treasurer the candidate who received the larger number of votes.

Report of results: three or more candidates

(2) If on any ballot there are three or more candidates and, after counting the votes, the secretary determines that at least one candidate received more than 50 percent of all votes cast for all candidates, the secretary shall report the results to each bencher entitled to vote in the election and shall declare to be elected as Treasurer the candidate who received the largest number of votes.

Counting votes when three or more candidates and no majority

67.1. (1) If on any ballot there are three or more candidates and, after causing the votes to be counted, no candidate receives more than 50 percent of all votes cast for all candidates, the secretary shall cause the votes to be counted as follows:

1. The candidate receiving the fewest number of first-choice votes shall be removed as a candidate in the election.
2. For each ballot on which the candidate removed as a candidate in the election is the first choice, the candidate who is the second-choice candidate and who has not been removed as a candidate in the election shall be counted as the first-choice candidate for that ballot, the third-choice candidate who has not been removed as a candidate in the election shall be counted as the second-choice candidate for that ballot, and so on until all candidates ranked on the ballot have been counted.

3. If a candidate receives more than 50 per cent of the votes cast for all candidates, the secretary shall report the results to each bencher entitled to vote in the election and shall declare that candidate to be elected as Treasurer.

4. If two or more candidates receive an equal number of votes and an additional vote would entitle one of them to be declared to be elected as Treasurer, the Treasurer shall select one of the candidates in accordance with subsection 68 (1).

5. If neither paragraph 3 nor 4 applies, the secretary shall cause the counting of votes to continue in accordance with paragraphs 1 and 2, subject to subsections (2), (3) and (4), until a candidate is elected as Treasurer under one of those paragraphs.

Resolution of a tie

(2) If two or more candidates each receive the fewest and the same number of first-choice votes, the secretary shall cause all second-choice votes cast for those candidates on all ballots to be counted and the candidate with the fewest number of second-choice votes shall be removed as a candidate in the election.

Same

(3) If no candidate can be removed as a candidate in the election under subsection (2), the secretary shall cause the process for counting under that subsection to continue based on the next-choice votes cast on all ballots, in order of preference, until one candidate is determined to have received the fewest number of such next-choice votes being counted, at which time that candidate shall be removed as a candidate in the election.

Same

(4) If no candidate can be removed as a candidate in the election under subsection (2) or (3) and,

1. the fewest number of first-choice votes for a candidate in subsection (2) does not include votes counted for that candidate under paragraph 67.1 (1) 2, the secretary shall cause a random selection of one of the candidates and the candidate selected shall be removed as a candidate from the election; or

2. the fewest number of first-choice votes for a candidate in subsection (2) includes votes counted for that candidate under paragraph 67.1 (1) 2, the candidate with the fewest number of first-choice votes before such inclusion shall be removed as a candidate in the election.

Casting tie-breaking vote

68. (1) If at any time an equal number of votes is cast for two or more candidates and an additional vote would entitle one of them to be declared to be elected as Treasurer, the Treasurer shall randomly select one of the candidates and cast an additional vote for that candidate.

Declaration by secretary

69. A declaration by the secretary under this Part shall be communicated to licensees as soon as practicable after it is made.

TERM OF OFFICE

Taking office

70. (1) In an election of Treasurer under section 54,

(a) a bencher elected as Treasurer by acclamation shall take office on the day on which Convocation has its regular meeting in June following the election; and

(b) a bencher elected as Treasurer by poll shall take office on the day on which Convocation has its first regular meeting following the election.

Term of office

(2) Subject to any provision in any by-law providing for the removal of a Treasurer from office, the Treasurer shall remain in office until their successor takes office.

HONORARIUM

Treasurer's entitlement to honorarium

71. The Treasurer is entitled to receive from the Society an honorarium in an amount determined by Convocation from time to time.

VACANCY IN OFFICE

Vacancy

72. If a Treasurer resigns, is removed from office or for any reason is unable to act during his or her term in office, Convocation shall, as soon as practicable, elect an elected bencher to fill the office of Treasurer until the next election of Treasurer under section 54.

ACTING TREASURER

Acting Treasurer

73. If a Treasurer for any reason is temporarily unable to perform the duties or exercise the powers of the Treasurer during his or her term in office, or if there is a vacancy in the office of Treasurer under section 72, the chair of the Audit and Finance Committee, or if he or she for any reason is unable to act, the chair of the Professional Development and Competence Committee, shall perform the duties and exercise the powers of the Treasurer until,

- (a) the Treasurer is able to perform the duties or exercise the powers of the Treasurer; or
- (b) a Treasurer is elected under section 72 or 54.

PART V

CONVOCATION

INTERPRETATION

Definitions

74. (1) In this Part,

“main motion” means a motion which is the subject of an amendment contained in a motion to amend;

“motion to amend” means a motion to amend another motion, without altering in any way the substance of that motion, by adding or deleting words, varying minor details or rephrasing sentences;

“question of privilege” means a question about any right enjoyed at Convocation by the benchers present at Convocation collectively or by any bencher present at Convocation individually conferred by this Part or by practice, precedent, usage and custom;

“question of procedure” means a question about the procedure being followed at any time at Convocation;

“substantive motion” means a motion that is a self-contained proposal capable of expressing a decision of the benchers present at Convocation concerning a matter of import to the Society.

Substantive motion: no recitals or preambles

(1.1) No substantive motion shall be prefaced by recitals or preambles.

Interpretation: tabling a motion

(2) In this Part, “to table a motion” means to defer indefinitely debating the motion or putting the motion to a vote and “a motion which was tabled” has a corresponding meaning.

MEETINGS

Convocation conducted in accordance with Part

75. (1) Subject to subsection (2), Convocation shall be conducted in accordance with this Part.

Waiving compliance, etc.

(2) The Treasurer may waive compliance with any requirement, alter any requirement and abridge or extend any time period mentioned in this Part in respect of Convocation.

Matters of procedure not provided for

(3) Any matter of procedure not provided for in this Part shall be determined by the Treasurer.

Place of Convocation

76. (1) Subject to subsections (2) and (3), Convocation shall be held in Osgoode Hall.

Same

(2) The Treasurer may convene Convocation at any place.

Convocation by telephone conference call, etc.

(3) Convocation may be conducted by means of such telephone, electronic or other communication facilities as permit all persons participating in Convocation to communicate with each other simultaneously and instantaneously.

Convocation: when held

77. Convocation shall be held on the fourth Thursday of each month, except the months of July, August and December, unless otherwise directed by the Treasurer.

Convocation: special meetings

78. (1) The Treasurer may convene Convocation at any time by giving at least twenty- four hours notice, or by directing the secretary to give such notice, to each bencher.

Same

(2) Upon the written request of ten benchers who are entitled to vote in Convocation, the secretary shall convene Convocation by giving at least twenty-four hours notice to each bencher.

Convocation open to public

79. (1) Subject to subsection (2), Convocation shall be open to the public.

Public excluded

(2) Convocation shall be held in the absence of the public to deal with any of the following matters:

1. Matters relating to the Society's personnel.
2. Litigation in which the Society is involved.
3. Negotiations with a government.
4. Intimate financial or personal matters or other matters in respect of which, in the opinion of the benchers present at Convocation, the need for privacy outweighs the public interest in disclosure.
5. Any matter at the instance of the Treasurer.

Confidentiality

(3) No person shall disclose any information in relation to Convocation held in the absence of the public.

Confidentiality: exceptions

- (4) Subsection (3) does not prohibit,
- (a) disclosure required in connection with the administration of the Act, the regulations, the by-laws or the rules of practice and procedure;
  - (b) disclosure of information that is a matter of public record;

- (c) disclosure by a person to his or her counsel;
- (d) disclosure with the written consent of all persons whose interests might reasonably be affected by the disclosure; or
- (e) disclosure of information that Convocation determines may be disclosed.

Order of business

80. Unless otherwise provided, the business and the order of business at Convocation shall be determined by the Treasurer.

Order of business: special meeting

81. At Convocation convened under subsection 78 (2), the business of Convocation shall include the matters for which Convocation was convened.

Minutes

82. (1) Except when Convocation is resolved into a meeting of the benchers as a committee of the whole, minutes shall be kept for Convocation.

Confirmation of minutes

(2) At each Convocation, the minutes of the last Convocation shall be confirmed by the benchers present at Convocation and shall be signed by the Treasurer or the bencher who presided at the meeting of the Convocation to which the minutes relate.

Publication of minutes

(3) Except in the case of the minutes of Convocation held in the absence of the public, the minutes of Convocation shall be made available for public inspection.

Transcript

83. (1) Convocation shall be recorded by a qualified verbatim reporter to permit the production of a transcript of Convocation.

Publication

(2) The transcript of Convocation open to the public shall be made available for public inspection.

Adjournment for lack of quorum

84. (1) If at any time after Convocation has commenced, the Treasurer's attention is directed to the apparent lack of a quorum, the Treasurer shall determine whether a quorum is present and, upon determining that a quorum is not present, the Treasurer shall adjourn Convocation without motion.

Same

(2) The matter before Convocation immediately prior to an adjournment under subsection (1), and all matters listed on the agenda for Convocation that are not reached prior to the adjournment, shall be deemed to be deferred to the next Convocation to be held under section 77.

Removal of benchers from office for non-attendance

85. (1) The benchers present at Convocation may remove from office an elected bencher who fails to attend Convocation held under section 77 six consecutive times.

Failure to attend three meetings

(2) When an elected bencher fails to attend Convocation held under section 77 three consecutive times, the secretary shall immediately send to the elected bencher a notice of the failure and of the benchers' authority under subsection (1) to remove him or her from office.

Failure to attend six meetings: report

(3) When an elected bencher fails to attend Convocation held under section 77 six consecutive times, the secretary shall report the failure at the first Convocation held thereafter under section 77.

TREASURER

Treasurer to preside

86. The Treasurer shall preside over Convocation.

Appeal of Treasurer's rulings and decisions

87. (1) Two or more benchers who are entitled to vote in Convocation may together appeal to the benchers present at Convocation from a ruling or decision of the Treasurer made in Convocation.

Exception to appeal

(2) Despite subsection (1), the following rulings and decisions of the Treasurer made in Convocation are not subject to an appeal:

1. A decision on a question of privilege or procedure.
2. A ruling that a bencher's remarks are out of order for the reason set out in clause 99 (3) (e).

3. A ruling that a motion is out of order because it is a motion mentioned in subsection 91 (2).
4. A decision under subsection 100 (1) to put a motion to a vote.
5. A decision about a recorded vote.

Time for making appeal

(3) An appeal from a ruling or decision of the Treasurer shall be made immediately after the ruling or decision.

Debate

(4) Except in the case of an appeal of a ruling or decision of the Treasurer in respect of a bencher's language or behaviour, an appeal of a ruling or decision of the Treasurer may be debated and sections 97 to 99 apply, with necessary modifications, to the debate.

Same

(5) The debate on an appeal of the Treasurer's decision under paragraph 5 of subsection 79 (2) shall be conducted in the absence of the public.

Disposition

(6) An appeal of a ruling or decision of the Treasurer shall be disposed of by a vote on the question: "Should the ruling or decision of the Treasurer be upheld?"

Same

(7) Sections 100 to 104 apply, with necessary modifications, to a vote on an appeal of a ruling or decision of the Treasurer.

Same

(8) The vote on an appeal of the Treasurer's decision under paragraph 5 of subsection 79 (2) shall be conducted in the absence of the public.

Resolution: appeal of Treasurer's ruling

(9) A ruling or decision of the Treasurer shall be upheld if the majority of votes cast are in favour of upholding the ruling or decision of the Treasurer or if there is a tie vote on the appeal.

ORDER AND DECORUM

Treasurer to preserve order, decorum, etc.

88. At Convocation, the Treasurer shall preserve order, decorum, civility and courtesy and shall decide questions of privilege and procedure.

Benchers not to interrupt Treasurer

89. (1) Benchers shall refrain from interrupting the Treasurer when he or she is speaking, making a ruling or decision or putting a motion or question to Convocation for a vote.

Bencher not to interrupt other bencher

(2) Unless otherwise provided in this Part, when a bencher is speaking, no bencher other than the Treasurer shall interrupt the bencher speaking.

Questions of privilege and procedure

90. (1) A bencher who is entitled to vote in Convocation or who may take part in a debate at Convocation may raise a question of privilege or procedure at any time during Convocation and may interrupt another bencher who is speaking to do so.

Discussion

(2) Apart from the bencher raising the question, there shall be no discussion or debate of a question of privilege or procedure.

Decision

(3) The Treasurer shall decide a question of privilege or procedure immediately after it is raised.

Taken up immediately

(4) If the Treasurer decides that a prima facie case of privilege exists, it shall be taken into consideration immediately.

MOTIONS

Motions to be made in accordance with Part

91. (1) Motions made in Convocation shall be made in accordance with this Part.

Prohibited motions

(2) No motion shall be made concerning a matter,

- (a) in respect of which a hearing may be conducted under the Act or by-laws; or
- (b) that is pending before an adjudicative body for determination.

Who may make motion

92. (1) A motion may be made in Convocation by a bencher who is entitled to vote in Convocation.

Certain benchers to move certain motions

(2) A substantive motion of which notice has been given shall be made by the bencher who gave notice of the motion.

Notice required

93. (1) Notice is required for the following motions:

1. A substantive motion, other than a substantive motion contained in the report of a standing or other committee.

2. A motion to resume debating and to put to a vote a substantive motion which was tabled.

Method of giving notice

(2) Notice of a motion shall be given in writing by the bencher intending to make the motion by delivering a copy of the text of the motion, signed by the bencher intending to make the motion and the bencher intending to second the motion, to the secretary at least twenty days before the day fixed for Convocation at which the bencher intends to make the motion.

Sending notice to all benchers

(3) The secretary shall as soon as possible after receiving notice of a motion under subsection (2) send a copy of the text of the motion to all benchers.

Substantive motion without notice

(4) Despite subsection (1), a bencher may make a substantive motion, other than a substantive motion contained in a report of a standing or other committee, without notice at Convocation if the motion relates to a matter then being debated at Convocation.

Secunder required

94. (1) A motion must be seconded before it may be debated, if debate is permitted, and voted on.

Seconders

(2) Only benchers who are entitled to vote in Convocation may second a motion.

Same

(3) A substantive motion of which notice has been given shall be seconded by the bencher who signed the text of the motion as the bencher intending to second the motion.

Introduction of substantive motion

95. (1) Subject to section 80, a substantive motion may be moved at any time at Convocation provided that no other substantive motion is before Convocation at the time.

Same

(2) A motion to refer the subject matter of a substantive motion, other than a substantive motion contained in the report of a standing or other committee, to a standing or other committee, a motion to table a substantive motion or a motion to put a substantive motion to a vote may be moved at any time after the substantive motion has been moved and seconded, but before it has been voted on, at Convocation.

Same

(3) A motion to amend may be made at any time after a main motion is moved and seconded, but before it has been voted on, at Convocation, provided that no other motion to amend is before Convocation at the time.

Same

(4) A motion to adjourn Convocation may be made at any time.

Withdrawal

96. (1) A bencher who has given notice of a motion may withdraw the same at any time.

Same

(2) A bencher who has moved a motion may withdraw the same at any time with the consent of the bencher who seconded the motion.

DEBATE

Debate on motions

97. A motion before Convocation may be debated except in the following cases:

1. A motion to table a motion.
2. A motion to adjourn Convocation.

Who may participate in debate

98. The following persons may take part in a debate at Convocation:

1. An elected bencher.
2. A lay bencher.

3. A bencher by virtue of his or her office under paragraph 1 of subsection 12 (2) of the Act.
4. A bencher by virtue of office under section 14 of the Act who has not lost the right to take part in a debate at Convocation.
5. An emeritus bencher who has not lost the right to take part in a debate at Convocation.
6. The Chief Executive Officer.
7. Any other person with the prior permission of the Treasurer.

Time limits

99. (0.1) The Treasurer may set time limits for a debate or any part thereof including the presentation of a report of a standing or other committee that contains the motion to be debated and any speech to a matter.

Order of speaking

(1) Subject to subsection (2), in a debate, benchers are entitled to speak to a motion in the following order:

1. The bencher who moved the motion.
2. The bencher who seconded the motion.
3. Any other bencher or person, in accordance with section 98, when recognized by the Treasurer.

Reserving right to speak

(2) The bencher who seconded the motion may reserve the right to speak to the motion until a later time in the debate.

Matters out of order in debate

- (3) In a debate, a bencher shall be called to order by the Treasurer if he or she,
- (a) subject to subsections (4), (5), (6) and (7) speaks to a motion more than once;
  - (b) directs his or her speech to matters other than the motion being debated;
  - (c) persists in needless repetition or raises matters that have already been decided at Convocation;
    - (c.1) exceeds a time limit set by the Treasurer;
  - (d) anticipates a matter already on the agenda of Convocation for consideration;
  - (e) refers to a matter,

- (i) in respect of which a hearing may be conducted under the Act or by-laws; or
  - (ii) that is pending before an adjudicative body for determination;
- (f) makes allegations against another bencher;
  - (g) imputes false, improper or ulterior motives to another bencher;
  - (h) charges another bencher with uttering a deliberate falsehood; or
  - (i) uses abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder.

Speaking twice

(4) A bencher may speak to a motion a second time only to explain a material part of his or her first speech which he or she believes may have been misunderstood, and in so doing, the bencher shall not introduce any new points.

Same

(5) A bencher who moves a motion may speak to the motion a second time immediately before the end of the debate to reply to any comments or questions raised during the debate.

Questions on speeches and replies

(6) At any time during the debate on a motion, a bencher may ask a brief question about another bencher's speech and that bencher may, with the Treasurer's permission, reply briefly.

Treasurer's permission to speak second time

(7) A bencher may speak to a motion a second time, in circumstances not mentioned in subsections (4), (5) and (6), with the Treasurer's permission.

Special rules of debate: motions to amend

(8) Immediately a motion to amend is made during the debate on a main motion, the Treasurer shall interrupt that debate and call for a debate on the motion to amend.

Resumption of interrupted debate

(9) A debate that has been interrupted under subsection (8) shall be resumed immediately the motion to amend which caused the debate to be interrupted has been voted on.

VOTING

Putting debatable motion to vote

100. (1) Subject to subsection (2), the Treasurer shall put a motion which may be debated to a vote when he or she is of the opinion that debate on the motion has been reasonably completed.

Motion to amend accepted

(2) A motion to amend shall not be put to a vote if the benchers who moved and seconded a main motion consent to that motion being amended as proposed in the motion to amend.

Putting non-debatable motion to vote

(3) The Treasurer shall put a motion which may not be debated to a vote immediately after the motion has received a seconder.

Treasurer may not vote

101. The Treasurer shall not vote on a motion except in the case of a tie when the Treasurer may cast a tie-breaking vote.

Proxy voting prohibited

102. Votes may not be cast by proxy.

Manner of voting

103. Voting shall be by a show of hands, or if Convocation is conducted by means of telephone, electronic or other communication facilities under subsection 76 (3), by oral response, unless a recorded vote is required by the Treasurer, or requested by a bencher entitled to vote in Convocation and permitted by the Treasurer, in accordance with section 104.

Recorded vote

104. (1) A recorded vote may be required by the Treasurer or requested by a bencher entitled to vote in Convocation before a motion is put to a vote.

Recorded vote requested by bencher

(2) When a recorded vote has been requested by a bencher, the Treasurer may, but is not required to, conduct a recorded vote.

Manner of conducting recorded vote

(3) When a recorded vote is being conducted, the Treasurer shall put the subject motion to the benchers present in Convocation and the secretary shall then call out the names of all benchers entitled to vote in Convocation and upon hearing his or her name, a bencher shall state his or her vote or if wishing not to vote shall state his or her abstention from the vote.

Resolution

105. A motion shall carry if a majority of the votes cast are in favour of the motion.

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Committee of the Whole

106. (1) At any time, the Treasurer may require Convocation to resolve itself into a meeting of the benchers as a committee of the whole to consider any matter before Convocation at the time.

Appointment of chair

(2) Immediately after announcing his or her decision to require Convocation to resolve itself into a meeting of the benchers as a committee of the whole, the Treasurer may appoint a bencher as chair of the committee of the whole and, if the Treasurer does so appoint a bencher, the Treasurer shall then leave the chair.

Appointed bencher takes chair

(3) When the Treasurer leaves the chair in accordance with subsection (2), the bencher appointed as chair of the committee of the whole shall take the chair whereupon Convocation resolves itself into a meeting of the benchers as a committee of the whole.

Rules of procedure

(4) Section 24 of the Act and subsection 84 (1) and sections 86 to 105 of this By-Law apply with necessary modifications to proceedings of a committee of the whole.

Treasurer resumes chair

(5) When a committee of the whole has completed its proceedings,

(a) if the Treasurer had appointed a bencher as chair of the committee, the chair of the committee shall leave the chair and the Treasurer shall then resume the chair; and

(b) Convocation shall resume as such.

Report to meeting

(6) When Convocation resumes after the benchers present at Convocation have met as a committee of the whole, the Treasurer or the chair of the committee may report to Convocation on the proceedings of the committee.

7. Guidelines for professional competence applicable to persons licensed to provide legal services in Ontario.

8. The provision of legal services through professional corporations.

9. The provision of information to the Society, and the filing of certificates, reports and other documents, relating to the Society's functions under the Act, by persons licensed to provide legal services in Ontario.

10. The election of five persons who are licensed to provide legal services in Ontario as benchers.

11. The appointment of the chair of the Committee.

CHAIR

Definitions

130.1. In sections 130.2 to 130.12,

“Elections Officer” means the person who is assigned by the Chief Executive Officer the responsibility of administering and enforcing the provisions of those sections;

“member” means member of the Committee.

Appointment of chair

130.2. Immediately after it elects a chair in accordance with sections 130.3 to 130.12, the Committee shall appoint the member elected as its chair.

Day of the election of chair

130.3. (1) There shall be an election of chair by the Committee,

(a) on the day of the first regular meeting of the Committee in September after an election of benchers licensed to provide legal services under Part I.1 of this By-Law; and

(b) on every anniversary of the day mentioned in clause (a), until the next election of benchers licensed to provide legal services under Part I.1 of this By-Law.

Election as first matter of business

(2) The election of chair shall be the first matter of business for the Committee on the day of the election of chair.

Elections Officer

130.4. The election of chair shall be conducted by the Elections Officer.

Who may be candidate

130.5. (1) A person may be a candidate in the election of chair if the person meets all of the following requirements:

1. The person was elected as bencher licensed to provide legal services in Ontario under Part I.1 of this By-Law and took office as a member pursuant to this Part.
2. The person is nominated by at least one member in accordance with subsection (2).
3. The person consents to the nomination.

Nomination requirements

(2) The nomination of a person as a candidate in the election of chair must,

- (a) be in writing;
- (b) be signed by the person being nominated, to indicate their consent to the nomination;
- (c) be signed by the member or members of the Committee nominating the person as a candidate; and
- (d) be submitted to the Elections Officer by the time specified by the Elections Officer.

Election by acclamation

130.6. If after the time specified by the Elections Officer for the submission of nominations there is only one candidate in the election of chair, that candidate shall be elected as chair.

Poll: election of chair

130.7. If after the time specified by the Elections Officer for the submission of nominations there are two or more candidates in the election of chair, a poll shall be conducted to elect the chair.

Elections Officer to establish procedures

130.8. For a poll required under sections 130.7 and 130.12, the Elections Officer shall establish the procedures by which a member may vote that shall be,

- (a) such that the anonymity of a member and the secrecy of the member's votes are preserved; and
- (b) published for members prior to the opening of the poll.

Right to vote

130.9. (1) Every person who is a member on the day of the election of chair is entitled to vote on any ballot in a poll required under section 130.7 or subsection 130.12 (1) if the member is in attendance at the meeting of the Committee at the time of the ballot.

Casting vote

(2) A member of the Committee shall cast their vote in a poll required under section 130.7 or subsection 130.12 (1) in accordance with the procedures established by the Elections Officer under section 130.8.

Vote for one candidate only

130.10. (1) Each member voting on a ballot in a poll required under section 130.7 shall vote for one candidate only.

Counting votes

(2) After all members entitled to vote on any ballot in a poll required under section 130.7 have voted or declined to vote, the Elections Officer shall cause the votes cast for each candidate to be counted.

Chair elected by majority

(3) The chair shall be elected by a majority of votes cast.

No majority

(4) If no candidate receives a majority of votes cast on the first ballot in a poll required under section 130.7, subject to section 130.11, a second ballot shall be conducted to elect the chair.

Second ballot required

(5) If a second ballot is required under subsection (4), the candidate on the previous ballot who received the least number of votes shall be removed as a candidate in the election of chair.

Application of subs. (4) and (5) to second and further ballots

(6) Subsections (4) and (5) apply to the second ballot and, with necessary modifications, any further ballots in the election of chair.

Casting tie-breaking vote

130.11. If at any time an equal number of votes is cast for two candidates when there are not more than two candidates on the ballot and an additional vote would entitle one of the candidates to be elected as chair, the vice-chair of the Committee shall, in full view of the Elections Officer, randomly select one of the candidates and cast an additional vote for that candidate.

Poll to select candidate or candidates to remain in election

130.12. (1) If an equal number of votes is cast for two or more candidates on any ballot in a poll required under section 130.7 and an additional vote for one or more but not all of them would entitle one or more of them to remain in the election of chair, a poll shall be conducted to select the candidate or candidates to remain in the election.

Vote for candidate or candidates to remain in election

(2) A member voting on a ballot in a poll required under subsection (1) shall vote for the candidate or candidates, but not for all the candidates, whom the member wishes to remain in the election of chair.

Counting votes

(3) After all members voting on a ballot in a poll required under subsection (1) have voted or declined to vote on a ballot, the Elections Officer shall cause the votes cast for each candidate to be counted.

Removal of candidate

(4) The candidate who receives the least number of votes in a poll required under subsection (1) shall be removed as a candidate in the election of chair.

Further polls

(5) If two or more candidates in a poll required under subsection (1) each receive the least and the same number of votes, additional polls shall be conducted with the names of those candidates listed on the ballot until only one candidate from all the candidates included in the initial poll conducted under this section is removed as a candidate in the election of chair.

Application of subs. (2), (3) and (4)

(6) Subsections (2), (3) and (4) apply, with necessary modifications, to a further poll required under subsection (5).

Taking office

130.13. (1) A person appointed as chair shall take office immediately after their appointment and shall remain in office until their successor takes office.

Ceasing to be chair

(2) Despite subsection (1), a person ceases to be the chair of the Committee if the person ceases to be an elected benchers licensed to provide legal services in Ontario.

Vacancy in office

(3) If the chair resigns, is removed from office or for any reason is unable to act during their term in office, or if there is for any other reason a vacancy in the office of chair of the Committee other than in the period between the completion of an election of benchers under Part I.1 of this By-Law and the first regular meeting of Convocation in September, the Committee shall appoint a new chair whom it elects as soon as is practicable.

Application of provisions

(4) Sections 130.1, 130.2 and sections 130.4 to 130.12 apply to the appointment and election of chair under subsection (3), except that in the application of section 130.2, the reference to “sections 130.3 to 130.12” shall be read as a reference to “sections 130.4 to 130.12”.

Acting chair

(5) If the chair of the Committee for any reason is temporarily unable to perform the duties or exercise the powers of the chair during their term in office, or if there is a vacancy in the office of the chair of the Committee other than in the period between the completion of an election of benchers under Part I.1 of this By-Law and the first regular meeting of Convocation in September, the vice-chair shall perform the duties and exercise the powers of the chair until,

- (a) the chair is able to perform the duties or exercise the powers of the chair; or
- (b) a new chair is appointed under subsection (3).

Acting chair: election year

(6) If there is a vacancy in the office of chair of the Committee in the period between the completion of an election of benchers under Part I.1 of this By-Law and the first regular meeting of Convocation in September, the vice-chair shall perform the duties and exercise the powers of the chair until a new chair is appointed under section 130.2.

VICE-CHAIR

Appointment by Convocation

130.14. (1) Convocation shall appoint as vice-chair of the Committee a member of the Committee who is,

(a) an elected bencher who is licensed to practise law in Ontario as a barrister and solicitor; or

(b) a lay bencher.

Term of office

(2) A person appointed as vice-chair of the Committee shall take office immediately after his or her appointment and shall remain in office until his or her successor takes office.

Appointment at pleasure

(3) Despite subsection (2), the vice-chair of the Committee holds office at the pleasure of Convocation.

Vacancy

(4) If there is a vacancy in the office of vice-chair or the vice-chair of the Committee for any reason is unable to act, the Treasurer may appoint as vice-chair of the Committee another member who is,

(a) an elected bencher who is licensed to practise law in Ontario as a barrister and solicitor; or

(b) a lay bencher.

Appointment by Treasurer subject to ratification

(5) The appointment of a member of the Committee as vice-chair of the Committee under subsection (4) is subject to ratification by Convocation at its first regular meeting following the appointment.

OPERATION OF COMMITTEE

Term of office of Committee members appointed by Convocation

131. (1) Subject to subsection (2), a person who is appointed as a member of the Committee by Convocation shall continue to be a member of the Committee until his or her successor is appointed.

Removal from Committee

(2) Convocation may remove from the Committee any person that it has appointed as a member of the Committee if the person fails to attend three consecutive meetings of the Committee.

Term of office of Committee members who are paralegal benchers

(3) The five benchers elected in an election of benchers under Part I.1 of this By-law shall take office as members of the Committee at the first regular meeting of the Committee following the election and, subject to any by-law that provides for the removal of benchers from Convocation, shall remain in office until their successors take office.

Quorum

132. Four members of the Committee constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Meetings by telephone conference call, etc.

133. The Committee may meet to transact business by means of such telephone, electronic or other communication facilities as permit all persons participating in the meeting to communicate with each other instantaneously and simultaneously.

Right to attend meeting

134. (1) Subject to subsection (2), no person other than a member of the Committee may attend a meeting of the Committee.

Same

(2) The following persons who are not members of the Committee may attend a meeting of the Committee:

1. A bencher.
2. An officer or employee of the Society.
3. A person not mentioned in paragraph 1 or 2 with the permission of the Committee.

Voting rights

135. Only members of the Committee may vote at meetings of the Committee.

GENERAL

Non-application of Part VI

136. The provisions of Part VI do not apply with respect to the Committee.

PART VIII

COMMENCEMENT

Commencement of Part VI

137. Part VI comes into force on May 25, 2007.

3. That Convocation approve the following process for the Priority Planning Committee to use to move forward on the priorities Convocation sets:

- a. the Committee will review the priorities as determined by Convocation;
- b. the Committee will consult extensively with staff responsible for the day-to-day management of the priority areas identified and with benchers who deal with the priority areas in the committees on which they serve;
- c. the Committee will establish goals to be achieved within each of the priority areas for Convocation's consideration; and
- d. the Committee will develop concrete recommendations for the achievement of the goals for Convocation's consideration during the first half of 2008.

Introduction and Background

4. In March 2007, Convocation approved the following recommendations of the Governance Task Force with respect to prioritizing and planning Convocation's policy agenda:
  - a. Convocation shall institute a full review of Convocation's priorities for achieving strategic objectives for the Law Society, to be held at a meeting of benchers soon after each bencher election and as appropriate during the bencher term; and
  - b. Convocation shall establish a standing committee called the Priority Planning Committee to assist Convocation in planning its priorities. In particular,
    - i. The Treasurer shall recommend members of the Committee for Convocation's approval, in accordance with the By-Laws;
    - ii. Convocation shall appoint the chair and any vice-chairs of the Committee, in accordance with the By-Laws;
    - iii. In addition to the bencher members of the Committee, the Chief Executive Officer shall be a non-voting member of the Committee;
    - iv. The mandate of the Committee is to
      - A. recommend for Convocation's consideration and approval the priorities for policy objectives and submit those recommendations to Convocation in the process described in a. above,
      - B. periodically review the priorities previously established by Convocation, and new policy issues that may arise, and recommend to Convocation on an ongoing basis the priorities to be considered and approved by Convocation in the future, and
      - C. report annually to Convocation on the status of Convocation's priorities.

5. The Priority Planning Committee met over the summer to organize the Planning Session that was held in Huntsville on September 23 – 25, 2007. In advance of the Planning Session, a survey was sent to all (73) benchers – elected, appointed, paralegal and ex officio. The survey sought the views of benchers on the mandate of the Law Society, and the priorities the Law Society should focus on. Fifteen benchers responded – 13 elected benchers, one life bencher and one response was sent anonymously.

6. At the Planning Session, benchers identified nine priority areas that the Law Society should focus on for the next four years. The nine priority areas identified are as follows:
  - Discipline
  - Access to justice

- Regulation of paralegals
- Small firms and sole practitioners
- Governance structure
- Strategic communications
- Maintenance of high standards and ensuring effective competence
- Diversity within the profession
- Licensing and accreditation

Priority Setting

7. At its meeting on October 23, 2007, the Committee reviewed the nine priority areas and discussed a process for moving forward.
8. The Bencher Planning Session was an excellent opportunity for benchers to discuss the important issues facing the Law Society, and to articulate what the most important issues are that the Law Society should focus on for the next four years. Priority setting, however, is the responsibility of Convocation. For this reason, the Committee is of the view that Convocation must determine whether the priorities identified at the Planning Session are Convocation's priorities.

Next Steps

9. Once Convocation determines the priorities, the Committee proposes the following process to move the priorities forward within the 2007 – 2011 bencher term:
  - a. the Committee will review the priorities as determined by Convocation;
  - b. the Committee will consult extensively with staff responsible for the day-to-day management of the priority areas identified and with benchers who deal with the priority areas in the committees on which they serve;
  - c. the Committee will establish goals to be achieved within each of the priority areas for Convocation's consideration; and
  - d. the Committee will develop concrete recommendations for the achievement of the goals for Convocation's consideration during the first half of 2008.

10. The Committee does not expect that every priority will require significant study or change. Convocation already has initiatives underway with respect to some of the priorities it sets.
11. Similarly, the Committee recognizes that benchers may identify areas or issues as priorities for a variety of reasons. The identification of a priority does not necessarily signal that the area requires improvement. It may be an acknowledgement that the area is a core function of the Law Society and must remain an important focus of the organization for the next four years.
12. The Committee will report its findings and recommendations to Convocation during the first half of 2008.

COMMITTEE PROCESS

1. Following the Bencher Planning Session held in Hockley Valley from September 25 – 27, 2011, the Committee met on October 26 and November 23, 2011. In attendance on October 26 were Laurie Pawlitza (Treasurer and Chair), Marion Boyd, Christopher Bredt, Thomas Conway, Michelle Haigh, Carol Hartman, Janet Minor (by telephone) and Julian Porter. In attendance on November 23 were Laurie Pawlitza (Treasurer and Chair), Marion Boyd (by telephone), Christopher Bredt, Thomas Conway, Janet Minor, Julian Porter and Paul Schabas. Malcolm Heins, Jim Varro and Sheena Weir also attended both meetings.

FOR DECISION*CONVOCATION'S PRIORITY PLANNING – NEXT STEPS*MOTION

- 2. That Convocation:
  - a. approve the six priorities set out at paragraph 15 of this Report as Convocation's priorities for the next four years; and
  - b. affirm that effective communication and outreach and Convocation governance effectiveness are ongoing objectives that must be diligently pursued to enhance the Law Society's effectiveness as a regulator.

- 3. That Convocation affirm the following process for the Priority Planning Committee to use to move forward on the priorities Convocation sets:
  - a. the Committee will review the priorities as determined by Convocation;
  - b. the Committee will consult extensively with staff responsible for the day-to-day management of the priority areas identified and with benchers and elected paralegals who deal with the priority areas in the committees on which they serve;
  - c. the Committee will establish workplans in consultation with the Chief Executive Officer and senior managers and identify goals to be achieved within each of the priority areas for Convocation's consideration; and
  - d. the Committee will develop concrete recommendations for the achievement of the goals for Convocation's consideration during the first half of 2012.

INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

4. In March 2007, Convocation approved the following recommendations of the Governance Task Force with respect to prioritizing and planning Convocation's policy agenda:

- a. Convocation shall institute a full review of Convocation's priorities for achieving strategic objectives for the Law Society, to be held at a meeting of benchers soon after each bencher election and as appropriate during the bencher term; and
  - b. Convocation shall establish a standing committee called the Priority Planning Committee to assist Convocation in planning its priorities. In particular,
    - i. The Treasurer shall recommend members of the Committee for Convocation's approval, in accordance with the By-Laws;
    - ii. Convocation shall appoint the chair and any vice-chairs of the Committee, in accordance with the By-Laws;
    - iii. In addition to the bencher members of the Committee, the Chief Executive Officer shall be a non-voting member of the Committee;
    - iv. The mandate of the Committee is to
      - A. recommend for Convocation's consideration and approval the priorities for policy objectives and submit those recommendations to Convocation in the process described in a. above,
      - B. periodically review the priorities previously established by Convocation, and new policy issues that may arise, and recommend to Convocation on an ongoing basis the priorities to be considered and approved by Convocation in the future, and
      - C. report annually to Convocation on the status of Convocation's priorities.
5. This past spring and summer, the Priority Planning Committee ("the Committee"), in consultation with the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and the Director, Policy and Tribunals, organized the Bencher Planning Session ("the Session") that was held in Hockley Valley on September 25 – 27, 2011.
  6. In advance of the Session, a survey was sent to all benchers – elected, appointed, paralegal and ex officio – and to the three paralegal members of the Paralegal Standing Committee. The survey sought views on the mandate of the Law Society and the priorities on which the Law Society should focus. Thirty-six people responded – 26 elected benchers, one appointed bencher, four paralegal benchers/paralegals and five ex officio benchers.
  7. At one of its summer meetings, the Committee also received information through the CEO about an issue that was the subject of review at the operational level. The issue related to business structures for the delivery of legal services. The Committee acknowledged that this issue should be included in the priority planning process.

8. At the Session, attendees identified five priority areas and focused on two other priority areas linked to the effectiveness with which the Law Society carries out its mandate.

These seven areas are:

- Access to Justice
- Competency and professional standards
- Equity, diversity and retention
- Support and mentoring for members
- Effective communication and outreach
- Convocation governance effectiveness
- Tribunals issues

PRIORITY SETTING

9. The Session gave benchers and elected paralegals an excellent opportunity to discuss the important issues facing the Law Society, including the environmental context in which they exist, and to articulate what the most important issues are that the Law Society should focus on for the next four years.
10. At its meetings on October 26 and November 23, 2011, the Committee reviewed and discussed the seven priority areas. It also considered the process to be applied in defining the scope of the priorities, determining the work that must be done and moving forward to implementation.
11. The Committee recognizes that priority setting is Convocation's responsibility and for this reason, the Committee believes that Convocation must determine whether the priorities identified are Convocation's priorities. In this respect, the Committee's responsibilities include presenting the information on priorities in a rational, understandable way for Convocation's decision.

12. In preparing the information in this report, the Committee understands that every priority or every aspect of a priority may not require significant study or change. Convocation already has initiatives underway with respect to some of the priorities it has previously set that relate to those identified during the Session.
13. Similarly, the Committee recognizes that benchers may identify areas or issues as priorities for a variety of reasons. The identification of a priority does not necessarily signal that the area requires improvement. It may be an acknowledgement that the area is a core function of the Law Society and must remain an important focus of the organization for the next four years.

DEFINING THE PRIORITIES

14. In considering the list of priority areas resulting from the Session and information provided to the Committee this past summer, the Committee took the following approach:
  - a. The nature and scope of the priority areas were examined to determine if the list could be rationalized to minimize overlap and create cohesion, and whether other priorities logically flowing from the identified issues should be highlighted for priority planning;
  - b. The priority areas relating to processes, such as communications and Convocation governance effectiveness, were examined to determine if they could be accepted as ongoing objectives that transcend identification as specific priorities for the bencher term; and
  - c. The process for monitoring the progress on a priority was discussed in terms of the need for measurable accountabilities and thresholds.
15. Based on this approach as applied to the issues identified at the Session, the Committee determined that the following, which as between them are not prioritized, represent the priorities that Convocation should consider for approval.

Priorities Resulting from the Session

1. ACCESS TO JUSTICE

The Law Society in regulating the legal profession is mandated by the governing legislation to act so as to facilitate access to justice for the people of Ontario. Access to justice generally and access as it relates to family law issues are two aspects of this priority. Addressing this priority will include review and consideration of:

- a. The Law Society's role, including resources, information/communications and leadership;
- b. Facilitating access to legal and administrative services, including publicly-accessible information, legal referral services, legal aid, alternative dispute resolution, legal expense insurance and pro bono services, including limited scope retainers;
- c. Licensing options as a means to increase access to justice; and
- d. Court and procedural reforms.

2. COMPETENCE AND PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS

Competence and professional standards are the foundations of the Law Society's regulatory authority. Ongoing review of competency and standards is necessary for the Law Society to fulfill its regulatory responsibilities in a changing legal landscape. As a core objective of the Law Society, the focus on competence extends to various forms of support to licensees with the end goal of ensuring and maintaining competence within the professions. This effort is both prophylactic and remedial. Addressing this priority will include review and consideration of:

- a. Entry level competencies;
- b. Competence in the early years of practice;
- c. Competencies by areas of practice;
- d. Licensing options as a means to promote competence;
- e. Measurable and enforceable practice standards;
- f. Mentoring and support for licensees, including mentoring programs, advisory

- services and practice supports;
- g. Technological applications for learning, assessment and assistance; and
- h. National standards.

3. EQUITY, DIVERSITY AND RETENTION

The Law Society promotes equity and diversity and seeks to integrate these values and principles in the professions. Through Equity Initiatives, it creates model policies, services, programs and procedures and thus is a resource for members of the public and the professions. The Law Society is a leader in the profession in this respect and is committed to continuing this important work. Addressing this priority will include review and consideration of:

- a. Processes and initiatives to ensure that equity principles are observed and promoted;
- b. The development of programs for other equity-seeking groups, using the Justicia model as a means to facilitate these initiatives; and
- c. Communications strategies for promoting equity and diversity.

4. TRIBUNAL ISSUES

The Law Society's primary responsibility as regulator of Ontario's lawyers and paralegals is public protection. Central to the responsibility to protect the public is a hearing process that is fair, transparent and efficient. As hearings become more complex and the number of cases increases, steps need to be taken to enhance the way in which the Law Society delivers its regulatory mandate at the tribunal level. Addressing this priority will include review and consideration of:

- a. Adjudicator training;
- b. Quality of adjudication;
- c. Use of technology in the hearing process;
- d. Enhancements to procedures and processes to improve effectiveness and efficiency; and
- e. The appropriate model for the hearing process.

As reported to Convocation in October 2011, the Tribunals Committee has created working groups that are developing policy options for consideration by the Committee, and through the Committee for Convocation's consideration, on issues related to the hearings process. The issues identified above will logically flow into these initiatives.

Other Identified Priorities

5. BUSINESS STRUCTURES / LAW FIRM FINANCING

Since the mid-1990s, the Law Society has studied developments in the structures available to lawyers for delivering legal services. It has implemented regulatory schemes for professional corporations, MDPs and LLPs. These are in addition to the "traditional" partnership and sole practice vehicles for legal services. The Law Society also reviewed the feasibility of other structures, such as publicly-traded law firms, in 2005. The thinking globally on alternative legal services structures has been anything but static, and changes have occurred in other jurisdictions that may impact the Canadian legal marketplace. As a regulator, the Law Society needs to consider the implications, and should prioritize its review. As noted earlier, an initial review at the staff level has begun. The issues include:

- a. How to structure a regulatory scheme that may involve new methods of oversight to permit a more flexible delivery regime and alternate business structures;
- b. How licensees maintain independence and other core principles within new business structures;
- c. Ensuring competence, quality of work and value to the client;
- d. Transparency and the client's understanding of who is providing the legal services and addressing possible conflicts of interest in alternate delivery models;
- e. Balancing more accessible legal services potentially at a lower cost with accountabilities that maintain robust and meaningful regulation; and
- f. Financing of law firms and alternate business structures.

6. PROFESSIONAL REGULATION

Two of the priority areas noted above are related to the professional regulation process for investigation of complaints and discipline. Competence and professional standards intersects with the scope of regulation. The tribunals process is impacted by what occurs earlier in the regulatory process that leads to disciplinary action. These overlapping issues should be considered collectively rather than in isolation, and compel a holistic approach to priority review and planning. Issues relevant to professional regulation in this context include:

- a. Discipline diversion;
- b. Exploration of initiatives aimed at reducing the number of complaints arising from certain areas of legal practice;
- c. Expanding matters for which a single adjudicator hearing can be utilized;
- d. Exploring “paper” or document-based hearings (i.e. written hearings);
- e. Enhancing case management, including time limits, disclosure obligations and issue identification as it relates to the hearing process;
- f. Area-specific regulation, flowing from defining, establishing and enforcing practice standards in specific areas of law.

Ongoing Obligations – Convocation Governance Effectiveness and Effective Communications

16. The Committee proposes that the issues relating to Convocation governance effectiveness and effective communications and outreach be considered ongoing objectives that the Law Society must diligently pursue as a matter of course. The Committee believes that the Law Society’s effectiveness as a regulator is directly linked to the efficacy of its processes and procedures, to its ability to evaluate the outcomes of its programs and to the scope and integrity of its communications.

Next Steps

17. Once Convocation determines the priorities, the Committee plans to follow the process below to move the priorities forward within the 2011 – 2015 bench term:

- a. the Committee will review the priorities as determined by Convocation;
  - b. the Committee will consult extensively with staff responsible for the day-to-day management of the priority areas identified and with benchers and elected paralegals, as the case may be, who deal with the priority areas in the committees on which they serve;
  - c. the Committee will establish work plans in consultation with the CEO and senior managers and identify goals to be achieved within each of the priority areas for Convocation's consideration; and
  - d. the Committee will develop concrete recommendations for the achievement of the goals for Convocation's consideration during the first half of 2012.
18. The process outlined in paragraph 17.b. has already begun. At its October 26 meeting, the Committee received from the CEO an outline of an initial assessment of the priorities based on information from senior management in the Law Society's operations.
19. The Committee will report its findings and recommendations to Convocation during the first half of 2012.

FOR DECISION*CHALLENGES FACED BY RACIALIZED LICENSEES WORKING GROUP CONSULTATION RECOMMENDATION*MOTION

2. That Convocation approve the consultation proposed by the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group outlined in this report.

Rationale

3. From October 2012 to date, the Law Society conducted a formal and informal engagement process and a survey with the profession to identify the challenges faced by racialized licensees. The Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group ("RWG") considered the results of the engagement process and developed a Consultation Paper, based on the identified challenges and barriers faced by racialized licensees. The Consultation Paper includes questions to the profession about how best to address the barriers. The Consultation Paper appears at TABS 6.1.1 and 6.1.2 in English and French.
4. On October 1, 2014, the Chair and Vice-Chairs of the RWG met with members of the Equity Advisory Group, community liaisons involved in this project and the boards of the Canadian Association of Black Lawyers ("CABL"), the Canadian Association of South Asian Lawyers ("CASAL"), the Federation of Asian Canadian Lawyers ("FACL") and the South Asian Bar Association ("SABA"). They received very helpful and important feedback on the Consultation Paper and consultation methodology.
5. It is recommended that the Law Society consult broadly with the profession, including legal clinics, and members of the judiciary, the academy and the public to identify practical initiatives and solutions to address the challenges outlined in the Consultation Paper. Convocation is asked to approve the proposed consultation.

Key Issues and Considerations

6. This project is of considerable importance to the legal profession. Key equity partners have been consulted in the development of the Consultation Paper. It will be important to fully engage the profession, the judiciary, academics, legal clinics and the public in the consideration of solutions to the barriers faced by racialized licensees. As a result, the proposed consultation methodology aims at ensuring that there are multiple ways to participate in the consultation process. Also, webcasting the Toronto open house sessions will allow those who are unable to attend the meetings in person, to participate online. The RWG will also invite the participation of regional benchers, as leaders in their communities, when conducting focus groups and meetings.

Budgetary Considerations

7. It is anticipated that the consultation will be completed without the requirement for additional funds. The budget for this consultation will be covered by the Equity Initiatives Department and bencher expense budgets.

Stakeholder Management

8. As mentioned above, equity partners have been instrumental in the development of the Consultation Paper, and the Law Society surveyed the profession as a whole about the barriers faced by racialized licensees and potential solutions.
9. To ensure that the policy recommendations effectively address the challenges faced by racialized licensees, it will be important to engage the profession in the policy development process. It is anticipated that the Law Society will receive thoughtful submissions related to this project.

Key Background Information

10. In August 2012, Convocation created the RWG with a mandate to,
  - a. identify challenges faced by racialized licensees in different practice environments, including entry into practice and advancement;
  - b. identify factors and practice challenges faced by racialized licensees that could increase the risk of regulatory complaints and discipline;
  - c. consider best practices for preventive, remedial and/or support strategies;
  - d. if appropriate, design and develop preventative, remedial, enforcement, regulatory and/or support strategies, for consideration by the Equity Committee and other Committees as appropriate, to address the challenges described above.
11. From October 2012 on, the RWG met informally with a number of individuals and organizations to obtain viewpoints on challenges and best practices for racialized licensees and reviewed the literature available on this topic.
12. In early 2013, the RWG retained the services of Strategic Communications Inc. (Stratcom) and Michael Charles of Change DeZign© to formally engage the profession on this matter. This formal engagement process included key informant interviews, focus groups and a survey. Stratcom and Change DeZign© provided their final report to the Law Society in March 2014.

13. The RWG also engaged in a parallel process, the Community Liaison Process, to garner information from racialized licensees who may not have come forward during the formal engagement process.

The Consultation Paper and the Consultation Methodology

14. Based on the findings of the informal and formal engagement process, the RWG drafted a Consultation Paper for the profession's feedback. In October 2014, the RWG also consulted with members of the Equity Advisory Group, the Community Liaisons, CABL, CASAL, FACL and SABA and received very helpful and important feedback on the Consultation Paper and consultation methodology.
15. Based on the advice received, the RWG proposes to consult lawyers, paralegals, academics, members of the judiciary and the public by using the following methodology:
  - a. Posting the Consultation Paper online and inviting written submissions from the profession, the judiciary, academia and the public;
  - b. Holding meetings where there is a strong representation of racialized licensees. It is anticipated that the meetings would be held in Toronto and surrounding areas such as Hamilton, Brampton, Mississauga, Scarborough, Markham and Oshawa. Some RWG members would also travel to Ottawa, Windsor, London and to Northern regions such as Thunder Bay and Sudbury.
  - c. Holding open house meetings in Toronto. Such meetings would be held at the Law Society and webcast. It is anticipated that two open house meetings will be held.
  - d. Meeting with associations such as the County and District Law Presidents' Association, the Ontario Bar Association, CABL, SABA, CASAL, FACL and the Arab Canadian Lawyers Association. Members of the judiciary and academia would also be included along with associations representing members of the public.
16. The Consultation Paper will be posted in French and English online on October 30, 2014 with a deadline for written submissions of March 1, 2015. Meetings with the profession will be scheduled from November to the end of February 2015.
17. The Equity and Aboriginal Issues Committee approved the consultation methodology and Consultation Paper by consensus.
18. The Committee recommends that Convocation approve the proposed consultation as outlined in this report.
19. A power point presentation prepared by the RWG is also presented at TAB 6.1.3.

REQUEST FOR INPUT FROM THE PROFESSION

CHALLENGES FACED BY RACIALIZED LICENSEES CONSULTATION PAPER

As part of its commitment to promoting equity and diversity in the profession, the Law Society created in 2012 the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group.

The Working Group has studied the challenges faced by racialized licensees (lawyers and paralegals) in Ontario and is consulting on strategies for enhanced inclusion at all career stages.

All interested parties are encouraged to review this consultation paper and to comment on the paper as a whole and on any question raised. We invite suggestions and practical solutions to the issues. We welcome proposals for solutions not identified in this paper.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

"We all should know that diversity makes for a rich tapestry, and we must understand that all the threads of the tapestry are equal in value no matter what their color."

Maya Angelou

The Law Society is committed to promoting a profession that is reflective of all peoples of Ontario and that is inclusive and free from discrimination and harassment. The Law Society is also dedicated to facilitating access to justice, as evidenced by the Law Society's recent adoption of a new comprehensive access to justice framework.<sup>1</sup>

This consultation paper is designed to engage the profession in the consideration of strategies to address the challenges faced by racialized licensees.<sup>2</sup> The profession, legal organizations, firms, law schools and any others interested in the issues discussed in this consultation paper are encouraged to provide written comments. The Working Group will consider all of the submissions and prepare a final report with recommendations for Convocation's consideration. The final report will be accompanied by a detailed implementation plan.

Background

Ontario's legal profession has witnessed a steady increase in the number of racialized lawyers over the last 20 years. Despite this increase, evidence based on statistical data, research results and anecdotal evidence suggests that racialized lawyers continue to face challenges in the practice of law. Very little is known about the challenges faced by racialized paralegals. The public benefits from a strong and diverse bar; this study suggests there are some continued barriers to realizing the fullest capacity for excellence among our bar.

To explore and address this issue, Convocation created The Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group (the Working Group) in August 2012, with a mandate to,

- a. identify challenges faced by racialized licensees in different practice environments, including entry into practice and advancement;
- b. identify factors and practice challenges faced by racialized licensees that could increase the risk of regulatory complaints and discipline;
- c. consider best practices for preventive, remedial and/or support strategies;
- d. if appropriate, design and develop preventative, remedial, enforcement, regulatory and/or support strategies, for consideration by the Equity Committee and other Committees, to address the challenges described above.

Beginning in October 2012, the Working Group undertook a broad-based study which included reviewing available data and literature, meeting with individuals and organizations, and co-ordinating focus groups led by prominent legal professionals.

In 2013, the group launched a formal engagement process which included key informant interviews, focus groups and a survey of the profession as a whole.

Information obtained to date suggests that racialization is a constant and persistent factor affecting licensees during entry into practice and opportunities for career advancement. Racialization intersects with a wide variety of other factors, including language or accent, differences of professional status between lawyers and paralegals and whether licensees are internationally trained.

The intersection of these and other factors such as gender, gender identity, gender expression age, sexual orientation, disability and geographic location, provide a complex pattern of experiences and impacts associated with the challenges of racialization.

Summary of Engagement Results

The Working Group used several methodologies to gather information and found that common themes related to participants' experiences emerged. The engagement process revealed that overt discrimination and bias are a feature of daily life for many racialized licensees.

Participants offered examples of discriminatory behaviours, interactions, language and assumptions that are common features of their everyday professional experiences.

Some participants felt that racialized licensees are often not offered the same opportunities for advancement. They also described feeling alienated from the dominant culture of the legal profession.

Some also noted that racialized licensees have much to gain from mentoring but are often unaware of available programs or do not have access to them. They also said that many racialized licensees lack a strong network of legal professionals, mentors or sponsors who can provide guidance and advocate for them in the workplace.

A number of participants also said they felt they had been forced to enter sole practice because of barriers they faced in advancing in other practice environments — and some felt ill-equipped and unprepared for the realities of sole practice.

In addition to the aforementioned barriers, participants stated that internationally trained lawyers often face a combination of disadvantages, such as few professional network opportunities; language challenges; a different culture from that of their colleagues; lack of critical transition from law school to a first professional position in Ontario; and lack of mentors and contacts.

According to participants, racialized paralegals also face additional challenges, particularly in the job market. As a group, paralegals reported lower success rates in finding suitable employment, compared to racialized lawyers.

Questions for the Profession

The Working Group has considered the results and has identified a number of detailed questions for the profession to consider. These questions focus on the following issues:

- Enhancing the internal capacity of organizations – establishing diversity within firms, collecting demographic data, and developing model contract compliance programs
- Mentoring and Networking – identifying preferred models and best practices
- Enhancing cultural competence of the profession – providing accredited CPD programs
- Discrimination and the role of the complaints process – effectively addressing complaints of discrimination
- The operations of the Law Society of Upper Canada – enhancing the equity compliance program, conducting an internal equity audit and developing a more diverse public face/image for the Law Society

For the complete set of questions, see Appendix 2.

THE CONSULTATION PAPER

BACKGROUND

In the last two decades, the Ontario legal profession has seen a steady increase of racialized lawyers<sup>3</sup>, representing 9.2% of the legal profession in 2001 and 11.5% in 2006.<sup>4</sup> The Law Society's Statistical Snapshots of Lawyers and Paralegals showed that by 2010, 17% of lawyers and 28% of paralegals were racialized.<sup>5</sup> This compares to 23% of the Ontario population who indicated in the 2006 Canada Census that they are racialized and the 25.9% of the Ontario population who indicated in the 2011 National Household Survey that they are racialized.<sup>6</sup>

Research results and anecdotal evidence gathered prior to the creation of the Challenges Faced by Racialized Working Group suggested that despite this increase, racialized lawyers still face challenges in the practice of law. Also, very little was known about the challenges faced, if any, by racialized paralegals in the profession.

As a result, in August 2012, Convocation created the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group (the Working Group) to,

- a. identify challenges faced by racialized licensees in different practice environments, including entry into practice and advancement;
- b. identify factors and practice challenges faced by racialized licensees that could increase the risk of regulatory complaints and discipline;
- c. consider best practices for preventive, remedial and/or support strategies;

From October 2012 on, the Working Group undertook the following activities and developed the following reports available online:

- a. Conducted a review of the data and literature available on this topic – report entitled Law Society Scan and Best-Practices.
- b. Met informally with a number of individuals and organizations to obtain viewpoints on challenges and best-practices for racialized licensees – report entitled Results from Informal Engagement (“Informal Engagement Report”).
- c. Received valuable input from a working group of the Law Society’s Equity Advisory Group (EAG Working Group).<sup>7</sup> The EAG Working Group identified challenges faced by racialized licensees and suggested options to address these challenges – report entitled Submissions of the Equity Advisory Group.
- d. Retained the services of Strategic Communications Inc. (Stratcom) and Michael Charles of Change DeZign© to formally engage with the profession. This engagement included 20 key informant interviews, 14 focus groups with racialized licensees, two focus groups with non-racialized licensees and a 35-question survey conducted with the profession (lawyers and paralegals) as a whole. The consultants provided their report to the Law Society in March 2014 – report entitled Challenges Facing Racialized Licensees Final Report (The “Stratcom report”).
- e. Created a parallel engagement process — the community liaison process — to gather information from racialized licensees who may not have come forward during the formal Stratcom engagement process. Prominent and experienced legal professionals from various racialized communities acted as liaisons and held focus groups with the community – report entitled Community Liaison Report to the Challenges Faced by Racialized Working Group (“Community Liaison Report”).
- f. Compiled self-identification data based on firm size and other characteristics, presented at Appendix 1.
- g. Began an analysis of available Law Society data related to the regulatory process. Included in that analysis will be consideration of whether additional or better data or information should be obtained.

Information obtained to date suggests that racialization is a constant and persistent factor affecting licensees during entry into practice and opportunities for career advancement. A majority of participants in the Stratcom engagement process — both racialized and non-racialized — agreed that the challenges faced by racialized licensees

The Working Group will consider all of the submissions and prepare a final report with recommendations that will be brought to Convocation.

THE ENGAGEMENT PROCESS RESULTS

Although the Working Group used multiple methodologies to gather information about the challenges faced by racialized licensees, the experiences of participants in the informal engagement with licensees and legal associations (“the informal engagement”) and of participants in the community liaison process echoed the experiences of participants in Stratcom’s formal engagement.

Numerous participants depicted a landscape in which racialization is a “consistent and persistent factor” affecting racialized licensees across their careers.<sup>9</sup>

The following challenges emerged:

- a. Discrimination and stereotypes;
- b. Cultural differences and fit;
- c. Lack of mentoring, sponsors, role models and networking opportunities;
- d. Intersecting factors and increased vulnerability;
- e. Race as a factor in entering sole practice;
- f. Barriers to entry into the profession;
- g. Barriers faced in advancing in the profession;
- h. Risk factors in entering the regulatory process;
- i. Additional barriers faced by internationally trained lawyers; and
- j. Additional barriers faced by paralegals.

Discrimination and Stereotypes

You work harder to prove yourself. You cannot necessarily do things that your White colleagues can do as there is a different connotation. Generally I have always been told that I have to work harder than my White counterparts, which in some respects is sadly still true in this day and age. I feel that certain lawyers do not give me certain files because of a preconceived notion about my skill set due to the colour of my skin.

Community Liaison Meeting

The engagement process allowed participants to share their experiences and a number of participants described discriminatory experiences that had serious impacts on their careers, including career opportunities and earnings. Some described experiences of overt discrimination, such as situations of being on the receiving end of racist jokes or racist comments and assumptions.<sup>10</sup>

A number of participants spoke of having to work against assumptions by legal professionals, clients, opposing counsel and members of the bench that racialized licensees are less competent, skilled and effective. They recounted incidents in which they were subjected to negative stereotypes, and made to work harder or suffer greater consequences for errors than their non-racialized colleagues.

Some also felt that they were not offered the same opportunities for advancement. For example, they spoke of not being brought in on certain files, not being asked to attend client meetings, not being invited to social gatherings with colleagues where files and assignments are discussed, and receiving lower quality of work. Some wondered if race was a factor in the more rapid advancement of non-racialized colleagues of comparable or less merit.<sup>11</sup>

Participants often felt they had to prove themselves to a greater extent than their non-racialized colleagues. They noted that they were often not perceived as credible and felt a lack of respect. A number of participants reported being mistaken for a student, an assistant, a social worker, or a client, instead of a lawyer or paralegal.

Almost half of racialized respondents<sup>12</sup> to the survey reported they had been expected to perform to a higher standard than others, due to racial stereotyping. Ethno-racial groups that named this factor more frequently than average included Black, Chinese, South East Asian, Arab, and South Asian respondents.<sup>13</sup>

Socioeconomic Cultural Differences and Fit

Firm culture is a huge factor on who gets interviewed and hired; both during on campus interviews and as first year associates. The analogy I always use is that you can't fit a square peg in a round hole. Bay Street is a particular culture and if you don't know how to pour your wine, it will be picked up, and as a result, the weaning process serves to exclude a disproportionate number of minority candidates.

Community Liaison Meeting

The concept of “fit” was also mentioned as a barrier for racialized licensees in hiring processes and within their practice. Participants were of the view that the concept of “fit” translated to being “non-racialized” and, consequently, racialized licensees were more likely to face challenges in finding positions and in career advancement.

Many participants described feeling alienated from the dominant culture. For example, some noted that social events centered on alcohol consumption made non-drinkers feel excluded. Other events such as playing golf, going to the cottage, and watching hockey were also identified as points of contact, interaction and social solidarity for non-racialized colleagues, while reinforcing feelings of isolation and “otherness” for racialized licensees.<sup>14</sup>

The Stratcom survey also addressed this issue by asking about the impact of lifestyle and personal beliefs on entry and advancement in the profession. A higher proportion of racialized licensees, compared to non-racialized licensees, considered that their preferences in social activities<sup>15</sup> and their social or political views were barriers to entry into the profession<sup>16</sup> — and even more importantly, barriers to advancement.<sup>17</sup>

Survey respondents who most frequently identified the types of social activities that they prefer as a barrier to advancement were from the following communities: Chinese, Arab, South Asian and South East Asian.<sup>18</sup>

Lack of Mentoring, Sponsors, Role Models and Networking Opportunities

If we can't get good articles and the mentorship and guidance that goes with it, this impacts the quality of service we can provide as well as opportunities – not giving people the chance to be the best they can impacts our whole society.

Community Liaison Meeting

Many participants noted that racialized licensees have much to gain from mentoring but all too often are unaware of available programs or do not have access to them. They were also of the view that many racialized licensees lack a strong network of legal professionals, mentors or sponsors who can provide guidance and advocate for them in the workplace.

Some key informants noted that this lack of social connections can remain a barrier throughout a career if, for example, licensees begin their practice by building their client base within their own ethnic community where such networks are still sparse.<sup>19</sup>

The Stratcom survey results showed that a majority of racialized respondents believe that not having access to a network of professional contacts contributes to a career disadvantage.<sup>20</sup> A majority of racialized respondents said that not having the same cultural background as one's colleagues had disadvantaged their careers.<sup>21</sup>

The survey results also showed that a higher proportion of non-racialized<sup>22</sup> respondents, compared to racialized respondents<sup>23</sup>, find it relatively easy to get legal advice on client files from professional colleagues and mentors. Differences between the two groups were not as high on other statements. For example, a slightly higher percentage of non-racialized respondents agreed that mentors had played an important role in their career development.<sup>24</sup> A slightly higher percentage of racialized respondents indicated that social networks had played an important role in their career.<sup>25</sup>

The absence of professional networks, divergent cultural backgrounds and prejudice based on race were identified as the most important sources of career disadvantage for a majority of racialized survey respondents.

Among licensees more likely than average to name these factors as probable or definite sources of career disadvantage are women, sole practitioners, licensees whose first language is not French/English and those who are born outside Canada. Racialized groups more likely than average to name all three factors as probable or definite sources of career disadvantage are Black, South Asian, Chinese and Arab respondents.

Intersecting Factors and Increased Vulnerability

When you have an accent, you signal that you are not in this place. You won't understand the culture as everyone else. Those who succeed are very good at adapting to other clients. So that's where an accent automatically sets you apart as not from this place.

Many participants noted that racialization intersects with a wide variety of other factors including language or accent, differences of professional status between lawyers and paralegals and whether licensees are internationally-trained.<sup>26</sup> The intersection of these and other factors such as gender, gender identity, gender expression, age, sexual orientation, disability, and geographic location yields a complex and highly individuated pattern of experiences and impacts associated with the challenges of racialization.

Race and Gender

Being female and racialized can be complicated. Women are already struggling in this profession with issues of work/life balance, family commitments, maternity leave, etc. Women are still working to be taken seriously in this profession and being a racialized woman means that you often have even more to prove. It can cause stress, anxiety and may make racialized women work harder, push more and delay some of their personal goals for their work.

Community Liaison Process

The intersection of race and gender was particularly seen as multiplying the challenges for women. In an environment, described by some participants as a “boys’ club”, where extracurricular social activities are often also avenues to new work opportunities and advancement, many racialized women perceived themselves as doubly disadvantaged.<sup>27</sup>

The Stratcom survey addressed harassment and expectations due to gender stereotypes as factors contributing to career disadvantage. Although survey results indicated that racialized male licensees are not free from harassment or from gender-based stereotyping, a larger proportion of racialized women<sup>28</sup> viewed gender stereotyping as a factor contributing to their having been disadvantaged in hiring, advancement or pursuit of an area of practice.

Further gender differences were noted in the Stratcom survey as barriers to entry. For example, racialized and non-racialized women were both more likely than men to identify the following factors as barriers to their entry into the profession: physical appearance, age (too young) and gender.<sup>29</sup>

<sup>29</sup> On the issue of physique/appearance, 29% racialized and 12% non-racialized women respondents identified it as a barrier to entry, compared to 19 % racialized and 4% non-racialized men. On gender, 17% of racialized women respondents and 12% of non-racialized women identified it as a barrier to entry, compared to 5% of racialized men and just 1% of non-racialized men. Finally, on the issue of age (too young), 23% of racialized women respondents and 11% of

The results reinforce the focus group conclusion that, for many racialized women, the experience of gender bias is compounded as a consequence of their racial status. Racialization and gender intersect to amplify barriers associated with each factor.

Race as a Factor in Entering Sole Practice

Most of us are sole practitioners because we could not get into large firms because of racial barriers; the ones I know who got into firms ended up leaving because of feelings of discrimination, and ostracizing and alienation – [i.e.] not being invited to firm dinners and outings. Some Black lawyers feel suicidal because of repeatedly running into racial barriers (not academic performance) trying to enter large firms; there are firms that believe if they hire Black lawyers they will lose their clients.

Community Liaison Meeting

A number of participants stated that they felt they had been forced to enter sole practice because of barriers they had faced in obtaining employment or advancing in other practice environments. Some participants also believed that a number of racialized lawyers become sole practitioners by default and are ill-equipped and unprepared for the realities of sole practice.

Several participants believed that racialized lawyers are more likely to be in sole practice and they highlighted the vulnerability of sole practitioners in the legal profession in the context of professional regulation and discipline.

Entry into the Profession

The barriers noted above have an impact on racialized licensees' experiences in entering the legal profession. The Stratcom survey results also shed some light on other barriers that impact upon entry into the profession. Racialized and non-racialized survey participants were presented with a list of factors and asked to indicate in each case if they had experienced any of the factors as a barrier or challenge at any time during or after their entry into practice.<sup>30</sup>

Forty percent (40%) of racialized licensees identified their ethnic/racial identity as a barrier to entry into practice, while only 3% of non-racialized licensees identified

non-racialized women identified it as a barrier to entry, compared to 9% of racialized men and 5% of racialized men.

ethnic/racial identity as a barrier. Racialized licensees who were most likely to cite race/ethnicity as a barrier to entry included South East Asian, Black, Arab and South Asian respondents, those having a first language other than French/English, women, and those born outside Canada.<sup>31</sup>

Whereas ethnic/racial identity was selected as a barrier to entry by a substantially higher proportion of racialized respondents than any of the other barriers tested, it ranked among the least important challenge for non-racialized respondents.

The following barriers were also identified by racialized lawyers and to a much lesser extent by non-racialized lawyers:

- a. physical appearance;<sup>32</sup>
- b. socio-economic status;<sup>33</sup>
- c. place of birth and where one is raised;<sup>34</sup>
- d. age (too young);<sup>35</sup>
- e. the way one speaks English/ French;<sup>36</sup>
- f. gender identity.<sup>37</sup>

The survey revealed that a significantly smaller percentage of racialized respondents, compared to non-racialized respondents,

- a. found a suitable first job after being licensed;<sup>38</sup>
- b. reported having been offered employment at the firm where they had articulated or had a training placement;<sup>39</sup>
- c. found employment in a suitable practice environment;<sup>40</sup> and
- d. were able to work in their preferred area of practice.<sup>41</sup>

There were wide differences of experience at entry into the profession, and in overall career trajectory. Almost half of racialized licensees "strongly or somewhat agreed" that they had struggled to find an articling position or training placement<sup>42</sup> and a majority

Advancement

I was well liked in my Bay Street firm and was a golden boy. Race [was] not a factor getting in the door as a lawyer but was a factor in partnership. I was never offered partnership though I was at the firm longer than those who were offered partnership. It was common knowledge that I was a favourite at the firm.

Community Liaison Meeting

The Stratcom survey results also identified barriers to advancement in the profession. Both racialized and non-racialized respondents were asked to identify which factors represented barriers at any time after entry into practice.

The greatest difference between the two groups is in the importance of ethnic/racial identity, which is perceived as a barrier/challenge to advancement by 43% of racialized licensees, compared to 3% of the non-racialized licensees.

Intersecting with ethnic/racial identity are physical appearance, family socio-economic status, where you were born/raised and how you speak English/French — all of which have been identified as barriers after entry by at least 15% of racialized licensees.

By contrast, for non-racialized licensees, these issues represent barriers after entry to practice that are comparable or possibly of lesser importance than those associated with sexual orientation, gender, age, lifestyle, and personal beliefs.

Racialized and non-racialized respondents identified time away from work to care for children and other family members as a barrier to advancement after entry.<sup>44</sup> However, the barrier was more significant for racialized and non-racialized women than for men.<sup>45</sup>

The survey found narrower gaps between racialized and non-racialized respondents in the area of career setbacks, as shown below:

- a. agreed they had left one or more positions because they felt they did not belong there – 42% of racialized and 35% of non-racialized respondents;

- b. reported having left one or more positions because they did not feel they would advance commensurate with their performance and ability – 40% of racialized and 31% of non-racialized respondents;
- c. they had been refused a promotion to a management position – 13% of racialized and 9% of non-racialized respondents;
- d. their admission to partnership had been delayed – 9% of both racialized and non-racialized respondents; and
- e. they were not made partner, despite meeting known criteria for advancement – 6% of both racialized and non-racialized respondents.

Regulatory Process

Participants were asked to comment on their perception of the regulatory process. For some, there were concerns about the lack of racial diversity at Convocation and on discipline panels. Others were of the view that, because of their higher likelihood to become sole practitioners, and/or to come from backgrounds where professional life is the exception rather than the rule, racialized licensees often practise with fewer connections to a large or affluent client base and without sufficient education in the business of a legal practice.

Key informants provided anecdotal evidence that many racialized licensees take a community-specific approach when starting their career, appealing to their own local ethnic/cultural community for business, which may (in some instances) expose them to unreasonable expectations about the scope and efficacy of their practice and, ultimately, complaints from clients.

Participants noted factors that could contribute to making racialized licensees more vulnerable to complaints, most frequently citing a comparative lack of resources, training and mentoring opportunities. Both racialized and non-racialized survey respondents placed lack of mentors and professional networks<sup>46</sup> and racial stereotyping by clients<sup>47</sup> at the top of the list of factors that may increase the risk of complaints against racialized licensees.

A majority of racialized and almost half of non-racialized respondents<sup>48</sup> indicated in the survey that miscommunication was “definitely or probably” a factor increasing the risk of complaints. This dovetails with the results of the focus groups, which identified factors of cultural miscommunication often overlapping with miscommunications based in language differences, as factors contributing to the risk of increased complaints.

Racialized and non-racialized licensees had different views on whether issues such as lower quality articling positions and inadequate training<sup>49</sup> and racial stereotyping by other members of the profession or the judiciary<sup>50</sup> increase the risk of complaints and discipline for racialized licensees.

In this regard, the Working Group considered available information regarding the racialized experience in the regulatory process and determined that there is more work to be done. The preliminary work thus far will be continued.

The Working Group also suggests remedial measures, considered below, that are not specifically tied to particular racial groups, but can assist licensees more generally — such as mentoring and networking.

Additional Barriers Faced by Internationally Trained Lawyers

Some participants stated that internationally trained lawyers often face additional challenges because of language barriers, socialization, job readiness and work experience. They believed that the advantages that internationally trained lawyers bring to the profession as a result of the experience of practising in another country, are often discounted or not understood.

Participants identified being born and/or educated outside Canada as potential obstacles for racialized licensees. It was believed that internationally trained lawyers could face a combination of disadvantages, such as few professional network opportunities, language challenges, a different culture than their colleagues, the lack of critical transition from law school to a first professional position in Ontario, and the lack of mentors and contacts.<sup>51</sup>

Additional Barriers Faced by Paralegals

In addition to the barriers identified above that apply to all racialized licensees, some focus group participants noted that racialized paralegals seem to face greater challenges in the job market than racialized lawyers.

Data from the survey reinforced this hypothesis. Overall, paralegals as a group reported lower success rates in finding suitable employment than lawyers.

On the key measure of finding a suitable first job, just 26% of racialized paralegals had found such job, compared to 36% of non-racialized paralegals. On finding employment

in their preferred practice environment, 37% of racialized paralegal respondents had found such employment, compared to 57% of their non-racialized counterparts. Similarly, 41% of racialized paralegal respondents said they found employment in their preferred area of practice, compared to 67% of non-racialized paralegals.

QUESTIONS FOR THE PROFESSION

Introduction

Based on the results described above<sup>52</sup>, the Working Group identified questions for the profession's consideration and invites input on the questions posed below. The questions are organized under the following themes:

- A. Enhancing the internal capacity of organizations;
- B. Mentoring, advisory services and networking;
- C. Enhancing cultural competence in the profession;
- D. Discrimination and the role of the complaints process;
- E. The operations of the Law Society of Upper Canada.

The Working Group also welcomes additional ideas, initiatives or practices that may assist in addressing the challenges faced by racialized licensees.

---

A. Enhancing the Internal Capacity of Organizations

The engagement with the profession indicates that some of the barriers faced by racialized licensees exist in recruitment processes and in advancement in their careers. The Working Group proposes that organizations, including firms, enhance their internal capacity to address such barriers by considering approaches under the following three categories:

- a. Establishing diversity programs within firms;
- b. Collecting demographic data;
- c. Establishing contract compliance programs.

Establishing Diversity Programs within Firms

Question 1: How should the Law Society act as a catalyst for the establishment of diversity programs within firms and why? Proposed models are presented below, and other proposed models are welcome.

- Diversity project: A project in which firms and organizations with in-house counsel services commit to working with the Law Society to develop and adopt standards and resources for the recruitment, retention and career progression of racialized licensees.
- Self-assessment: A project in which firms and organizations with in-house counsel services complete a self-assessment about their diversity performance and use the results to identify and adopt practices and policies to be more equitable and inclusive.
- Requiring standards: A project in which firms and organizations with in-house counsel services would be required by the Law Society to adopt standards and resources for the recruitment, retention and career advancement of racialized licensees.

Diversity Project

The first approach described above is based on the Law Society's Justicia project model adopted in 2008. The Justicia project is a gender diversity project in which more than 55 firms signed commitment agreements with the Law Society to work together to develop resources that would assist in retaining and advancing women in private practice.

Participating firms, in partnership with the Law Society, developed templates to track gender demographics and to identify and adopt principles and best practices regarding flexible work arrangements, networking and business development, mentoring programs and leadership skills development for women. The Justicia resources are now available online to the profession as a whole at: www.lsuc.on.ca/justicia\_project/.

Other examples of similar initiatives are the Law Firm Diversity and Inclusion Network (LFDIN) and the Legal Leaders for Diversity (LLD). These are firm and legal organization-based initiatives that try to address challenges related to the retention and advancement of equity-seeking groups by working together and promoting the adoption of best-practices.<sup>53</sup>

The Law Society could, just as it did in the Justicia Project, act as a catalyst and work with firms and organizations to develop resources to create the infrastructure for inclusiveness and standards to measure progress. Recently, following a consultation with racialized licensees, the Barreau du Québec developed a three-year action plan that includes using the Justicia model to address issues related to the recruitment, retention and advancement of racialized licensees.<sup>54</sup>

Self-Assessment

The second approach, asking or requiring firms to complete a self-assessment about diversity performance, is based on the Canadian Bar Association's guide Assessing Ethical Infrastructure in Your Law Firm: A Practical Guide. The document was drafted to "assist lawyers and firms by providing practical guidance on law firm structures, policies

The Boston Lawyers Group is comprised of prominent firms, corporate legal departments and government agencies in Boston that are committed to identifying, recruiting, advancing and retaining attorneys of colour. The group has grown from 13 members at its creation to over 45 members. The Boston Lawyers Group acts as a resource to members by hosting forums, roundtable discussions, educational programs and job fairs, in an effort to promote diversity in Boston's legal community. The Boston Lawyers Group also develops initiatives within law schools, student affinity organizations, city and state governments, bar associations and other professional and business organizations. Members are ultimately responsible for meeting their own diversity and inclusion goals. See The Boston Lawyers Group, About the BLG, online: <http://www.thebostonlawyersgroup.com/about/who.htm>.

The LCD operates in a similar manner to the Boston Lawyers Group. The LCD is comprised of firms, corporate law offices, government agencies and state bar/law associations in Connecticut. The current challenge of the LCD is "to increase the recruitment, retention and advancement of lawyers of color, not only as good social policy, but also as exemplary business practice." See Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity, Who We Are, online: <http://www.lcdiversity.com/about/who.htm>

and procedures to ensure that ethical duties to clients, third parties and the public are fulfilled.”<sup>55</sup>

The document contains a self-evaluation tool for firms, the CBA Ethical Practices Self-Evaluation Tool, which outlines 10 key areas of ethical infrastructure and provides questions related to firm policies and procedures under each identified area.<sup>56</sup>

The self-evaluation tool is modelled on the approach used in New South Wales for regulation of incorporated legal practices. Rather than being required to follow specific rules, the firms are required to self-assess whether their practices and policies are effective in ensuring professional conduct and to establish practices and policies that are thought effective in their specific context. The result has been a two-third reduction in client complaints for firms regulated in this way.<sup>57</sup> This approach could be adopted for diversity practices on a voluntary or mandatory basis.

The Law Society of England and Wales has adopted a similar, successful voluntary approach to diversity practices. In 2009, it adopted the Diversity and Inclusion Charter to, “help practices turn their commitment to diversity and inclusion into positive, practical action for their businesses, staff and clients.”<sup>58</sup>

To date, over 300 practices have signed the Charter, representing more than a third of all solicitors in private practice. Practices that sign the Diversity and Inclusion Charter are required to report annually to show how well they are meeting their commitments and where more work needs to be done. The Charter is accompanied by a set of resources to help practices fulfil their commitments in key areas. The standards help to show how well a legal practice is complying with equality legislation, regulation and equality and diversity standards.

Requiring Standards

The third approach would require firms and organizations with legal counsel to adopt standards and resources for the recruitment, retention and career advancement of racialized licensees. The Law Society would develop such standards.

Collecting Demographic Data

In addition to implementing diversity programs, the Working Group proposes that firms collect demographic data of their lawyers and paralegals.

There are a number of advantages to collecting demographics, as listed below. It is suggested that such data would be particularly helpful in identifying the types of diversity programming that would best meet the needs of each firm.

Question 2: What is the preferred model for the collection of firm demographic data and why? Other proposed models are welcome.

- Using Law Society data: The Law Society collects demographic data of licensees through the Lawyer and Paralegal Annual Reports, publicly reports the demographic data based on firm size and discloses to firms their own demographic data.
- Providing templates: The Law Society works with firms to develop consistent templates for demographic data collection and encourages firms to collect such data on a regular basis.<sup>59</sup>
- Requiring firms to report: The Law Society sets parameters for the voluntary collection of demographic data by firms and requires firms to report either that they are collecting this information or the rationale for not collecting such data.
- Mandatory collection: The Law Society sets parameters for the mandatory collection of demographic data by firms.

Background Discussion

Some participants in the engagement process and studies have noted the value of organizational collection of demographic data. For example, some Stratcom key informants indicated that more detailed statistics on racialization within firms would be valuable, similar to approaches in the United States where transparency about firm representation assists in increasing representation within firms.<sup>60</sup> The Stratcom survey results indicated that a majority of racialized licensees favoured measures related to collecting and sharing data. However, some concerns were expressed about measures that might be construed as setting diversity targets.<sup>61</sup>

The Advantages of Data Collection

The Working Group believes that gathering and maintaining demographic data is a best practice. There are numerous reasons to gather demographic information, including the following:

- a. Such data can be a tool to increase a firm's competitiveness. Numerous large clients in the U.S., and now in Canada, issue requests for proposals (RFPs) to select their legal counsel, requiring firms to produce demographic data of their workforce. For example, the Bank of Montreal's Legal, Corporate & Compliance Group (LCCG) requires disclosure of a firm's diversity statistics as part of its RFP process for legal suppliers.<sup>62</sup>
- b. Diversity, and data on diversity, assists firms to attract a strong talent base. As the pool of law school students is increasingly diverse, so is the pool of legal talent.
- c. Maintaining demographic data allows firms to monitor diversity in recruitment and advancement and to adjust policies and practices accordingly.
- d. Demographic data assist firms to enhance their client services and professional reputation, and to become role models by ensuring representation at all levels.
- e. Demographic data provide background for firms to develop programs that enhance inclusiveness.
- f. The information may assist in developing initiatives to enhance access to justice.

Dean Lorne Sossin and Sabrina Lyon, in their article Data & Diversity in the Canadian Legal Community, also underline the importance of data collection, noting that while "collecting and publishing data on diversity will not in and of themselves make the justice community more inclusive, it is difficult if not impossible to see how the justice community could become more inclusive without meaningful and reliable data."<sup>63</sup>

Despite the importance of quantitative demographic data, many employers assess their progress in diversity and inclusion by considering more qualitative measures. Sossin and

Lyon believe that “when an organization is comprised of very few diverse members, a firm-wide survey on inclusion will likely lead to misleading results. Qualified and supplemented by quantitative data, the picture becomes much clearer.”<sup>64</sup> Most individuals consulted in the Sossin and Lyon project indicated that, as regulator of the profession, the Law Society is the most appropriate body to lead the effort in calling for the collection and dissemination of demographic data.

Data Collection Practices

The American Experience

Data collection has been an ongoing practice in the U.S. with organizations such as the National Association of Legal Career Professionals (NALP)<sup>65</sup> and Vault<sup>66</sup> collecting and reporting both qualitative and quantitative diversity and inclusion information about U.S. firms or legal organizations. Although not mandatory, the publication of data is an effective recruitment tool for firms and legal organizations, and hundreds participate in the NALP and Vault initiatives. Currently, NALP’s Canadian branch publishes only gender demographic data for firms.

Despite the willingness of many U.S. firms to collect demographic data, there is some dispute as to whether data collection has been effective in increasing the numbers of racialized licensees in U.S. firms<sup>67</sup>. Veronica Root, in her article Retaining Color, notes the following:

The available data demonstrates that (i) large numbers of persons of color are attending the top twenty-five law schools, (ii) a much smaller percentage join large firms, and (iii) an even smaller percentage are made partner. This is despite the fact that the American Bar Association and the National Association for Law Placement began questioning and tracking demographic diversity within firms in 1993. Twenty years later, only small gains have been made in efforts to increase large law firm demographic diversity.<sup>68</sup>

Obviously, the lack of demographic diversity is the product of practices and systems other than the collection of data. However, as noted above, the Working Group has identified significant advantages to data collection.

The Experience in the U.K.

The Law Society of England and Wales' Solicitors Regulation Authority (SRA) has taken a proactive approach to gathering demographic data. Practices regulated by the SRA are now required to collect, report and publish data annually on the diversity of their workforce. The SRA produces aggregate data annually. The SRA will develop a benchmark to allow firms to assess their progress.<sup>69</sup>

The Canadian Experience

In Canada, at least three large firms in Ontario collect, but do not report publicly, self-identification data based on race and ethnicity of their employees and members.<sup>70</sup> A number of other firms are working on developing processes to collect demographic data and numerous Justicia firms already collect gender-based data of their members.<sup>71</sup>

The requirement for members to report on diversity-related matters has also been considered by other regulatory bodies in Ontario. Recently, the Ontario Securities Commission (OSC) began the final implementation of rule amendments that will, amongst other things, require companies regulated by the OSC to disclose the following gender related information on an annual basis: policies regarding the representation of women on the board; the board's consideration of the representation of women in the director identification and selection process; consideration of the representation of women in executive officer positions when making such appointments; targets and number of women on the board and in executive officer positions.<sup>72</sup>

<sup>69</sup> Also noteworthy of mention is the initiative of the United Kingdom's Judicial Appointments Commission (JAC), an independent commission that selects candidates for judicial office in courts and tribunals in England and Wales and for some tribunals that also have jurisdiction in Scotland or Northern Ireland, engages in diversity monitoring. As part of its diversity strategy, the JAC records information about gender, ethnicity, professional background, disability and age at three stages of the judicial appointments process: application, shortlisting and recommendation for appointment. This information is gathered through the JAC's voluntary Application Monitoring Form. The JAC publishes an Official Statistics bulletin, which includes demographic information, twice a year: Judicial Selection and Recommendations for Appointment Statistics, October 2012 to March 2013 – Judicial Appointments Commission Statistics Bulletin (London: Judicial Appointments Commission, 2013).

The OSC will implement a “comply or explain” approach, which requires companies to either report on their implementation or consideration of items listed above, or explain their reasons for not doing so.<sup>73</sup>

In 2012, the Canadian Bar Association produced a guide to assist firms in refining their approach to diversity and inclusion and to measure their diversity performance.<sup>74</sup> In 2009, the Ontario Human Rights Commission also produced Count me In! Collecting human rights-based data, a guide to assist organizations in collecting demographic data.<sup>75</sup>

Voluntary vs. Mandatory Data Collection

There are advantages and disadvantages to voluntary and mandatory demographic data collection. Although mandatory reporting would potentially provide more reliable data, currently the Law Society does not directly regulate firms or legal organizations. In addition, Sossin and Lyon note the “resistance and backlash to mandatory reporting requirements” and indicate that voluntary and/or incentivized disclosure of demographic statistics is an important avenue to consider.

Voluntary data collection would allow the Law Society to work with firms and legal organizations in collecting the data, hence increasing the buy-in of the firms to conduct such an exercise. The Justicia project<sup>76</sup> mentioned above is an example of an initiative in which participating firms agreed to maintain gender-based data and worked with the Law

<sup>73</sup> Following the OSC proposal, the securities regulatory bodies in Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Québec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Labrador, Northwest Territories and Nunavut published proposed amendments for comment from the public that mirror those put forward by the OSC. These regulatory bodies have also begun final implementation of the rule amendments.

Society in developing a guide and template to gather such data. Since the inception of Justicia, a number of medium and large firms are now collecting gender demographic data.

Using Law Society Data

As the Law Society already collects demographic data based on race and data on, for example, size of firms, status in a firm, environment, practice area and year of call, it may be advisable for the Law Society to enhance the quality of its data collection and to be the common source of demographic data. This would have the advantage of providing comparable demographic data and likely more efficient data collection. On the other hand, there may be some advantage in firms being involved in collecting and reporting on their own information.

Diversity and Contract Compliance

Question 3: How could the Law Society work with in-house legal departments to develop model contract compliance programs for in-house legal departments that retain firms?

Background Discussion

As noted above, a number of U.S. and Canadian businesses, governments and other institutions now require the disclosure of workforce demographic data for consideration during RFP evaluation processes. Some members of the Legal Leaders for Diversity (LLD), which comprises over 70 signatories across Canada, are considering diversity in their hiring and purchasing practices by requiring potential legal suppliers to disclose demographic data. Others require that at least one member of a diverse community is working on their file.<sup>77</sup>

Some participants in the engagement process saw a role for the Law Society in encouraging corporate procurement policies. To promote diversity in the profession and ensure that racialized licensees have the opportunity to work on important files, the Law Society could work with organizations such as members of LLD to develop model contract compliance programs that would require potential suppliers to provide diversity statistics during the RFP process.

B. Mentoring, Advisory Services and Networking

Throughout the engagement process, mentoring and networking were identified as crucial elements in promoting inclusivity in the profession. The profession is asked to comment on mentoring, advisory services and networking models.

Mentoring and Advisory Services

Question 4: What are the preferred mentoring and/or advisory services models for racialized licensees? Other models than those listed below are welcome.

In November 2013, Convocation approved the creation of the Mentoring and Advisory Services Proposal Task Force (the Mentoring Task Force). The terms of reference of the Mentoring Task Force are as follows:

- a. inform itself about the mandatory and optional mentoring and advisory services that are provided to lawyers and other professions by their regulatory bodies and trade or professional associations in Canada and abroad;
- b. develop a set of criteria to assess the effectiveness of these services in addressing the practice needs of the legal profession in Ontario;
- c. determine the range of mentoring and advisory service models, including technology-assisted, virtual advisory and mentoring services, partnering with other organizations, centralizing or establishing mentoring and other resources that could be explored and considered;
- d. consult with external stakeholders on the objectives and best practices for such services;
- e. examine and determine, to the extent possible, the immediate and long-term financial implications to the Law Society.

Mentoring refers to a formal or informal program or relationship in which the mentor provides career and personal advice to the mentee. In a mentoring relationship, there are no specific performance objectives. Alternatively, advisory services are job-focused and performance oriented. The advisor/coach provides advice and assesses and monitors progress. Advisors/coaches assist the advisee with developing specific skills for a defined task or challenge.

The Working Group encourages feedback on what mentoring and advisory services models would be most helpful for racialized licensees. Such feedback may be considered by the Working Group and the Mentoring Task Force. Some proposed models are listed below, but the list is not exhaustive and other proposed models are also welcome.

Volunteer Mentor or Advisory Services

- a. One-on-one mentoring or advisory services: One mentor and one mentee would meet regularly. The mentoring relationship would be individualized and personal. Mentors would not be compensated.
- b. Group mentoring: One mentor would form a mentoring relationship with a small group of licensees. The mentor and mentees would meet regularly as a group. Mentors would not be compensated.
- c. Distance mentoring: Mentoring would be provided by one mentor to one mentee primarily via email and other forms of electronic communication. E-communication could be supplemented by occasional telephone calls and in-person meetings. Mentors would not be compensated.
- d. Team mentoring: Several mentors would work with a group of several mentees. The mentors and the mentees would meet together regularly as a team. Mentors would not be compensated.
- e. Peer mentoring: Colleagues who are at a similar stage in their careers would be paired to provide advice and guidance to each other.
- f. Limited-scope advisor services: An advisor with expertise in a specific area would provide an advisee with guidance on a substantive or procedural legal issue. This relationship would likely be short-term. Advisors would not be compensated.

Remunerated Mentor or Advisor Services

- a. Professional one-on-one mentoring: This model would operate similarly to voluntary one-on-one mentoring, however mentees would be able to access a mentor drawn from a pool of compensated mentors.
- b. Panel of advisors: A diverse group of trained lawyer and paralegal advisors would be paid to provide specific, targeted support services to those at increased risk of failing to fulfil their professional obligations.

It is important to note that associations such as the Canadian Association of Black Lawyers (CABL), the South Asian Bar Association (SABA) and the Federation of Asian Canadian Lawyers (FACL) provide valuable networking opportunities, mentoring and continuing professional development programs. The Law Society could consider whether there are additional support programs that could be implemented through associations such as those to assist lawyers and paralegals who are in small firms, who are sole practitioners and/or are internationally trained. Proposals to that effect are welcome.

Networking*Question 5: What are the preferred networking models for racialized licensees? Other models than those listed below are welcome.

The engagement process indicated that racialized licensees are often more isolated from professional support networks. The majority of both racialized and non-racialized licensees in the Stratcom survey identified the need for racialized licensees to have more access to professional networks.

The Law Society could work with legal organizations and affinity associations to develop more planned and structured networking opportunities, for example, through continuing professional development. These networking opportunities would provide racialized licensees with a forum to interact with racialized and non-racialized licensees from other firms and legal organizations.

It is important to note that some participants have mentioned that associations do not exist for their community. For example, paralegals have noted that they do not have access to an association of racialized paralegals. There is also no association of internationally trained lawyers, notwithstanding the comments that internationally trained lawyers are often isolated and lack the networks that are so important to small firms and sole practitioners.

The University of Toronto's Internationally Trained Lawyers Program has been a valuable program to prepare internationally-trained lawyers to enter the legal profession; however, continuous networks while in practice would be valuable.

C. Enhancing Cultural Competence in the Profession

The Stratcom survey results support the importance of Law Society sponsored professional development seminars on equity, diversity and cultural competence that would be counted toward accreditation.

There are many definitions of cultural competence but Robert Wright<sup>78</sup> has developed the following: “an ability to interact effectively with people of different cultures. Cultural competence comprises four essential capacities:

- a. We must understand our own cultural positions and how they differ from and are similar to others (critical cultural self-analysis).
- b. We must understand the social and cultural reality in which we live and work and in which our clients live and work.
- c. We must cultivate appropriate attitudes towards cultural difference
- d. We must be able to generate and interpret a wide variety of verbal and non-verbal responses (client centred interviewing).<sup>79</sup>

Question 6: How could the Law Society enhance the profession’s cultural competence through its CPD Programs? Other proposed models are welcome.

- Include the topics of cultural competence, diversity and inclusion in the Professional Responsibility and Practice (PRP) Course.
- Provide annual voluntary accredited CPD Programs on cultural competence.
- Require that licensees complete annually, or less frequently, one hour of cultural competence CPD that would count as part of the three required hours of professionalism.

The suggested options above are proposed to ensure that licensees are introduced to the concept of cultural competence early in their careers, through the PRP course, and throughout their careers.

The PRP Course is designed to, “expand the candidates’ knowledge of lawyers’ duties, tasks, and challenges and to provide a suggested approach for analyzing common ethical and practice dilemmas.”<sup>80</sup> Successful completion of the PRP Course is required for admission to the Bar.

It is suggested that professional development programs on cultural competence would be beneficial to the profession as a whole. Rules 2.1-1 and 6.3.1-1 of the Rules of Professional Conduct<sup>81</sup> speak to the responsibility of lawyers to recognize the diversity of the Ontario community. Both the Rules of Professional Conduct and the Paralegal Rules of Conduct<sup>82</sup> require that lawyers and paralegals protect the dignity of individuals and respect human rights laws in force in Ontario. Cultural competence training could be useful to assist lawyers and paralegals to understand and comply with this rule.<sup>83</sup>

As such, it is proposed that annual CPD programs be made available to the profession and/or that the profession be required to complete one hour of accredited CPD professionalism hours annually or on a less frequent basis.

<sup>83</sup> The Nova Scotia Barristers' Society (NSBS) recognizes the value of professional development programs on cultural competence and identifies cultural competence as a facet of the overall professional competence of a lawyer. The NSBS offers monthly half day workshops on building cultural competence.

D. Discrimination and the Role of the Complaints Process

Question 7: How should the Law Society best ensure that complaints of discrimination are brought to its attention and effectively addressed? Additional proposals are welcome.

- By updating the Rules of Professional Conduct and the Paralegal Rules of Conduct to specifically define and address systemic discrimination and by developing a communication plan for the profession.
- By working with associations of racialized licensees to enhance their ability to bring forward complaints.
- By assigning an expert group of professional regulation staff members to handle complaints of racial discrimination.
- By working with associations of racialized licensees to enhance their capacity to offer duty counsel type support to their members who have been the subject of complaints.

Understanding Discrimination

The Ontario Human Rights Commission defines systemic discrimination based on race as “patterns of behaviour, policies or practices that are part of the structures of an organization, and which create or perpetuate disadvantage for racialized persons.”<sup>84</sup> The engagement process revealed that those who are impacted by racial discrimination often do not believe that they have an avenue to complain because the discrimination is systemic, or they do not wish to complain for fear that the complaint will impact on their careers.

The Rules of Professional Conduct and Paralegal Rules of Conduct speak to the special responsibility of lawyers and paralegals to respect the requirements of human rights laws in force in Ontario and, specifically, to honour the obligation not to discriminate. The mandate of the Law Society to investigate complaints of systemic discrimination is not widely known and it is suggested that the Rules be clarified and a communication plan be developed to inform licensees that complaints of systemic discrimination can be made to the Law Society.

Providing Resources for the Profession

In addition to receiving complaints related to systemic discrimination, the Law Society could develop proactive institutional methods to address systemic discrimination, such as providing firms and legal organizations with best-practices, guides and model policies.

The Law Society could also require that firms have policies and procedures in place to address discrimination and harassment and could hold firms accountable for failure to establish and adhere to such policies and procedures.

The Law Society does not now directly regulate firms or legal organizations. In February 2014, however, Convocation approved the development of a proposed framework for the regulation of firms (also known as “entity regulation”) for Convocation’s consideration. This framework could be designed similar to the self-evaluation based approach that has proven successful in New South Wales. This potential change to the Law Society’s regulatory approach could allow the Law Society to require firms to create and adhere to discrimination and harassment policies and procedures.

Addressing the Fear of Filing a Complaint

The fear of filing a complaint has been raised in the engagement process and currently, the right to complain to the Law Society through professional associations is not widely known. The Law Society may wish to work with affinity associations to enhance their capacity to file complaints of racial and/or ethnic discrimination. The ability to file a complaint through an association may reduce the risk of the complaint having a negative impact on a complainant’s career. The Working Group would welcome additional suggestions on how to enhance policies and practices so that individuals may feel more comfortable coming to the Law Society with complaints of racial discrimination.

Because cases of racial and/or ethnic discrimination are often quite complex, it is suggested that a group of expert Professional Regulation staff members be appointed to handle such cases. This group of experts would attend extensive training programs on cultural competence and racial discrimination to make them sensitive to the nature of these cases and of the parties involved.

Providing Support through the Process

Focus group participants agreed that there may be factors contributing to making racialized licensees more vulnerable to complaints, most frequently citing a comparative lack of resources and training, and problems associated with poor communication and cultural misunderstanding. Those factors, such as the lack of resources, would likely be relevant once a licensee is in the regulatory process. As a result, the Working Group suggests that the Law Society could work with legal associations to strengthen their capacity to offer duty counsel type support to those who are the subject of complaints.

E. The Operations of the Law Society of Upper Canada

The Working Group discussed initiatives that could be implemented internally to address the engagement process results. The Working Group is considering recommending to Convocation the adoption of the following programs. The Working Group would welcome comments about these programs and other internal initiatives that could be considered by the Working Group.

Initiative 1: Enhance the Equity Compliance Program

The Law Society would enhance its Equity Compliance Program to include a request for demographic data when retaining vendors, firms or legal counsel to provide services.

Initiative 2: Conduct an Internal Equity Audit

The Law Society would strengthen its policies and programs by conducting an operational equity audit of its services offered to the profession.

Initiative 3: Internal Collection of Data

The Law Society would consider the internal collection of further data on issues relating to racialization in the regulatory process

Initiative 4: Develop a More Diverse Public Face/Image for the Law Society of Upper Canada

The Law Society would consider strategies to develop a more diverse and inclusive public image/face of the Law Society.

Background Discussion

Currently, as part of its RFP process, the Law Society requires vendors with more than 50 employees and firms with more than 50 lawyers to indicate that they comply with the Human Rights Code, the Occupational Health and Safety Act (OHSA), as applicable, and the Law Society of Upper Canada's Harassment and Discrimination Prevention Policy.

The Law Society could strengthen the Equity Compliance Program requirements to include a request for demographic data to be considered during the selection process.

The Law Society of Upper Canada is also committed to ensuring that its policies, programs and practices are inclusive and accessible. In order to make certain that this is the case, the Law Society could arrange for an outside party to conduct an operational equity audit of the services it provides to the profession. This audit would focus on the Law Society's direct services to the profession or the public. An equity audit would identify any challenges with, or progress in, integrating equity principles and practices into the Law Society's operations.

The Law Society could also examine whether additional or better data or other information should be collected internally relating to regulatory matters, including complaints and investigations, in terms of the incidence and impact of racialization.

A significant number of both racialized and non-racialized participants in the engagement process endorsed the suggestion that the Law Society develop a more diverse and inclusive public image/face. The Law Society could consider initiatives that would make its public image/face more diverse and inclusive. Input could be sought from the Equity Advisory Group, which is comprised of partner associations and individual members with expertise in matters related to equity and diversity. The Governance Issues Working Group could receive staff support and additional input from the Law Society's Equity Initiatives Department, Public Affairs Department and Communications Department.

CONCLUSION

The Law Society is committed to promoting a profession that is reflective of all peoples of Ontario and that is inclusive and free from discrimination and harassment. The engagement process identified a number of barriers that affect racialized licensees, across their careers.

The Working Group considered those barriers and the challenges faced as a result of discrimination, overt racism, cultural differences, lack of mentoring, sponsors, role models and networking opportunities and other systemic factors. As a result, it has identified a number of potential initiatives that could address some of those challenges.

The proposed initiatives are presented to the profession and your input is invited and most welcome.

Appendix 1 - Racialization and Firm Size Based on Law Society Lawyer and Paralegal Data as of April 2014

Chart 1 - Sole Practitioners – In percentages

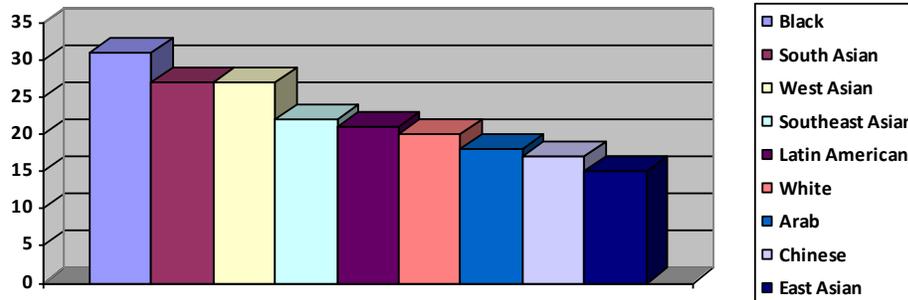

Chart 2 - By Firm Size – In percentages

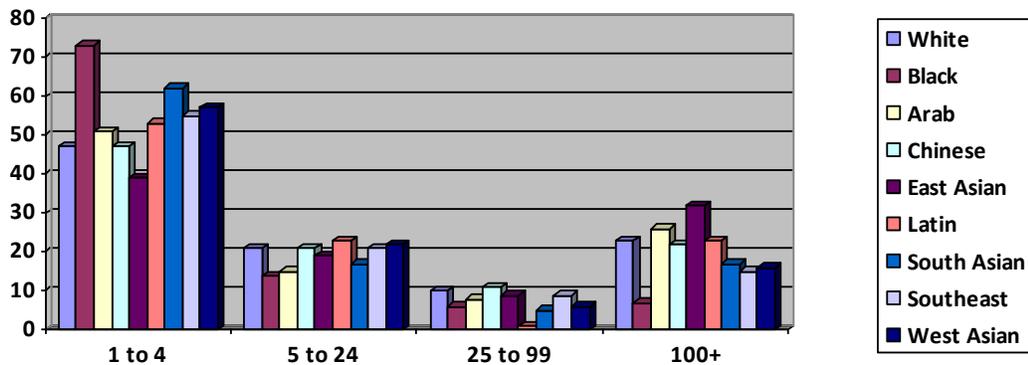

Chart 1 shows that Black, South Asian and West Asian lawyers are proportionately more likely to be in sole practice.

Chart 2 shows that Black and South Asian lawyers are proportionately more likely to be in small and sole practices while they are proportionately much less likely to be in medium and large firms.

Chart 3 - By Firm Size – In percentages

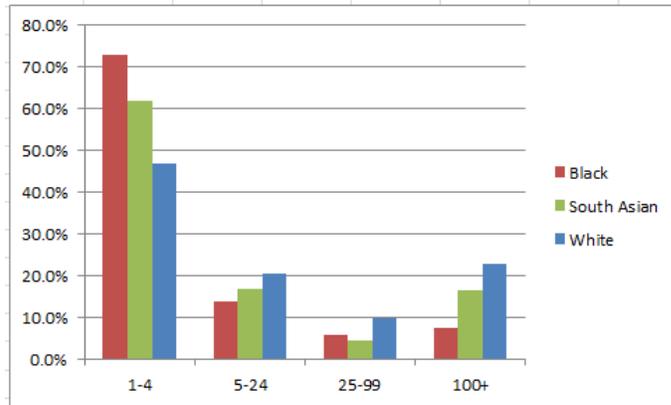

Chart 3 shows more clearly the differential practice patterns of Black, South Asia and White lawyers. Black lawyers, and to a lesser extent South Asian lawyers, disproportionately practise in the smallest firms. Relatively few Black lawyers practice in the largest firms, while the proportions of South Asian and White lawyers in the largest firms are not so different.

DOCUMENT DE CONSULTATION SUR LES DÉFIS DES TITULAIRES DE PERMIS RACIALISÉS

Dans le cadre de son engagement à promouvoir l'équité et la diversité dans la profession, le Barreau du Haut-Canada a créé le Groupe de travail sur les défis des titulaires de permis racialisés en 2012.

Nous encourageons toutes les parties intéressées à examiner ce document de consultation et à commenter le document global ou toute question qu'il soulève. Nous vous invitons à présenter des suggestions et des solutions pratiques aux problèmes. Le Barreau s'est engagé à maintenir une profession qui tienne compte de toute la population de l'Ontario de manière inclusive et libre de discrimination et de harcèlement. Le Barreau est également déterminé à faciliter l'accès à la justice, tel que démontré dans la récente adoption par le Barreau d'un nouveau cadre d'accès à la justice exhaustif<sup>1</sup>.

Contexte

Nous avons observé une augmentation constante du nombre des avocates et avocats racialisés dans la profession juridique en Ontario au cours des 20 dernières années. Malgré cette augmentation, les preuves fondées sur les données statistiques, les résultats des recherches et les preuves anecdotiques suggèrent que les avocates et avocats racialisés continuent à faire face à des défis dans la pratique du droit. Nous en savons très peu sur les défis auxquels les parajuristes racialisés font face.

Pour explorer cette question et répondre aux préoccupations, le Conseil a créé en août 2012 le Groupe de travail sur les défis des titulaires de permis racialisés (le Groupe de travail), avec le mandat suivant :

- a) reconnaître les défis des titulaires de permis racialisés dans différents milieux de pratique, y compris l'entrée dans la pratique et l'avancement,

- b) reconnaître les facteurs et les difficultés de la pratique des titulaires de permis racialisés qui pourraient augmenter le risque de plaintes liées à la réglementation et les mesures disciplinaires;
- c) tenir compte des pratiques exemplaires pour élaborer des stratégies préventives, de recours et d'appui;
- d) au besoin, concevoir et élaborer des stratégies préventives, de recours, de mise en application, de réglementation ou d'appui, aux fins d'étude pas le comité d'équité et d'autres comités, pour traiter les défis décrits ci-dessus.

En octobre 2012, le Groupe de travail a entrepris une étude globale qui comprenait l'examen des données et documents disponibles, des rencontres avec des particuliers et des organismes ainsi que la coordination de groupes de discussion menés par des professionnels juridiques reconnus.

En 2013, le groupe a lancé un processus officiel de mobilisation qui comprenait des entrevues avec des informateurs clés, des groupes de discussion et un sondage sur la profession dans son ensemble.

Les renseignements obtenus à ce jour suggèrent que la racialisation est un facteur constant et persistant qui touche les titulaires de permis à leur début dans la profession et lors des possibilités d'avancement professionnel. La racialisation se croise avec une grande variété d'autres facteurs, dont la langue ou l'accent, les différences de statut professionnel entre les avocat(e)s et les parajuristes ainsi que la formation à l'étranger.

Le croisement de ces facteurs avec d'autres, comme le sexe, l'identité sexuelle, l'expression de l'identité sexuelle, l'âge, l'orientation sexuelle, un handicap et la région géographique, donne lieu à un profil complexe d'expériences et d'impacts associés aux défis de la racialisation.

Sommaire des résultats de la mobilisation

Les participants ont fourni des exemples de comportements, d'interactions, de langages et de suppositions discriminatoires qui sont des caractéristiques courantes de leurs expériences professionnelles de tous les jours.

Certains participants estiment que, souvent, on n'offre pas aux titulaires de permis racialisés les mêmes possibilités d'avancement. Ils ont aussi indiqué qu'ils se sentent exclus de la culture dominante de la profession juridique.

Certains ont aussi indiqué que les titulaires de permis racialisés auraient beaucoup à gagner des programmes de mentorat, mais que souvent ils ne connaissent pas les programmes disponibles ou n'y ont pas accès. Ils ont aussi indiqué que de nombreux titulaires de permis racialisés ont besoin

d'un solide réseau de professionnels juridiques, de mentors ou de parraineurs qui puissent leur fournir des conseils et un soutien dans leur lieu de travail.

Questions pour la profession

Le Groupe de travail a examiné les résultats et a cerné pour les professionnels un certain nombre de questions détaillées à étudier. Ces questions portent sur les sujets suivants :

- Améliorer les capacités internes des organismes – intégrer la diversité dans les cabinets, recueillir des données démographiques sur la diversité et élaborer des programmes de conformité des contrats types
- Mentorat et réseautage – déterminer les meilleures pratiques et modèles privilégiés
- Améliorer le savoir-faire culturel dans la profession – fournir des programmes de formation professionnelle continue (FPC) agréés
- La discrimination et le rôle du processus des plaintes – traiter efficacement les plaintes de discrimination
- Les activités du Barreau du Haut-Canada – améliorer le programme de conformité en matière d'équité, mener une vérification interne en matière d'équité et développer une image publique plus diversifiée du Barreau.

DOCUMENT DE CONSULTATION

CONTEXTE

Au cours des deux dernières décennies, il y a eu en Ontario une augmentation constante du pourcentage des avocates et avocats racialisés<sup>3</sup> dans la profession juridique, qui est passé de 9,2 % en 2001 à 11,5 % en 2006<sup>4</sup>. Les aperçus statistiques du Barreau sur les avocats et les parajuristes démontrent qu'en 2010, 17 % des avocats et 28 % des parajuristes étaient racialisés<sup>5</sup>. Ces données se comparent au pourcentage de 23 % de la population de l'Ontario qui s'est identifiée dans le Recensement du Canada comme étant racialisée, ainsi qu'au pourcentage de 25,9 % de la population de l'Ontario qui s'est identifiée dans l'Enquête nationale auprès des ménages comme étant racialisée<sup>6</sup>.

Par conséquent, en août 2012, les membres du conseil ont créé le Groupe de travail sur les défis des titulaires de permis racialisés (Groupe de travail) afin de :

- a. reconnaître les défis auxquels font face les titulaires racialisés dans différents milieux de la pratique, notamment à leur début dans la profession et lors des possibilités d'avancement;
- b. reconnaître les facteurs et les difficultés de la pratique auxquels les titulaires de permis racialisés sont exposés qui pourraient augmenter le risque de plaintes liées à la réglementation et de mesures disciplinaires;
- c. tenir compte des pratiques exemplaires pour élaborer des stratégies préventives, de recours et d'appui;
- d. s'il y a lieu, concevoir et élaborer des stratégies préventives, de recours, de mise en application, de réglementation ou d'appui à l'intention du Comité sur l'équité et d'autres comités au besoin, afin de relever les défis décrits ci-dessus.

- a. Il a mené un examen des données et de la documentation disponible à ce sujet – Rapport intitulé Law Society Scan and Best-Practices.
- b. Il a rencontré de façon informelle un certain nombre de particuliers et d'organismes pour obtenir des commentaires sur les défis et les pratiques exemplaires pour les titulaires de permis racialisés – Rapport intitulé Results from Informal Engagement (Informal Engagement Report).
- c. Il a obtenu de précieux commentaires d'un groupe de travail du groupe consultatif en matière d'équité du Barreau du Haut-Canada<sup>7</sup>. Le groupe consultatif en matière d'équité a cerné les défis auxquels les titulaires de permis racialisés font face et a suggéré des options pour répondre aux préoccupations — Rapport intitulé Submissions of the Equity Advisory Group.
- d. Il a retenu les services de Strategic Communications Inc. (Stratcom) et de Michael Charles de Change DeZign© pour qu'ils s'engagent officiellement auprès de la profession. Cet engagement comprenait des entrevues avec 20 informateurs clés, 14 groupes de discussion formés de titulaires de permis racialisés, 2 groupes de discussion formés de titulaires de permis non racialisés et un sondage de 35 questions mené auprès de la profession globale (avocats et parajuristes). Les consultants ont fourni leur rapport au Barreau du Haut-Canada en mars 2014 – Rapport intitulé Rapport final sur les barrières des titulaires de permis racialisés (le rapport Stratcom).
- e. Il a créé un processus de mobilisation parallèle, le processus de liaison communautaire, pour recueillir des renseignements de titulaires de permis racialisés qui n'auraient pas participé au processus de mobilisation officiel de Stratcom. Des professionnels juridiques reconnus et expérimentés de diverses collectivités racialisées ont agi à titre d'agents de liaison et ont mené des groupes de discussion dans la collectivité – Rapport intitulé Community Liaison Report to the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group (Community Liaison Report).
- f. Il a également rassemblé des données d'auto-identification concernant la taille des cabinets et d'autres caractéristiques, présentées à l'annexe 1.
- g. Il a entrepris une analyse des données disponibles du Barreau concernant le processus de réglementation. Au cours de cette analyse, on déterminera s'il convient d'obtenir d'autres données ou de meilleures données.

racialisés font face. Les membres de la profession, les organismes juridiques, les cabinets, les écoles de droit et toute personne intéressée aux questions analysées dans ce document sont encouragés à fournir des commentaires écrits. Le Groupe de travail examinera toutes les observations présentées et rédigera un rapport final proposant des recommandations à l'intention du Conseil.

LES RÉSULTATS DU PROCESSUS DE MOBILISATION

Même si le Groupe de travail a utilisé plusieurs méthodes pour recueillir les renseignements sur les défis auxquels font face les titulaires racialisés, l'expérience des participants au cours de leurs interactions informelles avec des titulaires et associations juridiques (participation informelle) et celle des participants au processus de liaison communautaire faisaient écho aux expériences des participants du processus de mobilisation officiel de Stratcom.

Les défis suivants sont apparus :

- a. discrimination et stéréotypes;
- b. différences culturelles et aptitude à s'adapter;
- c. manque de mentors, de parraineurs, de modèles et d'occasions de réseautage;
- d. croisement de facteurs et vulnérabilité accrue;
- e. la race en tant que facteur contribuant au choix d'exercer seul;
- f. obstacles à l'entrée dans la profession;
- g. obstacles aux possibilités d'avancement dans la profession;
- h. facteurs de risque liés à l'entrée dans le processus de réglementation;
- i. obstacles supplémentaires pour les avocates et avocats formés à l'étranger; et
- j. obstacles supplémentaires pour les parajuristes.

Discrimination et stéréotypes

[Traduction] Vous travaillez plus fort pour faire vos preuves. Vous ne pouvez pas nécessairement faire les choses que vos collègues blancs peuvent faire à cause de la différence de connotation. En général, on m'a toujours dit que je devais travailler plus fort que mes homologues blancs, ce qui à certains égards est encore tristement vrai à notre époque. J'ai l'impression que certains avocats ne me donnent pas certains dossiers en se basant sur une notion préconçue concernant mes compétences à cause de la couleur de ma peau.

Community Liaison Meeting

Le processus de mobilisation a permis aux participants de partager leurs expériences. Un certain nombre de participants ont décrit des expériences de discrimination qui ont eu de graves répercussions sur leur carrière, notamment sur leurs possibilités de carrière et leur rémunération. Certains ont décrit des expériences manifestes de discrimination, comme des situations où ils ont été la cible de blagues, de propos ou de suppositions racistes<sup>10</sup>.

Certains ont aussi indiqué qu'on ne leur a pas offert les mêmes possibilités d'avancement. Par exemple, ils ont indiqué qu'on les a laissés à l'écart dans certains dossiers, qu'ils n'ont pas été invités à participer aux réunions avec des clients, ni à des rencontres à caractère social avec des collègues où l'on discutait des dossiers et des affectations, et qu'on leur confiait des travaux de moindre importance. Certains se sont demandé si la race a joué un rôle dans l'avancement plus rapide de collègues non racialisés de niveau comparable ou inférieur<sup>11</sup>.

Les participants ont souvent ressenti qu'ils devaient faire leurs preuves dans une plus grande mesure que leurs collègues non racialisés. Ils ont indiqué qu'ils ont souvent été perçus comme non crédibles et ont ressenti un manque de respect. Un certain nombre de participants ont déclaré qu'on les a pris pour un étudiant, un travailleur social ou un client, au lieu d'un avocat ou un parajuriste.

Différences culturelles socioéconomiques et aptitude à s'adapter

[Traduction] La culture du cabinet est un énorme facteur pour déterminer qui obtient une entrevue et qui est embauché; tant durant les entrevues sur campus que comme avocat débutant. L'analogie que j'utilise toujours est que vous ne pouvez essayer de résoudre la quadrature du cercle. Bay Street est une culture particulière et si vous ne savez pas comment verser votre vin, cela se remarquera et, en fin de compte, le processus de sevrage sert à exclure un nombre disproportionné de candidats issus des minorités.

La notion de « l'aptitude à s'adapter » a aussi été mentionnée comme étant un obstacle pour les titulaires racialisés en processus d'embauche et dans le cadre de leurs fonctions. Les participants étaient d'avis que la notion « d'aptitude à s'adapter » se traduit par « non racialisé » et que, par conséquent, les titulaires racialisés sont plus susceptibles de faire face à des défis lorsqu'ils sont à la recherche d'un emploi ou de possibilités d'avancement.

Manque de mentors, de parraineurs, de modèles et d'occasions de réseautage

Community Liaison Meeting

De nombreux participants ont indiqué que les titulaires de permis racialisés auraient beaucoup à gagner des programmes de mentorat, mais que souvent ils ne connaissent pas les programmes disponibles ou n'y ont pas accès. Ils ont aussi mentionné que de nombreux titulaires de permis racialisés ont besoin d'un solide réseau de professionnels juridiques, de mentors ou de parraineurs qui peuvent leur fournir des conseils et un soutien dans leur lieu de travail.

Les résultats du sondage démontrent également qu'une plus grande proportion de répondants non racialisés<sup>22</sup>, comparativement aux répondants racialisés<sup>23</sup>, trouvent relativement facile d'obtenir de collègues professionnels et de mentors des conseils juridiques concernant des dossiers de clients. Les différences entre les deux groupes n'étaient pas aussi importantes concernant d'autres déclarations. Par exemple, un pourcentage légèrement plus élevé de répondants non racialisés ont convenu que les mentors ont joué un rôle important dans l'avancement de leur carrière<sup>24</sup>. Un pourcentage légèrement plus élevé de répondants racialisés ont indiqué que les réseaux sociaux ont joué un rôle important dans leur carrière<sup>25</sup>.

Parmi les titulaires de permis qui sont plus susceptibles que la moyenne de mentionner ces facteurs comme étant des sources d'inconvénients probables ou incontestables pour la carrière se trouvent les femmes, les praticiens exerçant seuls, les titulaires de permis qui ont une langue maternelle autre que le français ou l'anglais ou ceux et celles qui sont nés à l'extérieur du Canada. Les groupes racialisés plus susceptibles que la moyenne de mentionner ces trois facteurs comme étant des sources d'inconvénients probables ou incontestables pour la carrière sont : les répondants noirs, sud-asiatiques, chinois et arabes.

Croisement de facteurs et vulnérabilité accrue

La race et le sexe

Community Liaison Process

Le sondage de Stratcom a tenu compte du harcèlement et des attentes liées aux stéréotypes sexuels à titre de facteurs aggravant les inconvénients pour la carrière. Bien que les résultats du sondage aient indiqué que les hommes titulaires racialisés ne sont pas exempts de harcèlement ni de stéréotypes sexistes, une plus grande proportion de femmes racialisées<sup>28</sup> considèrent les stéréotypes sexistes comme un facteur contribuant à leurs désavantages en matière d'embauche, d'avancement ou de poursuite d'un domaine de pratique.

La race en tant que facteur contribuant au choix d'exercer seul

Community Liaison Meeting

Un certain nombre de participants ont déclaré qu'ils estimaient avoir été obligés de choisir d'exercer seuls en raison des obstacles qu'ils avaient rencontrés dans la recherche d'emplois ou dans les possibilités d'avancement dans d'autres milieux de la pratique. Certains participants estiment également qu'un certain nombre d'avocates et avocats racialisés exercent seuls par défaut et sont mal équipés et mal préparés aux réalités de la pratique à titre individuel.

Plusieurs participants estiment que les avocats racialisés sont plus susceptibles d'exercer seuls et ont mis en évidence la vulnérabilité des personnes qui exercent en cabinet privé dans la profession juridique dans le contexte des plaintes liées à la réglementation professionnelle et les mesures disciplinaires.

Entrée dans la profession

Les obstacles mentionnés ci-dessus ont un impact sur les expériences des titulaires racialisés qui entrent dans la profession juridique. Les résultats du sondage de Stratcom ont également mis en évidence d'autres obstacles qui ont des répercussions sur l'entrée dans la profession. Dans le cadre du sondage, une liste de facteurs a été présentée aux participants racialisés et non racialisés, et on leur a demandé d'indiquer si chacun des facteurs avait constitué un obstacle ou un défi à tout moment avant ou après avoir commencé à exercer<sup>30</sup>.

Alors que les répondants racialisés ont sélectionné l'appartenance ethnique/identité raciale à titre d'obstacle à l'entrée dans la profession dans une proportion nettement plus élevée que tous les autres obstacles évalués, ce facteur a été classé parmi les défis les moins importants chez les répondants non racialisés.

Les obstacles suivants ont également été mentionnés par les avocats racialisés et, dans une bien moindre mesure, par les avocats non racialisés :

- a. apparence physique<sup>32</sup>;
- b. situation socio-économique<sup>33</sup>;
- c. lieu de naissance et lieu où l'on a grandi<sup>34</sup>;
- d. âge (trop jeune)<sup>35</sup>;
- e. la façon de parler anglais ou français<sup>36</sup>;
- f. identité sexuelle<sup>37</sup>.

Le sondage a révélé qu'un pourcentage bien inférieur des répondants racialisés, comparativement aux répondants non racialisés :

- a. ont trouvé un emploi approprié après avoir obtenu leur permis<sup>38</sup>;
- b. ont déclaré qu'on leur a offert un emploi au cabinet où ils ont fait un stage ou un stage de formation professionnelle<sup>39</sup>;
- c. ont trouvé un emploi dans un cabinet approprié<sup>40</sup>; et
- d. été en mesure de travailler dans leur domaine de pratique préféré<sup>41</sup>.

Il y a de grandes différences entre les expériences vécues lors de l'entrée dans la profession et dans l'évolution globale de la carrière. Près de la moitié des titulaires racialisés ont été « fortement ou plutôt d'accord » pour dire qu'ils ont eu de la difficulté à trouver un stage ou un stage de formation professionnelle<sup>42</sup>, et la majorité ont été « fortement ou plutôt d'accord » pour dire qu'ils n'avaient pas avancé aussi rapidement que leurs collègues ayant des qualifications semblables<sup>43</sup>.

Community Liaison Meeting

Les résultats du sondage de Stratcom ont aussi permis de cerner des obstacles à l'avancement dans la profession. On a demandé aux répondants racialisés et non racialisés d'identifier quels facteurs ont représenté des obstacles à tout moment après avoir commencé à exercer.

La plus grande différence entre les deux groupes était l'importance de l'appartenance ethnique/identité raciale, qui est perçue comme un obstacle ou un défi pour l'avancement chez 43 % des titulaires racialisés, comparativement à 3 % chez les titulaires non racialisés.

Les facteurs de croisement avec l'appartenance ethnique/identité raciale sont l'apparence physique, la situation socio-économique de la famille, le lieu de naissance ou celui où l'on a grandi, et dans quelle mesure on parle bien l'anglais ou le français. Ces facteurs ont tous été identifiés comme des obstacles après l'entrée dans la profession par au moins 15 % des licenciés racialisés.

En revanche, chez les titulaires non racialisés, ces facteurs représentent des obstacles après l'entrée dans la profession qui sont comparables ou éventuellement de moindre importance que ceux qui sont associés à l'orientation sexuelle, le sexe, l'âge, le mode de vie et les croyances personnelles.

Les répondants racialisés et non racialisés ont indiqué que les absences du travail pour s'occuper des enfants et d'autres membres de la famille représentaient un obstacle à l'avancement après l'entrée dans la profession<sup>44</sup>. Cet obstacle était toutefois plus important pour les femmes racialisées et non racialisées que pour les hommes<sup>45</sup>.

Le sondage a révélé des différences moindres entre les répondants racialisés et non racialisés en ce qui concerne les difficultés de carrière, comme le démontrent les renseignements ci-dessous :

- a. ils ont convenu qu'ils avaient quitté un ou plusieurs postes parce qu'ils ne se sentaient pas à leur place (42 % des répondants racialisés, et 35 % des répondants non racialisés);
- b. ils ont déclaré avoir quitté un ou plusieurs postes parce qu'ils estimaient que leurs possibilités d'avancement n'étaient pas proportionnelles à leurs compétences et à leurs capacités (40 % des répondants racialisés, et 31 % des répondants non racialisés);
- c. ils se sont vu refuser une promotion à un poste de gestion (13 % des répondants racialisés, et 9 % des répondants non racialisés);
- d. leur admission à un partenariat a été retardée (9 % des répondants racialisés et non racialisés); et
- e. ils n'ont pas été acceptés comme partenaires, même s'ils remplissaient les critères de promotion (6 % des répondants racialisés et non racialisés).

Processus de réglementation

Les titulaires racialisés et non racialisés avaient des opinions différentes à l'effet que les postes de stagiaire de mauvaise qualité et la formation insuffisante<sup>49</sup> ainsi que les stéréotypes raciaux par d'autres membres de la profession ou de la magistrature<sup>50</sup> augmentent les risques de plaintes et de mesures disciplinaires pour les titulaires de permis racialisés.

À cet égard, le Groupe de travail a examiné les renseignements disponibles concernant les expériences des titulaires racialisés dans le processus de réglementation et a déterminé qu'il y a encore du travail à faire. Les travaux préliminaires effectués jusqu'à présent seront poursuivis.

Certains participants ont déclaré que les avocates et avocats formés à l'étranger font souvent face à des difficultés supplémentaires en raison des obstacles linguistiques, de la socialisation, de la préparation à l'emploi et de l'expérience de travail. Ils estiment que les avantages que les avocats formés à l'étranger amènent dans la profession, grâce à l'expérience de la pratique dans un autre pays, sont souvent sous-estimés ou mal compris.

Les participants ont indiqué que le fait d'être né ou d'avoir fait ses études hors du Canada présente des obstacles potentiels pour les titulaires de permis racialisés. Ils estiment que les avocats formés à l'étranger peuvent faire face à une combinaison d'inconvénients, comme de faibles possibilités de réseautage professionnel, des difficultés linguistiques, une culture différente de celle de leurs collègues, un manque de possibilités lors de la transition entre l'école de droit et un premier emploi professionnel en Ontario, et le manque de mentors et de relations<sup>51</sup>.

Obstacles supplémentaires pour les parajuristes

En plus des obstacles mentionnés ci-dessus qui s'appliquent à tous les titulaires de permis racialisés, certains participants aux groupes de discussion ont indiqué que les parajuristes racialisés semblent faire face à plus de difficultés sur le marché du travail que les avocats racialisés.

Les données du sondage renforcent cette hypothèse. Globalement, les parajuristes en tant que groupe ont obtenu des taux de réussite inférieurs que les avocats pour trouver un emploi approprié.

En ce qui concerne l'indicateur-clé que constitue l'obtention d'un premier emploi approprié, seulement 26 % des parajuristes racialisés ont trouvé un tel emploi, comparativement à 36 % des parajuristes non racialisés. En ce qui concerne l'obtention d'un emploi dans leur milieu de pratique préféré, 37 % des parajuristes racialisés ont trouvé un tel emploi, par rapport à 57 % de leurs homologues non racialisés. De la même façon, 41 % ont déclaré avoir trouvé un emploi dans leur domaine de pratique préféré, par rapport à 67 % des parajuristes non racialisés.

QUESTIONS POUR LES MEMBRES DE LA PROFESSION

Introduction

À partir des résultats ci-dessus<sup>52</sup>, le Groupe de travail a établi des questions en vue de les soumettre à l'examen des membres de la profession et d'obtenir leurs commentaires. Les questions ci-dessous sont présentées selon les thèmes suivants :

- A. L'amélioration des capacités internes des entreprises
- B. Le mentorat, les services consultatifs et le réseautage
- C. L'amélioration des compétences culturelles dans la profession
- D. La discrimination et le rôle du processus des plaintes
- E. Les activités du Barreau du Haut-Canada

Le Groupe de travail désire obtenir des idées, initiatives ou pratiques supplémentaires qui peuvent contribuer à éliminer les difficultés auxquelles les titulaires de permis racialisés font face.

---

A. L'amélioration des capacités internes des entreprises

Selon l'examen de l'embauche dans la profession, certains des obstacles auxquels font face les titulaires de permis racialisés existent dans les processus de recrutement et dans les possibilités d'avancement dans leur carrière. Le Groupe de travail propose que les organismes, y compris les cabinets, améliorent leurs capacités internes d'éliminer les obstacles en envisageant d'adopter les méthodes présentées dans les trois catégories suivantes :

- a. établir des programmes de diversité au sein des cabinets;
- b. recueillir des données démographiques;
- c. établir des programmes de conformité des contrats.

Établir des programmes de diversité au sein des cabinets

Question n° 1 : Comment le Barreau du Haut-Canada devrait-il agir à titre de catalyseur dans l'établissement de programmes de diversité dans les cabinets et pourquoi devrait-il le faire? Des modèles proposés sont présentés ci-dessous, et la proposition d'autres modèles serait appréciée.

- Projet de diversité : Un projet dans le cadre duquel les cabinets et organismes qui offrent des services de conseils internes s'engagent à collaborer avec le Barreau pour élaborer et adopter des normes et des ressources pour le recrutement, le maintien en fonction et la progression professionnelle des titulaires de permis racialisés.
- Auto-évaluation : Un projet dans le cadre duquel les cabinets et organismes qui offrent des services de conseils internes effectuent une auto-évaluation de leurs résultats en matière de diversité et utilisent ces résultats pour identifier et adopter des pratiques et politiques afin de devenir plus équitables et inclusifs.
- Normes sur les exigences : Un projet dans le cadre duquel le Barreau exige des cabinets et organismes qui offrent des services de conseils internes qu'ils adoptent des normes et des ressources pour le recrutement, le maintien en fonction et l'avancement professionnel des titulaires de permis racialisés.

Projet de diversité

La première approche décrite ci-dessus est fondée sur le modèle de projet du Barreau Justicia adopté en 2008. Le projet Justicia est un projet de mixité des sexes dans le cadre duquel plus de 55 cabinets ont signé une entente d'engagement de collaboration avec le Barreau visant à élaborer des ressources pour maintenir les femmes dans la pratique privée et favoriser leur avancement.

Les cabinets participants, en partenariat avec le Barreau, ont mis au point des modèles pour suivre les données démographiques selon le sexe et pour identifier et adopter des principes et des pratiques exemplaires concernant les horaires de travail souples, le réseautage et le développement des activités professionnelles ainsi que le mentorat et le développement des compétences en leadership

pour les femmes. Les ressources de Justicia sont désormais disponibles en ligne pour les membres de la profession dans l'ensemble à www.lsuc.on.ca/projet\_Justicia.

Il y a d'autres exemples d'initiatives semblables : le Réseau des cabinets d'avocats pour la diversité et l'inclusion ainsi que les Leaders juridiques pour la diversité. Il s'agit d'initiatives de cabinets et d'organismes juridiques qui tentent d'éliminer les difficultés associées au maintien en fonction et à l'avancement chez les groupes qui font la promotion de l'équité en collaborant et en favorisant l'adoption de pratiques exemplaires<sup>53</sup>.

Le Barreau pourrait, de la même façon qu'il l'a fait dans le projet Justicia, agir en tant que catalyseur et collaborer avec les entreprises et organismes à développer des ressources pour créer l'infrastructure nécessaire à l'inclusion et élaborer des normes pour mesurer les progrès. Récemment, à la suite d'une consultation auprès des titulaires de permis racialisés, le Barreau du Québec a mis au point un plan d'action de trois ans qui inclut l'utilisation du modèle de Justicia pour remédier aux problèmes liés au recrutement, au maintien en fonction et à l'avancement des titulaires de permis racialisés<sup>54</sup>.

Auto-évaluation

La seconde approche, qui consiste à demander aux entreprises d'effectuer une auto-évaluation de leurs résultats en matière de diversité, ou à les y obliger, est fondée sur le guide de l'Association du Barreau canadien, intitulé Évaluer l'infrastructure déontologique de votre cabinet juridique : Un guide pratique. Ce document a été conçu pour « aider les avocats et les cabinets d'avocats en fournissant des conseils pratiques sur la structure, les politiques et les méthodes des cabinets d'avocats de sorte qu'ils remplissent leurs obligations envers leurs clients, les tiers et le public »<sup>55</sup>.

Le Boston Lawyers Group est composé de grands cabinets, de services juridiques d'entreprises et d'organismes gouvernementaux de Boston qui se sont engagés à trouver et recruter des avocat(e)s de couleur et à favoriser leur maintien en fonction et leur avancement. Ce groupe est passé de 13 membres à sa création à plus de 45 membres. Le Boston Lawyers Group offre des sources d'information aux membres en organisant des forums, des discussions en table ronde, des programmes éducatifs et des salons d'emploi dans le but de promouvoir la diversité dans la communauté juridique de Boston. Le Boston Lawyers Group conçoit également des initiatives pour les écoles de droit, les organismes desservant les étudiants, la Ville et les gouvernements des États, les associations d'avocats et d'autres organismes professionnels et commerciaux. Les membres ont la responsabilité ultime de répondre à leurs propres objectifs de diversité et d'inclusion. Voir The Boston Lawyers Group, About the BLG, en ligne : www.thebostonlawyersgroup.com/about/who.htm

Le Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity fonctionne de la même façon que le Boston Lawyers Group. Le Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity est composé d'entreprises, de cabinets d'avocats, d'organismes gouvernementaux et d'associations juridiques ou d'avocats au Connecticut. Le défi actuel de Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity consiste à augmenter le recrutement, le maintien en fonction et l'avancement des juristes de couleur, non seulement à titre de bonne politique sociale, mais également de pratique commerciale exemplaire. Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity, « Who We Are » <http://www.lcdiversity.com/about/who.htm>.

L'outil d'auto-évaluation est calqué sur l'approche utilisée en Nouvelle-Galles-du-Sud pour la réglementation des cabinets d'avocats constitués en personne morale. Plutôt que d'être tenus de suivre des règles précises, les cabinets sont tenus de s'autoévaluer pour déterminer si leurs pratiques et politiques permettent efficacement d'assurer une bonne conduite professionnelle et d'établir des pratiques et des politiques considérées comme efficaces dans leur contexte précis. Les cabinets qui ont adopté cette réglementation ont obtenu une réduction des deux tiers des plaintes de leur clientèle<sup>57</sup>. Cette approche pourrait être appliquée aux pratiques en matière de diversité, sur une base volontaire ou obligatoire.

Le Law Society of England and Wales a appliqué aux pratiques en matière de diversité une approche volontaire semblable, avec succès. En 2009, il a adopté la Charte de diversité et d'inclusion afin d'aider les cabinets à orienter leur engagement envers la diversité et l'inclusion vers des gestes concrets et positifs pour leurs entreprises, leur personnel et leurs clients<sup>58</sup>.

À ce jour, plus de 300 cabinets ont signé la Charte, ce qui représente plus d'un tiers de tous les avocats de pratique privée. Les cabinets qui signent la Charte de diversité et d'inclusion sont tenus de présenter chaque année un rapport pour montrer dans quelle mesure ils respectent leurs engagements ainsi que les améliorations nécessaires. La Charte est accompagnée d'un ensemble de ressources visant à aider les cabinets à respecter leurs engagements dans les principaux domaines. Les normes permettent de démontrer dans quelle mesure un cabinet d'avocats se conforme aux lois et règlements en matière d'égalité et aux normes en matière de diversité et d'égalité.

Normes sur les exigences

La troisième approche porte sur l'exigence que les organismes de conseillers juridiques et les cabinets adoptent des normes et des ressources sur le recrutement, le maintien en fonction et l'avancement professionnel des titulaires de permis racialisés. Le Barreau élaborerait de telles normes.

Recueillir des données démographiques

En plus de la mise en œuvre de programmes de diversité, le Groupe de travail propose que les cabinets recueillent des données démographiques sur leurs avocat(e)s et parajuristes.

Il y a un certain nombre d'avantages à recueillir des données démographiques, telles que répertoriées ci-dessous, par rapport à la question 2. On estime que de telles données seraient particulièrement utiles pour établir les types de programmes de diversité qui répondraient le mieux aux besoins de chaque cabinet.

Question n° 2 : Quel est le modèle privilégié pour la cueillette de données démographiques et pourquoi? La proposition d'autres modèles serait appréciée.

- À l'aide des données du Barreau : Le Barreau recueille les données démographiques des titulaires en utilisant les rapports annuels des avocats et des parajuristes, déclare publiquement les données démographiques sur la taille des cabinets et divulgue aux cabinets ses propres données démographiques.
- Fournir des modèles : Le Barreau collabore avec les cabinets pour élaborer des modèles uniformes de cueillette de données démographiques et encourage les cabinets à recueillir régulièrement de telles données<sup>59</sup>.
- Exiger des rapports des cabinets : Le Barreau définit les paramètres pour la cueillette volontaire de données démographiques des cabinets et exige que les cabinets déclarent soit qu'ils recueillent ces renseignements, soit la raison pour laquelle ils ne le font pas.
- Cueillette de données obligatoire : Le Barreau pourrait établir des paramètres pour la cueillette obligatoire des données démographiques par les cabinets.

Analyse de base

Certains participants au processus d'études et de mobilisation ont souligné la valeur de la cueillette organisationnelle des données démographiques. Par exemple, certains informateurs clés de Stratcom ont indiqué que des statistiques plus détaillées sur la racialisation au sein des cabinets seraient précieuses, compte tenu d'approches adoptées aux États-Unis, où la transparence de la représentation des cabinets contribue à accroître la représentation au sein des cabinets<sup>60</sup>. Les résultats du sondage de Stratcom indiquent que, bien que la majorité des titulaires de permis racialisés sont en faveur des mesures de cueillette et de partage des données, certains ont exprimé des préoccupations voulant que les mesures puissent servir à établir des cibles en matière de diversité<sup>61</sup>.

Les avantages de la cueillette de données

Le Groupe de travail croit que la cueillette et le maintien des données démographiques sont des pratiques exemplaires. Il y a de nombreuses raisons de recueillir des renseignements démographiques, entre autres les suivantes :

- a. De telles données peuvent être un outil pour accroître les capacités concurrentielles d'un cabinet. De nombreux clients importants aux États-Unis, et maintenant au Canada, présentent des demandes de propositions pour sélectionner leurs conseillers juridiques en exigeant que les cabinets présentent les données démographiques de leur main-d'œuvre. Par exemple, le Groupe sur les services juridiques, affaires générales et conformité de la Banque de Montréal exige la divulgation des statistiques du cabinet sur la diversité dans le cadre de son processus de demande de propositions à l'intention des fournisseurs de services juridiques<sup>62</sup>.
- b. La diversité et les données sur la diversité aident les cabinets à attirer des employés talentueux. Comme les groupes d'étudiants en droit sont de plus en plus diversifiés, il en est de même pour leurs talents.
- c. Le fait de maintenir des données démographiques permet aux cabinets de surveiller la diversité du recrutement et des promotions et d'ajuster leurs pratiques et politiques en conséquence.
- d. Les données démographiques aident les cabinets à améliorer leurs services à la clientèle et leur réputation professionnelle, et à devenir des modèles en s'assurant une représentation sur tous les plans.
- e. Les données démographiques fournissent aux cabinets un contexte à partir duquel élaborer des programmes pour améliorer l'inclusivité.
- f. Les renseignements contribuent à l'élaboration d'initiatives visant à améliorer l'accès à la justice.

Le doyen Lorne Sossin et Sabrina Lyon, dans leur article Data & Diversity in the Canadian Legal Community, soulignent aussi l'importance de la cueillette de données en indiquant que même si le seul fait de recueillir et publier des données sur la diversité ne permettra pas de rendre la justice communautaire plus inclusive, il est difficile, sinon impossible, de voir comment la justice communautaire pourrait devenir plus inclusive sans données fiables et significatives<sup>63</sup>.

Malgré l'importance des données démographiques quantitatives, de nombreux employeurs évaluent leurs progrès en matière de diversité et d'inclusion en tenant compte de mesures plus qualitatives. Sossin et Lyon pensent que lorsqu'un organisme est composé de membres très peu diversifiés, un sondage sur l'inclusion mené dans tout le cabinet mènera probablement à des résultats trompeurs. Lorsque les données sont complétées par des données quantitatives et qualifiées, le résultat devient beaucoup plus clair<sup>64</sup>. La plupart des personnes consultées au cours du projet de Sossin et Lyon ont indiqué que, en tant qu'organisme de réglementation de la profession, le Barreau du Haut-Canada est l'organisme le plus approprié pour diriger les efforts et demander la cueillette et la diffusion des données démographiques.

Pratiques relatives à la cueillette de données

L'expérience des États-Unis

La cueillette de données est de pratique courante aux États-Unis chez des organismes comme la National Association of Legal Career Professionals (NALP)<sup>65</sup> et Vault<sup>66</sup>, où l'on fait la cueillette de renseignements et la production de rapports qualitatifs et quantitatifs sur la diversité et l'inclusion concernant les cabinets ou les organismes juridiques des États-Unis. Bien que la publication des données ne soit pas obligatoire, elle s'avère un outil de recrutement efficace pour les cabinets et organismes juridiques, qui participent aux initiatives de NALP et Vault par centaines. Actuellement, la filiale canadienne de NALP ne publie que des données démographiques sur le sexe du personnel des cabinets.

Les données disponibles démontrent que i) un grand nombre de personnes de couleur fréquentent les 25 écoles de droit les plus importantes, ii) un pourcentage bien inférieur d'entre elles sont engagées par de grands cabinets, et iii) un pourcentage encore plus inférieur deviennent des partenaires. Ces données persistent malgré le fait que l'American Bar Association (ABA) et le National Association for Law Placement (NALP) ont commencé à examiner et suivre la diversité démographique au sein des cabinets en 1993. Vingt ans plus tard, seuls de petits gains ont été réalisés dans les efforts visant à accroître la diversité démographique dans les grands cabinets d'avocats<sup>68</sup>.

Il est évident que le manque de diversité démographique est le produit de pratiques et de systèmes autres que la cueillette de données. Toutefois, comme on l'a noté ci-dessus, le Groupe de travail a identifié d'importants avantages à la cueillette de données.

L'expérience du Royaume-Uni

Le Solicitors Regulation Authority (SRA) de la Law Society of England and Wales a adopté une démarche proactive en matière de cueillette de données démographiques. Les cabinets réglementés par la SRA sont maintenant tenus de recueillir des données sur la diversité de leurs effectifs, de rédiger un rapport et de le publier chaque année. La SRA publie des données globales chaque année. Elle élaborera un point de référence afin de permettre aux cabinets d'évaluer leurs progrès<sup>69</sup>.

L'expérience canadienne

Au Canada, au moins trois grands cabinets de l'Ontario recueillent des données d'auto-identification sur la race et l'origine ethnique de leurs employés et membres, sans toutefois publier un rapport public<sup>70</sup>. Un certain nombre d'autres cabinets travaillent à l'élaboration de processus de cueillette de données démographiques, et de nombreux cabinets membres de Justicia recueillent déjà des données sur le sexe de leurs membres<sup>71</sup>.

D'autres organismes de réglementation de l'Ontario ont aussi envisagé d'imposer à leurs membres l'obligation de présenter des rapports sur des questions liées à la diversité. Récemment, la Commission des valeurs mobilières de l'Ontario (CVMO) a entrepris la mise en œuvre finale des modifications à la règle qui obligera, entre autres, les sociétés qu'elle réglemente à divulguer les renseignements suivants relatifs aux femmes chaque année : les politiques concernant la représentation des femmes au conseil d'administration; l'examen par le conseil de la représentation des femmes dans le processus de sélection des membres du conseil; l'examen de la représentation des femmes aux postes de dirigeants lors de telles nominations; détermination de nombres cibles de femmes au conseil et aux postes de direction<sup>72</sup>.

La CVMO mettra en œuvre une approche « se conformer ou s'expliquer », qui oblige les entreprises à soit présenter un rapport sur la mise en œuvre ou l'examen des questions indiquées ci-dessus, soit expliquer les raisons pour lesquelles elles ne l'ont pas fait<sup>73</sup>.

En 2012, l'Association du Barreau canadien a produit un guide pour aider les entreprises à affiner leur approche concernant la diversité et l'inclusion et pour mesurer leurs résultats en matière de diversité<sup>74</sup>. En 2009, la Commission ontarienne des droits de la personne a également produit Comptez-moi! Cueillette de données relatives aux droits de la personne, un guide publié pour aider les organismes à recueillir des données démographiques<sup>75</sup>.

Cueillette de données volontaire ou obligatoire

Il y a des avantages et des inconvénients dans la cueillette volontaire et obligatoire de données démographiques. Même si la déclaration obligatoire peut potentiellement fournir davantage de données fiables, le Barreau du Haut-Canada ne régit pas directement les cabinets et organismes juridiques en ce moment. De plus, Sossin et Lyon ont perçu une résistance et une forte opposition à l'exigence de déclarations obligatoires et ont indiqué que la divulgation volontaire de statistiques démographiques ou assortie de mesures d'incitation est une approche importante à envisager.

Utilisation des données du Barreau

Comme le Barreau recueille déjà des données démographiques sur la race et d'autres données sur, par exemple, la taille des cabinets, le statut des employés dans le cabinet, leur milieu, leur domaine de pratique, l'année de leur admission au Barreau, il pourrait être souhaitable que le Barreau améliore la qualité de ses activités de cueillette de données et devienne la source commune des données démographiques. Cela aurait l'avantage de fournir des données démographiques comparables et, probablement, de rendre la cueillette de données plus efficace. D'autre part, il y a peut-être des avantages à la participation des cabinets à la cueillette de données et à la déclaration de leurs propres renseignements.

Conformité en matière de diversité et de contrats

Question n° 3 : Comment le Barreau pourrait-il collaborer avec des services juridiques internes à l'élaboration de programmes de conformité des contrats types lorsque ces services juridiques internes embauchent des cabinets?

Analyse de base

Comme nous l'avons mentionné ci-dessus, un certain nombre d'entreprises, de gouvernements et d'établissements américains et canadiens exigent maintenant la divulgation des données démographiques sur la main-d'œuvre aux fins d'examen pendant le processus d'évaluation des demandes de propositions. Certains membres de Leaders juridiques pour la diversité, association qui comprend plus de 70 signataires partout au Canada, tiennent compte de la diversité à l'embauche d'employés et dans le cadre de leurs pratiques d'approvisionnement en exigeant des fournisseurs juridiques potentiels de divulguer leurs données démographiques. D'autres exigent qu'au moins un membre des communautés diverses travaille sur leur dossier<sup>77</sup>.

Certains participants au processus de mobilisation ont indiqué que le Barreau était tout désigné pour le rôle consistant à favoriser les politiques d'approvisionnement des entreprises. Afin de promouvoir la diversité dans la profession et de veiller à ce que les titulaires racialisés aient la possibilité de travailler sur des dossiers importants, le Barreau du Haut-Canada pourrait collaborer avec des organismes comme les Leaders juridiques pour la diversité à l'élaboration de programmes de conformité des contrats types qui exigeraient que les fournisseurs potentiels présentent des statistiques sur la diversité pendant le processus de demande de propositions.

B. Le mentorat, les services de consultation et le réseautage

Au cours du processus de mobilisation, on a déterminé que le mentorat et le réseautage sont des éléments cruciaux de la promotion de l'inclusivité dans la profession. Nous avons demandé aux professionnels de fournir leurs commentaires sur les modèles de mentorat, de services de consultation et de réseautage.

Services de consultation et de mentorat

Question n° 4 : Quels sont les modèles de mentorat et de services de consultation privilégiés pour les titulaires de permis racialisés? La proposition de modèles autres que ceux présentés ci-dessous serait appréciée.

En novembre 2013, les membres du conseil ont approuvé la création du groupe de travail sur les services consultatifs et le mentorat (groupe de travail sur le mentorat). Le mandat du groupe de travail sur le mentorat est le suivant :

- a. se renseigner sur les services obligatoires et facultatifs de mentorat et de services de consultation fournis aux avocat(e)s et autres professionnels par leurs organismes de réglementation ou leurs associations professionnelles ou commerciales au Canada et à l'étranger;
- b. élaborer un ensemble de critères pour évaluer l'efficacité de ces services à répondre aux besoins en matière de pratique des membres de la profession juridique en Ontario;
- c. déterminer la gamme des modèles de services de mentorat et de services de consultation, y compris ceux qui sont assistés par la technologie, virtuels, en partenariat avec d'autres organismes ainsi que la centralisation ou la mise en œuvre de mentorats et d'autres ressources qui pourraient être explorées et envisagées;
- d. consulter des intervenants externes sur les objectifs et les pratiques exemplaires pour de tels services;
- e. examiner et déterminer l'étendue possible des répercussions financières immédiates et à long terme pour le Barreau du Haut-Canada;

Le mentorat consiste en un programme officiel ou informel ou en une relation dans laquelle le mentor fournit au stagiaire des conseils personnels et sur la carrière. Dans une relation de mentorat, il n'y a aucun objectif précis établi. Toutefois, les services de consultation sont centrés sur le travail et orientés vers les résultats. Le conseiller/aidant fournit des conseils et évalue et surveille les progrès réalisés. Le conseiller/aidant aide l'employé à développer des compétences particulières pour une tâche ou une difficulté définie.

Le Groupe de travail vous invite à fournir des commentaires sur les modèles de mentorat et de services consultatifs qui seraient les plus utiles aux titulaires de permis racialisés. Vos commentaires peuvent être examinés par le Groupe de travail et par le groupe de travail sur le mentorat. Certains modèles proposés sont présentés ci-dessous, mais la liste n'est pas complète, et la proposition d'autres modèles serait appréciée.

Mentor bénévole ou services de consultation

- a. Mentorat individuel ou services de consultation : Le mentor et son stagiaire se réuniraient régulièrement. La relation de mentorat serait individualisée et personnelle. Les mentors ne seraient pas rémunérés.
- b. Mentorat de groupe : Un mentor formerait une relation de mentorat avec un petit groupe de titulaires. Le mentor et les stagiaires se réuniraient régulièrement en groupe. Les mentors ne seraient pas rémunérés.
- c. Mentorat à distance : Le mentorat serait fourni par un mentor à un stagiaire, principalement par courrier électronique et d'autres formes de communication électronique. La communication électronique pourrait être complétée par quelques appels téléphoniques et des réunions en personne. Les mentors ne seraient pas rémunérés.
- d. Mentorat par équipe : Plusieurs mentors travailleraient auprès d'un groupe de plusieurs stagiaires. Les mentors et les stagiaires se réuniraient régulièrement en équipe. Les mentors ne seraient pas rémunérés.
- e. Mentorat par pairs : Des collègues qui sont à un stade semblable de leur carrière seraient jumelés afin d'échanger des conseils.
- f. Portée limitée des services de consultation : Un conseiller possédant une expertise dans un domaine précis fournirait à un stagiaire des conseils sur une question de fond ou de procédure juridique. Cette relation serait vraisemblablement à court terme. Les conseillers ne seraient pas rémunérés.

Mentor rémunéré ou services de consultation

- a. Mentorat individuel avec un professionnel : Ce modèle fonctionnerait de la même façon que le mentorat individuel bénévole, mais les stagiaires pourraient accéder à un mentor qu'ils choisiraient dans une liste de mentors rémunérés.
- b. Comité de conseillers : Un groupe diversifié d'avocat(e)s et de conseillers parajuristes formés serait payé pour fournir des services de soutien précis à l'intention des personnes qui sont exposées à un risque accru de manquer à leurs obligations professionnelles.

Le Barreau du Haut-Canada pourrait déterminer si d'autres programmes de soutien pourraient être mis en œuvre par l'intermédiaire d'associations comme celles qui aident les avocates et avocats et les parajuristes qui font partie de petits cabinets, qui exercent seuls ou qui ont été formés à l'étranger. Des propositions à ce sujet seraient appréciées.

Réseautage

Question n° 5 : Quels sont les modèles de réseautage privilégiés pour les titulaires de permis racialisés? La proposition de modèles autres que ceux présentés ci-dessous serait appréciée.

Le processus de mobilisation a permis d'indiquer que les titulaires racialisés sont souvent plus isolés des réseaux de soutien professionnels. La majorité des titulaires racialisés et non racialisés qui ont participé au sondage de Stratcom ont souligné la nécessité des titulaires racialisés d'avoir un meilleur accès aux réseaux professionnels.

Le Barreau du Haut-Canada pourrait collaborer avec des organismes juridiques et associations d'affinité pour élaborer des possibilités de réseautage plus structurées et planifiées, par exemple, dans le cadre de la formation professionnelle continue. Ces possibilités de réseautage fourniraient aux titulaires racialisés un forum leur permettant d'interagir avec des titulaires de permis racialisés et non racialisés d'autres cabinets et organismes juridiques.

Il est important de souligner que certains participants ont mentionné que les associations n'existent pas pour leur communauté. Par exemple, des parajuristes ont indiqué qu'ils n'ont pas accès à une association de parajuristes racialisés. Il n'y a également aucune association d'avocats formés à l'étranger, malgré les commentaires selon lesquels les avocat(e)s formés à l'étranger sont souvent isolés et n'ont pas accès aux réseaux qui sont si importants pour les petits cabinets et les praticiens qui exercent seuls.

Le programme de l'Université de Toronto à l'intention des avocats formés à l'étranger s'est avéré très efficace pour préparer ces derniers à entrer dans la profession juridique. Toutefois, des réseaux continus en cours d'exercice seraient précieux.

C. L'amélioration des compétences culturelles dans la profession

Il y a de nombreuses définitions du terme « compétence culturelle », mais Robert Wright<sup>78</sup> a élaboré la définition suivante : « La capacité d'interagir efficacement avec des gens de différentes cultures. La compétence culturelle comprend quatre capacités essentielles :

- a. Nous devons connaître nos propres points de vue culturels et comprendre en quoi ils diffèrent ou ressemblent à d'autres (auto-analyse critique culturelle).
- b. Nous devons comprendre la réalité sociale et culturelle dans laquelle nous vivons et travaillons ainsi que celle dans laquelle nos clients vivent et travaillent.
- c. Nous devons cultiver des attitudes envers les différences culturelles.
- d. Nous devons être capables de générer et d'interpréter une grande variété de réponses verbales et non verbales (entrevues centrées sur le client) »<sup>79</sup>.

Question n° 6 : Comment le Barreau pourrait-il améliorer la compétence culturelle dans la profession à l'aide de ses programmes de formation professionnelle continue? La proposition d'autres modèles serait appréciée.

- Inclure dans le cours de responsabilité professionnelle et de pratique (RPP) les thèmes de compétence culturelle, diversité et inclusion.
- Fournir des programmes de formation professionnelle continue agréés annuels et volontaires sur les compétences culturelles.
- Exiger que les titulaires effectuent chaque année, ou, moins fréquemment, une heure de formation professionnelle continue en compétence culturelle qui serait intégrée aux trois heures requises de professionnalisme.

Les options suggérées ci-dessus sont proposées afin de s'assurer que les titulaires se familiarisent avec la notion de compétence culturelle au début de leur carrière, dans le cadre du cours de responsabilité professionnelle et de pratique (RPP), et tout au long de leur carrière.

On estime que les programmes d'éducation sur la compétence culturelle seraient bénéfiques pour l'ensemble de la profession. Les règles 2.1-1 et 6.3.1-1 du Code de déontologie soulignent que les avocat(e)s et les parajuristes ont la responsabilité de reconnaître la diversité de la collectivité de l'Ontario<sup>81</sup>. Le Code de déontologie et le Code de déontologie des parajuristes imposent l'obligation de protéger la dignité des personnes et de respecter les lois relatives aux droits de la personne en vigueur en Ontario<sup>82</sup>. La formation en compétence culturelle pourrait être utile pour aider les avocat(e)s et les parajuristes à comprendre cette règle et à s'y conformer<sup>83</sup>.

D. La discrimination et le rôle du processus des plaintes

Question n° 7 : Comment le Barreau devrait-il s'assurer que les plaintes de discrimination soient portées à son attention et qu'elles soient traitées efficacement? D'autres propositions seraient appréciées.

- En mettant à jour le Code de déontologie et le Code de déontologie des parajuristes afin de définir précisément la discrimination systémique et en la combattant, et en élaborant un plan de communication pour la profession.
- En collaborant avec les associations de titulaires racialisés afin d'accroître leurs capacités de présenter des plaintes.
- En affectant un groupe de spécialistes de la réglementation professionnelle des membres du personnel au traitement des plaintes de discrimination raciale.
- En collaborant avec les associations de titulaires racialisés afin d'accroître leurs capacités d'offrir à leurs membres qui ont fait l'objet de plaintes un soutien de type avocat de service.

Comprendre la discrimination

Selon la Commission ontarienne des droits de la personne, la discrimination raciale systémique « découle de politiques, pratiques et comportements qui font partie des structures sociales et administratives de l'organisation et dont l'ensemble crée ou perpétue une situation désavantageuse pour les personnes racialisées »<sup>84</sup>. Le processus de mobilisation a révélé que, souvent, les personnes touchées par la discrimination raciale ne croient pas qu'elles ont la possibilité de se plaindre, car la discrimination est systémique ou elles ne veulent pas se plaindre de peur que la plainte ait des répercussions sur leur carrière.

Les règles du Code de déontologie et du Code de déontologie des parajuristes portent sur la responsabilité particulière des avocats et parajuristes de respecter les exigences des lois relatives aux droits de la personne en vigueur en Ontario et, plus précisément, d'honorer l'obligation de non-discrimination. Le mandat du Barreau d'enquêter sur les plaintes de discrimination systémique n'est pas largement connu. Nous proposons que les règles soient clarifiées et qu'un plan de communication soit élaboré afin d'informer les titulaires que des plaintes de discrimination systémique peuvent être présentées au Barreau du Haut-Canada.

Fournir des ressources à la profession

En plus de recevoir des plaintes relatives à la discrimination systémique, le Barreau pourrait développer des méthodes institutionnelles proactives pour s'attaquer à la discrimination systémique,

comme offrir aux cabinets et aux organismes juridiques des guides de pratiques exemplaires et des modèles de politiques.

Le Barreau pourrait également exiger que les cabinets adoptent des politiques et procédures pour lutter contre la discrimination et le harcèlement, et pourrait tenir les cabinets comme responsables de l'échec d'établir et de respecter ces politiques et procédures.

La crainte de déposer une plainte a été mentionnée au cours du processus de mobilisation et, présentement, le droit de se plaindre auprès du Barreau par l'intermédiaire des associations professionnelles n'est pas largement connu.

Le Barreau pourrait souhaiter collaborer avec des associations d'affinité en vue d'accroître leurs capacités de porter plainte pour discrimination raciale et/ou ethnique. La possibilité de déposer une plainte par l'intermédiaire d'une association peut réduire le risque que la plainte ait un impact négatif sur la carrière du plaignant. Le Groupe de travail souhaiterait obtenir d'autres suggestions sur la façon d'améliorer les politiques et les pratiques de sorte que les personnes puissent se sentir plus à l'aise de s'adresser au Barreau pour se plaindre de discrimination raciale.

Étant donné que les cas de discrimination raciale et/ou ethnique sont souvent très complexes, nous suggérons qu'un groupe de spécialistes de la réglementation professionnelle des membres du personnel soit nommé pour s'occuper de tels cas. Ce groupe de spécialistes participerait à des programmes de formation approfondie sur la compétence culturelle et la discrimination raciale afin de les rendre sensibles à la nature de ces cas et des parties concernées.

Apporter un soutien par le biais du processus

Les participants à un groupe de discussion ont convenu qu'il peut y avoir des facteurs contribuant à rendre les titulaires racialisés plus vulnérables à des plaintes, la plupart citant fréquemment un manque de ressources et de formation ainsi que des problèmes associés à une mauvaise communication et à des malentendus culturels. Ces facteurs, comme le manque de ressources, seraient vraisemblablement pertinents une fois que le titulaire fait partie du processus de réglementation. Par conséquent, le Groupe de travail suggère que le Barreau puisse collaborer avec les associations juridiques pour renforcer leurs capacités d'offrir un soutien de type avocat de service aux personnes qui font l'objet de plaintes.

E. Les activités du Barreau du Haut-Canada

Le Groupe de travail a discuté des initiatives qui pourraient être mises en œuvre à l'interne pour traiter les résultats du processus de mobilisation. Il envisage de recommander aux membres du conseil l'adoption des programmes suivants. Le Groupe de travail souhaiterait obtenir des commentaires concernant ces programmes ainsi que d'autres initiatives internes qui pourraient être examinées par le Groupe de travail.

Initiative 1 : Améliorer le programme de conformité en matière d'équité

Le Barreau améliorerait son programme de conformité en matière d'équité afin d'inclure une demande de données démographiques lorsque l'on retient les services de fournisseurs, de cabinets ou d'avocat(e)s.

Initiative 2 : Mener une vérification interne de l'équité

Le Barreau renforcerait ses politiques et ses programmes en procédant à une vérification opérationnelle de l'équité des services qu'il offre à la profession.

Initiative 3 : Cueillette de données internes

Le Barreau envisagerait la cueillette de données internes complémentaires sur les questions relatives à la racialisation dans le processus de réglementation.

Initiative 4 : Développer une image publique plus diversifiée du Barreau du Haut-Canada

Le Barreau envisagerait des stratégies pour développer une image publique plus diversifiée et inclusive.

Analyse de base

Actuellement, dans le cadre de son processus d'appel d'offres, le Barreau exige que les fournisseurs ayant plus de 50 employés et les cabinets comprenant plus de 50 avocats se conforment au Code des droits de la personne, à la Loi sur la santé et la sécurité au travail (LSST), s'il y a lieu, et à la Politique de prévention contre le harcèlement et la discrimination du Barreau du Haut-Canada.

Le Barreau pourrait renforcer les exigences du programme de conformité en matière d'équité en incluant une demande d'examen des données démographiques au cours du processus de sélection.

Le Barreau du Haut-Canada s'est également engagé à faire en sorte que ses politiques, ses programmes et ses pratiques soient inclusifs et accessibles. Afin de s'en assurer, le Barreau pourrait demander à une tierce partie externe de mener une vérification opérationnelle de l'équité des services qu'elle offre à la profession. Cette vérification se concentrerait sur les employés du Barreau qui offrent des services directement à la profession. Une vérification de l'équité permettrait d'identifier les difficultés et progrès reliés à l'intégration des principes et pratiques d'équité dans les activités du Barreau.

Le Barreau pourrait aussi déterminer si des données supplémentaires, de meilleures données ou d'autres renseignements devraient être recueillis à l'interne concernant les questions de réglementation, y compris les plaintes et les enquêtes, relativement à l'incidence et à l'impact de la racialisation.

Un nombre important de participants racialisés et non racialisés au processus de mobilisation approuvent la suggestion que le Barreau développe une image publique plus diversifiée et inclusive. Le Barreau pourrait envisager des initiatives qui rendraient son image publique plus diversifiée et inclusive. On pourrait obtenir des commentaires du Groupe consultatif en matière d'équité, qui est composé d'associations partenaires et de membres individuels qui possèdent une expertise dans les questions liées à l'équité et à la diversité. Le Groupe de travail sur la gouvernance pourrait obtenir le soutien du personnel et des commentaires supplémentaires du Service de l'équité, du Service des affaires publiques et du Service des communications du Barreau.

CONCLUSION

Le Barreau s'est engagé à promouvoir une profession qui est représentative de tous les peuples de l'Ontario et qui est inclusive et exempte de discrimination et de harcèlement. Le processus de mobilisation a cerné un certain nombre d'obstacles qui touchent les titulaires racialisés tout au long de leur carrière.

Le Groupe de travail a examiné ces obstacles et les défis à relever en raison de la discrimination, du racisme flagrant, des différences culturelles, du manque de mentors, de parraineurs, de modèles et de possibilités de réseautage et en raison d'autres facteurs systémiques. Par conséquent, il a cerné un certain nombre d'initiatives possibles qui pourraient relever certains de ces défis.

Les initiatives proposées sont présentées à la profession, et nous vous invitons à nous faire part de vos commentaires.

Annexe 1 — Racialisation et taille des cabinets selon les données du Barreau sur les avocats et les parajuristes d'avril 2014

Tableau 1 — Professionnels exerçant seuls — en pourcentages

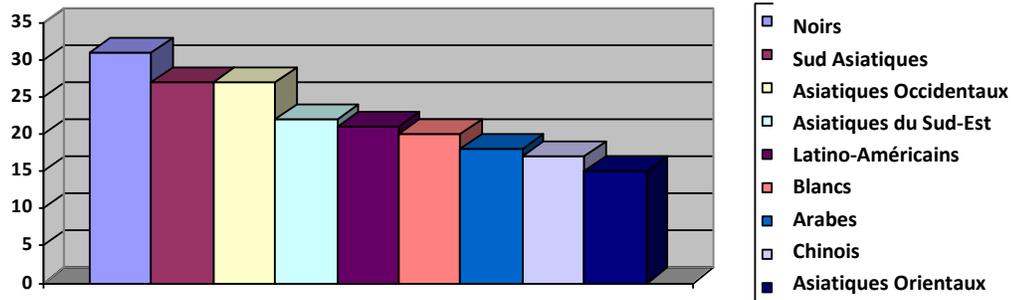

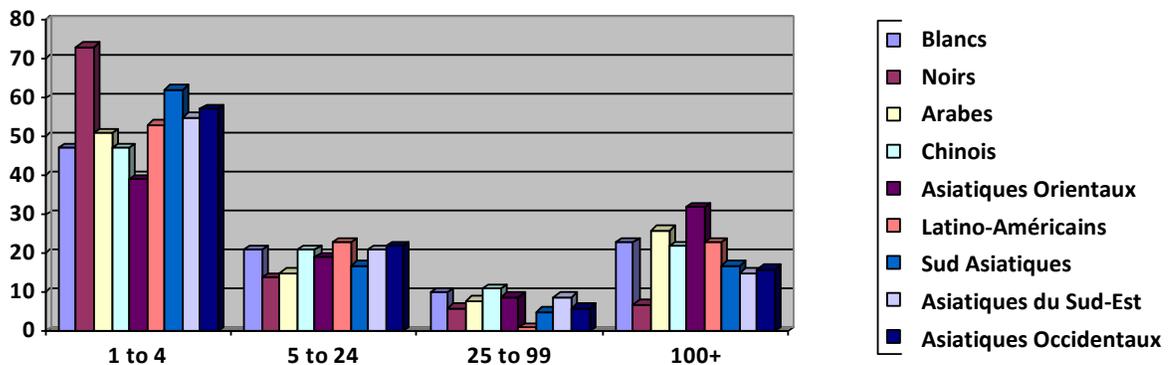

Tableau 2 — Par taille du cabinet — en pourcentages

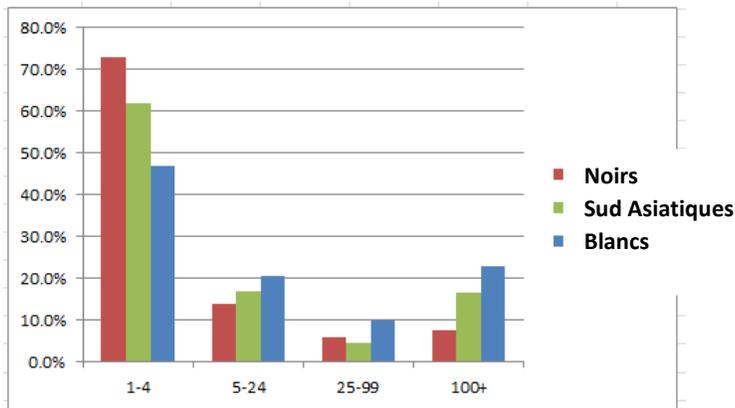

Le tableau 1 montre que les avocates et avocats Noirs, Sud-Asiatiques et Asiatiques Occidentaux sont proportionnellement plus susceptibles d'exercer seuls.

Le tableau 2 montre que les avocates et avocats Noirs et Sud-Asiatiques sont proportionnellement plus susceptibles d'exercer seuls ou dans de petits cabinets et proportionnellement beaucoup moins susceptibles d'exercer dans de grands ou moyens cabinets.

Le tableau 2 est difficile à interpréter, car il comporte une comparaison entre plusieurs groupes. Pour faciliter sa compréhension, le tableau 3 ci-dessous montre la taille des cabinets dans lesquels exercent les avocats Noirs, Blancs et Sud-Asiatiques.

Tableau 3 — Par taille du cabinet — en pourcentages

Le tableau 3 montre plus clairement les différentes tendances des cabinets où exercent les avocats Noirs, Sud-Asiatiques et Blancs. Les avocates et avocats Noirs et, dans une moindre mesure, les Sud-Asiatiques, exercent de façon disproportionnée dans les plus petits cabinets. Il y a relativement peu d'avocats Noirs qui exercent dans les cabinets les plus grands, alors que les proportions d'avocats Sud-Asiatiques et des Avocats Blancs dans les plus grands cabinets ne sont pas si différents.

Executive Summary

In September 2011 the governing body of the Law Society of Upper Canada identified the following as a priority: “considering the development of programs to encourage law firms to enhance diversity within firms, based on identified needs, and create reporting mechanisms.” As a result, Convocation created the Working Group on Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees<sup>1</sup>.

Under the direction of the Working Group and managed by the Equity Initiatives Department of the Law Society, Strategic Communications Inc. (Stratcom), was contracted to design and conduct research to identify:

- ▶ Challenges faced by racialized lawyers and paralegals in different practice environments, including entry into practice and advancement;
- ▶ Factors and practice challenges that could increase the risk of regulatory complaints and discipline, and;
- ▶ Identify perceptions of best practices for preventive remedial and/or support strategies.

Components of this research project included a planning phase, key informant interviews, focus groups and an online survey advertised to all licensees in good standing. This report integrates the results of the qualitative research (interviews and focus groups) with in-depth analysis of the quantitative findings (online survey). Presentation of the results combines charts and tables with written interpretation.

<sup>1</sup> For the purposes of this research project and throughout this report the term ‘racialized’ is defined as follows: “Racialized expresses race as the process by which groups are socially constructed, as well as to modes of self-identification related to race, and includes Arab, Black (e.g. African-Canadian, African, Caribbean), Chinese, East-Asian (e.g. Indo-Canadian, Indian Subcontinent) South-East Asian ( e.g. Vietnamese, Cambodian, Thai, Filipino) and West Asian (e.g., Iranian, Afghan) persons.”

2. Methods

Following a planning phase (March 15 to May 31, 2013) the research team developed the final research design and finalized the analytical framework ('issues matrix,') to identify research priorities and gaps in knowledge which provided the basis for the final research design (Appendix A).

This study has a mixed method design, by which we mean that it is comprised of qualitative (interviews/focus groups) as well as quantitative (survey) methods. The purpose of this approach is to generate a rich and detailed account of experiences from licensees' perspectives, and then measure or validate those findings across the whole population of licensees. Using the issue matrix as our starting point, each phase of the research process built on the previous phase, taking into account results from the previous phase, as shown in Figure 1 below.

Survey of Licensees

The final phase of the research project entailed drafting and fielding an online survey advertised to all members of the Law Society in good standing. Following a process of review and refinement, an online survey comprised of 35 questions, including six question 'banks' and seven open-ended questions and taking approximately 25 minutes to complete, was posted from October 25 to November 18, 2013 . The online survey was advertised in advance through Law Society communications channels including email to all licensees' work address and website promotions.

A total of 5,454 licensees accessed the survey and 3,296 completed the survey, 3,237 in English (98%) and 59 in French (2%). Further details about this study population, and the post-interview treatment of the data, are discussed in the section 'Profile of Survey Study Respondents', below.

3. Key Informant Interviews and Focus Groups

Key Informants

Key informants depicted to us a landscape in which racialization is a constant and persistent factor affecting students, young licensees during their entry into practice, and opportunities for career advancement. This is true (in distinctive ways) in all types of practice environment, they told us. Racialization generates numerous specific challenges that operate in subtle ways, reflecting their systemic character, and that may be amplified by individuals' lifestyles, socio-economic status, age, gender, national origin, and educational pedigree.

Analysis and conclusions arising from the Key Informant process is presented in six sub-sections:

- Discrimination
- Networks and Support
- Cultural Differences
- Internationally-trained
- Solutions/Best Practices
- Complaints

Focus Groups

Through the focus groups we sought a deeper analysis of the claims made by the key informants. Focus group participants offered an extensive and detailed account of the challenges confronting racialized licensees. An overarching narrative emerged of the extent to which racial identity is a pervasive factor in shaping the experiences, choices and career outcomes of racialized lawyers and paralegals.

Focus groups findings are discussed in detail in in seven sub-sections:

- Discrimination & Stereotyping
- ‘Fit’ and Cultural Difference
- Gender, Age and Pedigree
- Converging Experience of the ‘Outgroup’
- Best Practices to Address Barriers and Challenges of Racialization
- Complaints & Discipline
- Reaction to this Research

4. Survey Research: Profile of Participants

Research Issues

Whereas interviews and focus groups are not expected to represent the whole population, but rather to provide qualitative insight into the concepts, narratives, ideas and experiences of the study population, the quantitative survey intended to generate insights applicable to all licensees as a community and as a collection of subgroups.

The focus of this research is innovative and studying it raises concerns for some members of Ontario’s legal community as we learned in the planning process from benchers, staff and the literature, and from some licensees during the survey process. For these reasons it is important to understand how we addressed them in the design of the survey – namely how we qualified individuals as ‘racialized’ (screening), and how we ensured that the views of all licensees are accurately portrayed in the data and final report (representativeness).

Racialization, Race, Ethnicity

As it is defined in the introduction to this report, ‘racialization’ is not directly equivalent to the related social markers of race, ethnic origin, or identity as a ‘visible minority’. Because racialization is explicitly defined for purposes of this study as either or both an imposed or chosen self-identity, respondents to the survey are the only source of knowledge about their own status as racialized or non-racialized, in contrast to ‘race’ and ‘visible minority’ that purport to be objective markers regardless of an individual’s experience.

In this study therefore, racialization is taken at face value – respondents who answered ‘yes I am racialized’ are considered to be members of the population of racialized licensees, regardless of any other racial or ethnic markers of their identity.

As the data in this Section 4 illustrates, the degree of concordance between racialization and more traditional notions of race and ethnicity (Black, East Asian, Caucasian, etc.) differs by subgroup of the population (Chart 2). We reflect further on these meanings in the body of the report.

Representativeness of the Survey Populations

The research design required responses from both racialized and non-racialized licensees, but due to the subject matter of the study – which was widely known to LSUC members and stated clearly in the survey invitation – there was a large response from licensees who self-identify as racialized, compared to the proportion of the total population they actually comprise.

This is not unusual in quantitative studies, and can be corrected for, provided the source and scale of the numeric over- or under-representation of particular subgroups are understood. A typical remedy is to ‘weight’ the survey data so that the results align with the known (or precisely estimated) proportions from a census or other prior reliable quantitative study.

We undertook a two-step method to achieve an overall representative sample. First, we used a weight raking (sample balancing) algorithm to adjust the samples of lawyers and paralegals separately, using the 2010 Law Society snapshot documents as estimates of the true proportions of different subgroups of licensees. Second, the lawyer and paralegal subsamples were then combined and weighted to their correct proportions vis-a-vis one another. The overall population proportions of lawyers and paralegals were deduced from the total number of 2010 snapshot responses and the snapshot response rates for lawyers and paralegals, respectively. The weighting process yielded a sample that produces representative, unbiased estimates of the views and opinions of Law Society licensees.

Sections 4.3 and 4.4 describes the weighting process in greater detail, compare the raw results of the online survey with the final study population of lawyers (Table 2) and paralegals (Table 3), and provide other demographic and practice environment comparisons (Tables 4 and 5)

Composition of Racialized licensees

In the final weighted study population, just over one-in-five (22%) licensees self-identify as racialized and a further 11% say they are unsure. Two-thirds (67%) self-identify as non-racialized.

5. Experience of Licensees

Two banks of questions (Q16 and Q17) asked racialized and non-racialized survey participants about their experience in the transition from school to articling, during entry into practice, and career advancement.

What emerged from the survey results is an overview of the landscape of career challenges faced by both groups which illustrates the breadth and depth of divergent experiences of racialized and non-racialized licensees, as well as those points where there is a convergence of experience between the two main groups of respondents or sub-groups within them.

Key findings from this section include:

- ▶ Racialized licensees reported lower success rates across a range of key measures related to articling/training placement, finding a suitable first job, and finding employment in a suitable practice environment (Chart 3)
- ▶ Racialized licensees were twice as likely as their non-racialized counterparts to report less rapid career advancement than their colleagues with similar qualifications (52% compared to 25%) (Chart 3)
- ▶ Racialized licensees were twice as likely as non-racialized to report having felt disadvantaged in law school (38% compared to 17%) (Chart 4)
- ▶ From a list of 17 factors identified as potential barriers during entry into practice and after entry, two fifths of racialized licensees (40% during, 43% after entry) ranked their ethnic /racial identity as the most serious barrier, compared to 3% and 4% of non-racialized licensees respectively. (Tables 6 & 7)

- ▶ With one exception, a larger percentage of racialized licensees than non-racialized licensees identified each of the 17 factors listed more frequently (Tables 6 &7).
- ▶ A cluster of issues associated with gender illustrated some convergence in the experience of women in both groups of survey respondents, while also highlighting the extent to which racialization amplifies barriers associated with gender (Table 6 & 7).

6. Impacts of Racialization

This section explored the extent to which identified challenges or barriers are perceived by racialized licensees to have disadvantaged them at any stage of their career (Q21). Results reported in this section are based on questions addressed to racialized licensees only.

Key findings from this section include:

- ▶ Sources of career disadvantage related to national origins included: different accent than your colleagues (21%), not raised in Canada (18%), do not speak English/French as well as peers (16%), and received training outside Canada (12%). On this group of overlapping issues up to two-fifths of those whose first language is neither French nor English or are born outside Canada flagged these issues as sources of career disadvantage (Chart 6).
- ▶ Two thirds (68%) identified not having grown up with a network of professional contacts, 65% identified not having the same cultural background as their colleagues, and 50% named prejudice based on race as the top three factors (from a list of 17) that had disadvantaged them at any staged in their career (Chart 7).
- ▶ Women, sole practitioners, first language neither French nor English, and those born outside Canada were among those groups most likely to cite all three of the factors listed above (no professional network, cultural background, racial prejudice) as sources of career disadvantage. (Chart 7, discussion)

- ▶ Ethno-racial groups most likely to cite the same factors as a source of career disadvantage included: Black, South Asian, Chinese, and Arab. (Chart 7, discussion)
- ▶ Two-fifths (42%) of all racialized licensees identified expectations to perform to a higher standard than others based on racial stereotypes as being a source of disadvantage in hiring, advancement or pursuit of an area of practice (Chart 8).

7. Solutions (Remedies and Best Practices)

---

This section explored the opinions of racialized and non-racialized licensees regarding the implications of the challenges faced by racialized licensees, and the remedies or best practices that should be followed to address those challenges.

Key findings include:

- ▶ More than four-fifths of racialized (83%) and three-fifths of non-racialized licensees (62%) agreed that racialized licensees face (much more/somewhat more) challenges to their entry into practice and advancement compared to their non-racialized colleagues. (Chart 9)
- ▶ At least half of respondents in both groups agreed that the challenges faced by racialized licensees: impact the reputation of the legal system in Ontario (78% racialized, 62% non-racialized), affect access to justice for Ontarians (75% racialized, 54% non-racialized) and affect the quality of legal services for the public (69% racialized, 50% non-racialized) (Chart 11).
- ▶ Asked if the increased number of racialized lawyers and paralegals would have a positive or negative impact on the public of Ontario, 82% of racialized respondents indicated it would have a very positive (58%) or somewhat positive (24%) impact. This compared to 76% of non-racialized respondents (40% very positive, 36% somewhat positive) (Chart 12)

- ▶ A majority of racialized licenses endorsed 18 of a list of twenty measures on the subject of making the legal profession more inclusive. A majority of non-racialized licenses endorsed six of the measures listed. (Chart 16)
- ▶ The top three measures to promote inclusivity endorsed by both groups were: more mentorship programs to deliver professional guidance and access to networks for racialized licensees (82% racialized, 78% non-racialized), greater and timely transparency of hiring criteria (80% racialized, 75% non-racialized), and develop a more diverse public face/image for the Law Society (71% racialized, 60% non-racialized) (Chart 16)

8. Complaints and Discipline

Based on themes and issues that had surfaced in the Focus Group phase of research, a final series of questions explored the views of licensees regarding the possible risks of complaints and discipline associated with the challenges faced by racialized licensees.

Key findings include:

- ▶ A majority of racialized respondents agreed that nine of the 10 factors listed would be likely to increase the risk of complaints against racialized licensees. A majority of non-racialized licensees agreed that three of the 10 factors listed were likely to increase the risk of complaints (Chart 20).
- ▶ Risk factors flagged by a majority in both groups included: lack of mentors and professional networks to deal with practice challenges (78% racialized, 63% non-racialized), racial stereotyping by clients (71% racialized, 57% non-racialized), and lower quality articling positions and inadequate training (70% racialized, 51% non-racialized) (Chart 20).
- ▶ Asked if a differentiation should be made in the regulatory processes with respect to racialized licensees in certain circumstances, 17% of racialized and 9% of non-racialized answered yes (Chart 21).

9. Conclusion

The goal of this research project, to identify challenges faced by racialized lawyers and paralegals in different practice environments, including entry into practice and advancement, proved to be ambitious, complex and at different points methodologically challenging. Nevertheless, the scope and methods of the research yielded a nuanced account of the experience of racialized licensees.

Key Informants depicted a landscape in which racialization is a “consistent and persistent factor” affecting racialized licensees across the arc of their careers as students, during and after entry into practice. From the focus group phase of research there emerged an “overarching narrative of the extent to which racial identity is a pervasive factor in shaping the experiences, choices and career outcomes of racialized lawyers and paralegals.”

Findings of the survey research demonstrated the extent to which racialization establishes a measurable constellation of career challenges for racialized licensees that are distinct from those of their non-racialized colleagues: challenges that are rooted in their racialized status as well as many related challenges that are compounded and amplified as a consequence of the racialization process. In comparison with their non-racialized colleagues, racialized licensees and specific sub-groups encounter quantitatively more severe challenges during and after entry into practice, yielding measurably greater negative impacts throughout their careers.

As noted in this report not all non-racialized licensees acknowledged the significance and unique challenges associated with the process of racialization. However, one important finding, highlighted in the survey phase, was that a strong majority of non-racialized licensees recognize that ‘racialization exists,’ that the challenges faced by racialized licensees have negative consequences for the legal professions and the public, and that pro-active measures are called for to enhance inclusiveness. Results reported in Section 7 demonstrate a substantial overlap across the racial divide, reflected both in shared opinions regarding the value, scope and direction of change, as well as endorsement for specific measures to address the challenges of racialization and make the legal professions more inclusive.

The methodology and findings of this research will provide the basis for further targeted exploration of the issues associated with the challenges of racialization encountered by specific groups, career stages and practice environments. It is hoped that these results will also lend support to the ongoing effort to design and implement practical measures to reduce the challenges associated with racialization and promote inclusiveness within the legal professions.

1. Introduction

<sup>2</sup> For the purposes of this research project and throughout this report the term ‘racialized’ is defined as follows: “Racialized expresses race as the process by which groups are socially constructed, as well as to modes of self-identification related to race, and includes Arab, Black (e.g. African-Canadian, African, Caribbean), Chinese, East-Asian (e.g. Indo-Canadian, Indian Subcontinent) South-East Asian ( e.g. Vietnamese, Cambodian, Thai, Filipino) and West Asian (e.g., Iranian, Afghan) persons.

2. Methods

2.1 The Research Planning Process

Following completion of the research agreement (March 15, 2013) a kick-off meeting was convened to confirm the project goals and objectives, and present the research methodology outlined in the project proposal. Subsequently, the consulting team prepared an issues matrix to identify gaps in the existing research, set research priorities and ensure that this project is integrated with what has been done in the past. Between March 15 and May 31 seven conferences/meetings were convened with Working Group members and with staff to review various aspects of the project, existing knowledge and hypotheses, and research methods.

From this planning phase, the research team developed the final research design and an analytical framework (aka 'issues matrix') to identify research priorities and gaps in knowledge (Appendix A).<sup>3</sup>

2.2 Research Methods

This study has a mixed method design, by which we mean that it is comprised of both qualitative (interviews/focus groups) as well as quantitative (survey) methods. The purpose of this approach is to generate a rich and detailed account of experiences from licensees' perspectives, and then measure or validate those findings across the whole population of licensees. Using the issue matrix as our starting point, each phase of the research process built on the previous phase, taking into account unexpected as well as expected results in the previous phase, as shown in Figure 1 below.

<sup>3</sup> Meetings and conferences conducted between March 15 and May 31 included the Working Group on Challenges Facing Racialized Licensees, the Chair of the Working Group, Equity Advisor, Equity Initiatives Department Staff, the Treasurer, CEO, and Director of Professional Regulation and Discrimination.

2.2.1 Key Informant Interviews

Between May 24 and June 24 2013, the research team conducted 20 key informant interviews, with a total of 27 individuals. Two of the interviews included two key informants, and one interview was an in-person consultation, with three members of the research team interviewing six individuals. Three of the 27 key informants self-identified as non-racialized.

Key informants were selected under the direction of the Working Group and the Equity Advisor, although three of the nominated participants could not be reached or declined to participate. In two cases the representatives of organizations with an interest in the issues nominated additional individuals to participate in the interview process.

Individual key informants were guaranteed anonymity as a condition of being interviewed. However, with their permission Appendix B lists the associations of licensees, and in one case a training program, that were represented in the interview process.

The key informant protocol covered individuals' backgrounds, organizational focus and priorities, perceptions of racialization, the role and impact of racialization as a factor affecting entry into the profession, career advancement in different practice environments, representation and retention, complaints and discipline, and access to justice for Ontarians. Interview questions also explored the intersection with issues not directly associated with racialization, recommendations of specific measures to deal with the challenges faced by racialized licensees and the role of the Law Society in addressing issues associated with racialization (Appendix C).

2.2.2 Focus Groups

In May 2013 the Law Society invited lawyers and paralegals in good standing and who self-identified as racialized, to participate in focus groups scheduled from June 19 to August 15, to be convened in Toronto, Ottawa and London. The invitation was communicated to members by email and promoted on the Law Society website. Racialized licensees were provided a link where they could register online by completing a short survey which included questions about years in practice, practice environment, Canadian or foreign training, race/ethnicity, gender and age.

Individuals who registered online and identified themselves as racialized, were contacted by telephone and screened for their availability to participate in specific groups and on specific dates. From an initial group of 503 online volunteers, approximately 115 individuals who were qualified and invited to participate, and 103 racialized licensees eventually participated in 14 groups. In addition a pair of focus groups was held with non-racialized licensees. The 13 participants in these two groups (seven women and six men) were recruited from among a subset of online focus group volunteers who self-identified as non-racialized.

Focus group discussions were guided by a series of thematic questions, based on the insights of key informants but testing their validity in the experience of lawyers and paralegals (Appendix D). Themes included reflections on the profession, perceptions and impressions regarding the challenges faced by racialized licensees, impacts of racialization, the risk of complaints and discipline associated with racialization, and recommendations regarding best practices and remedies. A modified Moderator's Guide was prepared for the two groups of non-racialized participants (Appendix E).

The findings from the focus group research, which are incorporated in this report, have also been submitted in a separate report, Focus Group Findings: Preliminary Overview (September, 2013).

2.2.3 Survey of Licensees

The final phase of the research project entailed the drafting and fielding of an online survey advertised to all members of the Law Society in good standing.

Following a process of review and refinement an online survey, comprised of 35 questions, including six question 'banks' and seven open-ended questions and taking approximately 25 minutes to complete, was posted from October 25 to November 18, 2013 (Appendix F). The online survey was advertised in advance through Law Society communications channels, including email to all licensees work addresses, and website promotions. Members were notified by email and invited to participate immediately prior to the posting of the survey and reminded by email twice during the period that the survey was accessible online.

A total of 5,454 licensees accessed the survey and 3,296 completed the survey, 3,237 in English (98%) and 59 in French (2%). Further details about this study population, and the post-interview treatment of the data, are discussed in the section 'Profile of Survey Study Respondents', below.

3. Key Informants and Focus Groups

3.1 What's the issue?

Practising law or providing legal services in Ontario poses many challenges – and opportunities – for those who pursue it as a career. The research design of this study focused on the experiences of racialized licensees, but also took into account the perceptions of non-racialized licensees with respect to their entry into practice and career advancement. Insight into the experiences of the whole population is critical for contextualizing, and understanding, the experiences of racialized licensees in particular.

The analytical framework, developed after a literature review, grouped issues in two categories:

Tier 1 issues comprise the major areas of licensees' experience – Recruitment and Hiring, Career Paths (general), Advancement in Mid-sized and Large Firms, Risk of Complaints and Discipline – in which racialization may, based on previous research, be playing a significant role in terms of observed outcomes. These research areas potentially involve systemic, cultural, intercultural and interactive dynamics among and between licensees, clients, regulators, and the wider legal environment including the public of Ontario.

Tier 2 issues are equally important, but identify dynamics or drivers that are, from a research perspective, less complex to observe – such as Direct and Overt Discrimination and Bias – or appear to involve less interaction dynamics with other drivers such as the tendency of racialized lawyers to be over-represented in immigration, poverty, and criminal law and under-represented in real estate and insurance (broadly, Areas of Law), and why there is over-representation of racialized individuals among Ontario university graduates, and in medicine and engineering but not in the legal profession (Incidents of Representation).<sup>4</sup>

Each of the seven categories identified and grouped in the two-tier issues matrix/analytical framework was accompanied by a short description of the scope of the issue and a discussion of the key research gaps/questions. The analytical framework and the gaps identified guided the subsequent design of the main research instruments, especially the key informant guide.

3.1.2 Insights from Key Informants

Although the key informants differed on specific observations and concerns, those who are themselves racialized depicted to us a landscape in which racialization is a constant and persistent factor affecting students, young licensees during their entry into practice, and opportunities for career advancement. This is true (in distinctive ways) in all types of practice environment, they told us. Racialization generates numerous specific challenges that operate in subtle ways, reflecting their systemic character, and that may be amplified by individuals' lifestyles, socio-economic status, age, gender, national origin, and educational pedigree.

Despite the complex and subtle racialization process, these informants also told us that overt discrimination and bias still exist in the Ontario legal community, operating through social dynamics as well as professional/business mechanisms. These do not, by themselves, exhaust the drivers that make up the racialization process, but are significant contributors to impacts that affect everything from career opportunities and earnings for individual licensees to the profession as a whole, and ultimately, access to justice in Ontario.

Through the key informants we got a strong indication that:

Discrimination: Overt discrimination and bias – often unconscious – is a feature of daily life for many, or most, racialized licensees. Informants reported numerous incidents in which licensees were subjected to negative stereotypes, and made to work harder or suffer greater consequences for errors than non-racialized colleagues. These stereotypes are reinforced by the under-representation of racialized members among the judiciary and managing partners of the mid- and large firms. Some overt racism is at play in some quarters, we were told.

Networks & Support: Racialized students and licensees are seen as more isolated from professional support networks and find it harder to gain a mentor than non-racialized licensees, on average. Racialized law licensees often come from immigrant families or are starting out without family networks that include lawyers or other professionals, so are thought not to have the same opportunities in law school or their entry into practice as non-racialized licensees. Some key informants noted that this lack of social connections can remain a barrier throughout a career if, for example, a licensee begins practice by building their client base within their own ethnic community where such networks are still sparse.

Cultural differences: The ‘fit’ between individual licensees and their employers, colleagues, the courts, or clients are a systemic barrier to entry and career advancement for many racialized licensees. This domain of ‘intercultural’ competence operates in all directions, contributing to self-selection out of further challenges (by individual licensees) as well as reinforcing unconscious biases of colleagues and employers that seem to justify discriminatory behaviour. This factor manifests strongly in the continued use of social events and lifestyle pursuits as channels for career opportunities and professional advancement, and results in individuals feeling isolated, overlooked, marginalized, and under-valued. This is thought to be especially important as a ‘glass ceiling’ that reduces the representation of racialized licensees in partnerships and other leadership roles in the profession which, in turn, reinforces stereotypes about racialized licensees’ fitness as legal professionals.

*Female Lawyer,
key informant*

Internationally-trained: Being born and/or educated outside Canada is a particular source of barriers for racialized licensees (beyond the need to be re-certified in Ontario) because it means a licensee may have a combination of important disadvantages – small (or no) professional network; language challenges in a profession that values this skill above all; lifestyle or culture that is different than their colleagues; a ‘foreign-sounding’ name or educational pedigree that attracts negative stereotyping. Particularly acute barriers, according to our key informants, are presented by the fact that foreign-trained licensees do not participate in the critical transition from law school to a first professional position in Ontario and so are generally seeking to practise without the network of contacts, mentors, and opportunities that Ontario-trained licensees take for granted. Gaining these ‘standard’ advantages can be more difficult for racialized, as opposed to non-racialized, licensees.

Solutions/Best Practices: There is wide acknowledgement that strong mentoring is a critical edge that differentiates many successful legal professionals from their peers. More systematic and effective mentoring – championed by the Law Society – is thought to be a critical response to the challenges facing racialized licensees. Numerous key informants also support the collection and circulation of more detailed statistics on racialization within firms, similar to approaches taken in the United States where transparency about the makeup of firms’ staff supports greater representation by racialized lawyers. This approach dovetails with greater use of procurement rules by government and the corporate sector, where good intentions about hiring diversity-oriented law firms is seen as lacking effective action. There is also a suggestion that a systematic review of recruitment, articling, and hiring practices is needed, possibly led by the Law Society, to develop specific strategies for the removal of systemic barriers facing racialized licensees. These steps should include unifying the articling system to avoid a two-tier system that enables discrimination against racialized licensees; encouraging standardized interviewing procedures that reduce the impact of 'fit' as a screening method; and including business management in the core curriculum for lawyers and paralegals.

Complaints: Because of their higher likelihood to become sole practitioners, and/or to come from backgrounds where professional life is the exception rather than the rule, racialized licensees are thought to be more exposed to the negative aspects of the free market – often starting with fewer connections to a large or affluent client base, and without sufficient education in the 'business' of a legal practice. There is also anecdotal evidence that many take the pragmatic approach when starting their career, appealing to their own local ethnic/cultural community for business, which may (in some instances) expose them to unreasonable expectations about the scope and efficacy of their practice and, ultimately, complaints from clients. Key informants also referred to discrimination by employers, regulators and the judiciary – citing specific examples of situations in which racialized lawyers and paralegals appeared to receive greater scrutiny for infractions than is typically the case when committed by non-racialized lawyers.

3.2 Focus Group Findings

Through the focus groups we sought a deeper analysis of the claims made by the key informants.

Focus group participants offered an extensive and detailed account of the challenges confronting racialized licensees. An overarching narrative emerged of the extent to which racial identity is a pervasive factor in shaping the experiences, choices and career outcomes of racialized lawyers and paralegals.

Some participants recounted experiences where their racialized status was a positive factor in finding employment or contributing to the benefits they were able to offer their employer. Others viewed the challenges associated with racialization as secondary to their overall career trajectory – but many of this latter group of individuals went on to interpret their own experience as 'the exception that proves the rule', one saying that since he is already successful in his career, his experience is not the norm.

More frequently, participants described experiences in which the challenges of racialization appeared as barriers to entering practice, finding and maintaining secure employment and career advancement, and in many instances imposing a competitive disadvantage in relation to their non-racialized colleagues.

Descriptions of the challenges of racialization ranged from being on the receiving end of cultural stereotyping or explicit racial discrimination, to accounts of how systemic barriers operate through law school, articling, recruitment, and advancement. The many and varied challenges described by focus group participants generated the overall impression that racialization is, as one focus group participant described, a “wall-to-wall” factor that is at play for racialized licensees at every stage of their career. The weight and meaning of racialization must be calibrated and negotiated in each specific professional environment and social context. The fact that cause and effect is often ambiguous or hidden does not render the challenges associated with racialization less pervasive or less serious. As a young paralegal observed, after recounting an extremely damaging experience with overt racism in a job training placement, he had come to see his own racialized status as a factor potentially at play in every situation: “You always wonder about it.”

Racialized participants’ accounts of the challenges they face, and comparisons with the accounts of non-racialized licensees, suggest that racialization is the driver of wide differences of professional experience for licensees.

Discrimination & Stereotyping

Focus group participants offered literally hundreds of examples of discriminatory behaviours, interactions, language and assumptions that were common features of their everyday professional experience. These experiences amount to barriers that occur across the entire arc of individual legal careers, from education, training and entry into the profession to advancement and career path, and in some case the decision to leave the profession.

Many described the experience of being stereotyped by culturally ignorant non-racialized colleagues and clients.

An Asian woman, a senior lawyer at a large firm, described how her manner and gestures were often misinterpreted, obliging her to work harder than her peers to overcome the challenges imposed on her by cross-cultural miscommunication. An experienced black sole practitioner reported that when she had worked for government earlier in her career she was asked on an almost daily basis for directions to the

““ When I was mooting one time, a judge, that was a lawyer, asked me a question. I looked up, and I thought about it...and he said ‘I shouldn't be so disrespectful as to roll my eyes and slam down my pen’... Meanwhile I had a partner who was Korean/Asian and very small and had different attributes attributed to her and she was ‘feisty’ and they just loved it. They [would say] I liked how you were really able to articulate that well and your passion was just shining through. It was two different stereotypes.”

mailroom, reflecting the questioners' assumptions that she was an unskilled employee. Betraying stereotypical assumptions about black people, colleagues who got to know her professionally would say, "Oh, you're actually very smart." One Asian lawyer who articulated in a Bay Street firm spoke about her experience with colleagues who assumed that she spoke "all Asian languages."

Unspoken assumptions that racialized licensees are less competent or effective often forces them to compete with non-racialized colleagues – a situation in which "you can't be just as good, you have to be better," as one focus group respondent said.

“ I landed a job and was doing shadowing, and the senior lawyer made a comment that he thought I was with IT.”

A young male South Asian lawyer

Reinforcing a theme that emerged from Key Informant interviews, focus group participants reported experiences on both sides of this dilemma. Some reported having to work harder than their non-racialized colleagues for the same job benefits and opportunities, and others wondered if race was a factor in the more rapid advancement of non-racialized colleagues of comparable or less merit. Still others reported suffering the consequences of lowered expectations in seeing opportunities for larger files and more challenging work diverted to non-racialized colleagues who were otherwise no more qualified or deserving. For example, a black female lawyer became tearful as she recounted the indignity of being provided with less administrative support than any of the other associates at her mid-sized firm.

Although focus group participants frequently described the types of discrimination they encountered as "subtle," "hidden" or "layered," many also described harsher experiences of overt racism. In almost every group one or more participants was moved to tears or anger in describing such an experience.

“ Law school was the most oppressive and racist environment I ever encountered.”

A male South Asian lawyer

Three licensees (two women lawyers and a male paralegal) described an explicitly racist encounter that derailed their articling or job placements, with long lasting negative consequences for their careers. An Ottawa lawyer recounted a job interview in which the non-racialized senior lawyer's "face fell" when he first saw her and she was forced to endure the humiliation of a meaningless interview for which she had assiduously prepared for.

Several participants described aggressive and hostile behaviour from judges and prosecutors that crossed the line from bad manners to outright racism. A foreign-trained Ottawa lawyer described an experience in an Ottawa courtroom in which he was ordered to memorize a judge's instruction. The judge instructed the lawyer, "Don't you dare take your pen out, I want you to remember this by heart!" and then grilled him on where he had done his schooling. The participants' conclusion from this experience was that it would not have occurred if he were white and had he taken his law degree at Queen's University.

“ I was actually called out in the courthouse as they didn't know who I was. I was the only person of colour in a suit and tie and was called the N word.”

A racialized paralegal

Finally, a few participants referenced serious past or current race related conflict that were either of too personal a nature or too complex to recount in the focus group context.

'Fit' and Cultural Difference

Many racialized licensees in the focus groups described experiences of being alienated from the dominant culture of firms or companies where they worked. Social events, frequently centered on alcohol consumption, often leave non-drinkers feeling outside the group, looking for inconspicuous ways to fit in: "You have to get used to the flow of alcohol." One participant referred to a colleague who carried a half-full wine glass at social events in order to avoid drawing attention to the fact that she did not drink. Another described the disparaging remarks of a senior lawyer regarding the "rules" that a racialized colleague lived by, an observation extrapolated from the fact that the racialized colleague was a non-drinker.

For many racialized licensees common features of the dominant (non-racialized) culture, such as social drinking, playing golf, 'going to the cottage', watching hockey – all represent points of contact, interaction and social solidarity for their non-racialized colleagues, but reinforce their own feelings of isolation and "otherness." Many also reported a parallel or overlapping experience in the culture of the work place. One lawyer conceded that notwithstanding his deliberate efforts to neutralize the racial/cultural gap, the senior partners at his firm interact differently with him than they do with his non-racialized colleagues: "There is a spark that is there with others. I am treated very formally by the senior partners."

“ As a new lawyer, 'fit' is: 'Do you play golf?' It goes to the business model, you're excluded if 'you're not like us.'”

Recent-call, black lawyer

The experience of being out of place in one’s surroundings also extends to the courtroom for many racialized lawyers and paralegals. A lawyer from a community outside of Toronto commented: “Sometimes when you enter an all-white courtroom and you’re making your arguments and building your case, you sometimes start to wonder, ‘Do I belong here?’” Feeling out of place in the courtroom is often reinforced by the actions of others. The individual quoted above described an experience common to many racialized licensees: “A gentleman came up to me and thought I was an interpreter and they tried to pair me with another Asian person in the courtroom. It is rather humorous.” Along the same lines a paralegal reported being mistaken for the client of the taller and blond woman she was representing. Stereotypical assumptions about who looks like what creates professional obstacles. A recently called lawyer observed that women and racialized lawyers are sometimes assumed to be paralegals and forced to wait for the attention of the court.

Gender, Age and Pedigree

The focus group results show that racialization intersects with a wide variety of other factors including language or accent, differences of professional status between lawyers and paralegals and whether licensees were trained in or outside of Canada. In each of these divisions there are factors that may mitigate or intensify the challenges associated with racialization. The intersection of these and other factors – age, sexual orientation, disability, geographic location – yields an incredibly complex and highly individuated pattern of experiences and impacts associated with the challenges of racialization.

In other words, racialization’s meanings can vary depending on circumstances. One senior lawyer observed that, “your client base and the profile of your firm will dictate what challenges you face.” In his own case, where his largest clients are major banks, he observed that if clients are “non-racialized and you are, and they are older and you aren’t, you may face challenges.” In this context racialization has less significance in dealings with clients who are younger/closer to one’s own age. “There typically isn’t a challenge between racialized and non-racialized people of the same age.” Illustrating the same point a group of male lawyers employed by medium-sized and large firms referenced their own professional experience and expressed doubts that racialization constituted a barrier to entry into the legal profession but all agreed that it might be a barrier when it comes to advancing to partnership.

The intersection of race and gender multiplies the challenges for women. One female lawyer pointed out the obvious but compelling fact that the power centre of the legal profession is not only white but male and many racialized women in

““ I guess people stereotype for a reason, which in this case is a Caucasian male. If you are not that you are the Other.”

Female, racialized lawyer

the focus groups perceived themselves disadvantaged in accessing employment in some practice environments, notably medium and large sized Bay Street law firms.

In a 'boys club' where extracurricular social activities are often also avenues to new work opportunities and advancement, racialized women perceive themselves as doubly disadvantaged. One lawyer observed that it is difficult for her to work on Bay St, where she is not interested in participating in the extracurricular activities that the "higher ups" also participate in, and that are often where new work opportunities and interesting files come from.

One young lawyer recounted a devastating experience that had caused her to leave the profession for several years:

“My disillusionment specifically came from lawyers themselves. I worked with a sole proprietor in criminal law. Time and time again, one of the things I was told was that being identifiably Muslim and being a female, I'm going to have a hard time in this profession. So it was one of those things. Just reliving that makes me upset... [The message was] to abandon my principles. My principal - throughout my articles, we'd have conversations on end about why it is that I practice my faith, why it is that I wear the hijab and stuff like that...”

In this particular instance the specific 'challenge' to entry into the profession appears as a combination of racialization, gender, religious practice and youth. Below, the survey findings show that racialized licensees consistently identify a wide range of social and demographic factors as barriers to entry and advancement, more frequently than their non-racialized counterparts.

While many racialized women voiced the opinion that there was no place for them working for a Bay Street law firm one participant offered a more positive perspective that nevertheless confirmed the general view that the barriers are real. Describing the medium-sized firm where she worked as "special" for its equal treatment of her and her peers, she described herself as the only visible minority woman at the firm. On the other hand, she also reported that her boss would send other lawyers to accompany her in court with the excuse that her presence alone will "look bad to the old boy's club." This participant explained this treatment as a combination of factors: her being a woman, racialized and a more recent call.

Converging Experience of the 'Outgroup'

There are numerous degrees of being made to feel excluded. Both racialized and non-racialized licensees with whom we spoke in focus groups felt that they were discriminated against for a variety of factors not directly associated with racialization. Some non-racialized respondents identified experiences of discrimination associated with their gender (women), age (too young or too old), and membership in an invisible minority (LGBT, Jewish) as factors that they felt represented challenges to entry and advancement comparable to the challenges that might be associated with racialization.

This means that there is often ‘convergence’ of the experience of non-racialized licensees with that of their racialized colleagues when it comes to being part of an ‘outgroup’ – women sharing experience with women, men with men, and so on. These experiences illustrate the extent to which challenges to entry and advancement are shared by specific sub-groups across the racial division.

For many racialized licensees a great deal of discrimination revolves around their name. Names are regularly misspelled or mispronounced. Foreign sounding names are often the trigger for patronizing and inappropriate questions about individuals’ backgrounds, years in Canada or the merits of their spoken English or French. Canadian-born and long-time residents are regularly treated as immigrants. For example, a Canadian-trained sole practitioner reported that despite having been in Canada for 16 years every time he sees senior counsel he is asked if he went to school in Canada or Iran.

Names are also perceived by many licensees as a genuine barrier to advancement. Difficulties that recruiters have reading or pronouncing an individual’s name, may be a factor in limiting the opportunity to move to the next stage of the hiring process. The problem is serious enough that many focus group participants shared that they had or had considered ‘anglicizing’ their name to improve their chances of clearing at least the initial recruitment hurdles. One lawyer expressed concern that if she became a partner at her firm the addition of a foreign sounding name might have a negative impact on how her firm was viewed. Acknowledging the seriousness of the issue, a sole practitioner opted for a different approach, adding an ‘a’ to her name in order to more explicitly show her ethnicity.

Best Practices to Address Barriers and Challenges of Racialization

Focus group participants recommended a wide range of best practices and solutions to address the challenges faced by racialized licensees, endorsing many of the ideas introduced to start the discussion. Among the most frequent mentions were a variety of recommendations for stronger mentorship and support, a much more pro-active role for the Law Society in promoting diversity in the profession, and a concerted and genuine effort by law firms to promote greater diversity.

Mentoring: Racialized lawyers and paralegals spoke frequently of the need for stronger mentorship, support and resources, adapted to the needs of racialized licensees. As an experienced sole practitioner put it: “If the Law Society were to take anything away from this focus group it’s that they need to combat isolation.” For many, the solution lies in stronger mentorship from racialized and non-racialized senior members of the profession. Having “senior white lawyers” mentoring and developing “relationships with minorities” is viewed by many as the key to more fully opening up the profession, and large firms in particular, to racialized lawyers.

Financial Measures: Accompanying suggestions for stronger, targeted mentorship programs many participants recommended a variety of financial measures, including discounting continuing education fees, and financial support for professional associations representing racialized licensees. Along the lines of the existing French language program, the Law Society should consider sponsoring English language training (“lawyer language”) for immigrants whose first language is not English. Many focus group participants also recommended a general lowering of fees for sole practitioners and paralegals, in recognition of the financial challenges that so many of them are facing.

Law Society: There is enthusiasm for a more pro-active role for the Law Society in developing its “voice” on diversity issues. Specific suggestions included more deliberately adapting the Continuing Professional Development Program (CPD) to the needs of racialized licensees, fostering greater diversity within the governing bodies of the Law Society and among those delivering the CPD program, and putting forward a more diverse public face. One lawyer recommended pro-active outreach within the whole profession.

“It’s wonderful that there are focus groups of racial people, but it is equally important for the Law Society to reach out to Caucasian lawyers and partners, and ask if they think there are issues with racialized lawyers. If they don’t feel it’s a relevant issue, there won’t be any change.”

Foreign-trained licensees identified the need for an alternative to the On Campus Interview (OCI) process, which would require a “lot of help from the Law Society” to close the existing gap between foreign-trained professionals and the job market, and create a “pool of immigrant lawyers” for firms and corporations to hire from. Along the same lines as their counterparts in other groups, foreign-trained licensees underlined the need for more networking events and opportunities with employers.

Licensees also see a role for the Law Society in promoting best practices within the legal profession and the corporate community, including encouraging corporate procurement policies and collection and reporting of diversity and gender composition of law firms. On the latter issue some participants registered concerns that promoting diversity reporting by law firms might in some ways distort the hiring process, with firms making hiring decisions based on diversity targets.

Opinion was divided on the issue of collecting data on racialization status in cases of complaints and discipline. While they allowed for the possibility that racialized licensees might be more vulnerable, some participants expressed concerns that release of such data might reinforce the existing biases of prospective clients against racialized lawyers and paralegals.

Law Firms: Opinion varied on the issue of how change would occur within law firms and the extent to which the trend toward increasing diversity was already underway. For some, the profession is in the process of becoming more diverse. Time and the business case for a more diverse legal team that can work in different communities, languages and countries will yield an appropriate level of diversity within the legal community. A larger proportion of participants were doubtful about both the direction and the momentum of change, recommending a variety of proactive measures to increase diversity within the legal community.

Many comments were related to changes in the hiring process. Hiring needs to be much more transparent, relying less on the concept of ‘fit’ or eliminating it altogether from the selection criteria. Law firms need to be pro-active in broadening the selection criteria they apply to the hiring process, crediting a wider range of life experiences among candidates rather than privileging experience and skills that favour ‘white males:’ “Just because you didn’t play lacrosse at school doesn’t mean you didn’t learn about time management and responsibility from looking after your sibling in a single parent family.”

The existence of diversity committees within law firms was acknowledged as a “great step” but many were critical of the tokenism and opportunism of some firms in developing a formulaic approach to diversity committees, and using racialized colleagues to promote the appearance of diversity and “give the impression that we care about it.” Diversity committees as they currently exist are the result of an externally driven process that lacks genuine commitment. One self-confessed “poster child” for her own firm’s diversity, declared the existing structure of the diversity committee is not acceptable and she would not recommend it.

Participants also endorsed cultural competence or sensitivity training for law firms, though one female lawyer was critical of superficial trainings she had experienced, and recommended a more sophisticated approach to address the more subtle forms of racism that are prevalent, and educate those who “might not even know they are racist.”

“If you don’t see partners who look like you, it is more difficult to have someone to follow... It’s much more difficult for someone to pay their dues and to keep sacrificing and compromising, when they don’t know there is something at the end to justify it.”

Judges and Prosecutors: Some participants noted the need for greater diversity among judges. One lawyer tied the issue of representation to a recent legal case where the chasing and beating of Asian anglers was not ruled a hate crime. He observed that the reaction of the Asian community was, “we are not part of the system.” Another lawyer was less convinced under representation was a reflection of racism or that proactive measures were necessary to increase the diversity of the bench, suggesting instead that the presence of “minorities” would inevitably increase over time.

As noted elsewhere in this report some racialized licensees, notably paralegals, reported harsh and discriminatory treatment by prosecutors. Referencing his own experience, one paralegal suggested that prosecutors should be held more strictly to the Rules of Conduct.

Complaints & Discipline

Focus group participants agreed that there may be factors contributing to making racialized licensees more vulnerable to complaints, most frequently citing a comparative lack of resources and training, and problems associated with poor communication and cultural misunderstanding. A handful also referred to the problem of bad faith clients from within the same community as the licensee. A smaller group of participants, represented in many of the 14 focus groups with racialized licensees, reported not having seen any evidence of factors contributing to increased complaints and discipline for racialized licensees.

In part due to their disproportionately high representation in sole practice, racialized licensees are more likely to face the elevated risks associated with that practice environment. For racialized sole practitioners the risks of complaint and discipline are likely to be higher because they are less likely to have stronger networks and supports within the profession, focus group participants said.

“Minorities practising on their own don't have the same resources as others do.” In contrast to poorly connected racialized licensees, “those who are better connected are more likely to be forgiven.”

Compounding the problem of limited resources, many racialized licensees have had limited access to mentorship and training, which increases the risk of reprimand. Reinforcing her case that high quality mentorship and articling positions are more difficult to come by for racialized licensees, a London lawyer commented: “My articling mentor was out for a year or two, and was shocked that she could be my principal.” Two other participants in the same group asserted that racialized sole practitioners are audited more frequently. One declared: “I've been audited over and over.”

Echoing a theme that surfaced in the Key Informant interviews, others identified language or accent as a factor increasing the risk of complaints. One senior paralegal with experience supervising racialized and non-racialized licensees noted that although the professional behaviour of the two groups was similar, racialized licensees were more likely to draw complaints from clients. She has concluded that there is a correlation between paralegals with accents and more frequent complaints. She noted that the most common phrase she heard from complaining clients was: "I just want to be served by someone who speaks English as their first language." Other paralegals and foreign-trained lawyers also made the point that licensees who are not fluent in English (or speak it with an unfamiliar accent) are more likely to experience miscommunication precipitating complaints.

On a related point some suggested that cultural differences or misinterpreted behaviour might trigger complaints. A paralegal reported that clients had complained about the "aggressive behaviour" of the black lawyers at her firm, while demonstrating a much higher tolerance for white lawyers who "scream" at their clients. Another paralegal reported encountering problems with colleagues or clients who interpreted her "look" as menacing.

Some felt that in some instances racialized licensees may be more vulnerable than their non-racialized counterparts to unfounded threats and complaints from bad faith clients within their own ethnic community. Illustrating the point, a sole practitioner reported that he was receiving threats of reporting issues to the Law Society that he judged would not happen with other non-racialized practitioners. Two paralegals in the same group described deliberate attempts to provoke (and record) professional misconduct, which both believed were, at least in part, racially motivated.

Reaction to this Research

A strong majority endorsed the research project into challenges faced by racialized licensees and the focus group process in particular. They welcomed the opportunity to share their experiences with other racialized licensees. On the other hand, participants in almost every group expressed some doubts about the process and a lack of confidence in the capacity of Law Society to effect meaningful change. As one senior London lawyer put: "The road to hell is paved with good intentions." Still others expressed the view that the evidence of racism and its consequences for racialized licensees was already clear and documented. They wondered aloud about the extent to which this research project is simply another justification to delay meaningful action. One lawyer from southwestern Ontario expressed her deep demoralization and disillusionment with both the Law Society and the practice of law: "As far as I'm concerned nobody cares if I close my practice tomorrow. No one cares if there is representation of minorities in the law. Nobody is hiring us."

4. Profile of Survey Respondents

4.1 What's the Issue?

Whereas interviews and focus groups are not expected to represent the whole population, but rather to provide qualitative insight into the concepts, narratives, ideas and experiences of the study population, the quantitative survey intended to generate insights applicable to all licensees as a community and as a collection of subgroups (racialized, non-racialized, paralegals, lawyers, etc.).

The focus of this research is innovative, and studying it raises concerns for some members of Ontario's legal community, as we learned in the planning process from benchers, staff and the literature. It is innovative in the sense that the key focus of the study – racialization – has not often been treated as a distinct phenomenon for study. Even the term 'racialization' is relatively new and some in the community (including among visible minorities) do not accept it as standard terminology. And although we received clear direction from the LSUC and Working Group throughout the research process, the study raises concerns for some community members who feel that the very act of studying racialization as a distinct phenomenon may produce stronger perceptions of its importance than are warranted in reality.

For these reasons, it is important to understand how we addressed them in the design of the survey – namely how we qualified individuals as 'racialized' (screening) and how we ensured that the views of all licensees are accurately portrayed in the data and final report (representativeness).

4.2 'Racialization', Race, and Ethnicity

As it is defined in the introduction to this report (see also Chart 1: Composition of Racialized Licensees), 'racialization' is not directly equivalent to the related social markers of race, ethnic origin, or identity as a 'visible minority'. Because racialization is explicitly defined for purposes of this study as either or both an imposed or chosen self-identity, respondents to the survey are the only source of knowledge about their own status as racialized or non-racialized, in contrast to 'race' and 'visible minority' that purport to be objective markers regardless of an individual's experience.

In this study therefore, racialization is taken at face value – respondents who answered 'yes I am racialized' are considered to be members of the population of racialized licensees, regardless of any other racial or ethnic markers of their identity.

As the data in this section illustrates, the degree of concordance between racialization and more traditional notions of race and ethnicity (Black, East Asian, Caucasian, etc.) differs by subgroup of the population. We reflect further on these meanings of identity below.

4.3 Representativeness in the Survey Population

We invited all licensees to participate in the survey. The research design required responses from both racialized and non-racialized licensees, but due to the subject matter of the study – which was widely known to LSUC members and stated clearly in the survey invitation – there was a large response from licensees who self-identify as racialized, compared to the proportion of the total population they actually comprise.

This is not unusual in quantitative studies, and can be corrected for provided the source and scale of the numeric over- or under-representation of particular subgroups are understood. A typical remedy is to ‘weight’ the survey data so that the results align with the known (or precisely estimated) proportions from a census or other prior reliable quantitative study.

In this study, however, we confronted a unique problem which is that this is the first time racialization has been used to define a sub-group of the legal profession in Ontario. To what should the proportion in our study be weighted? How do we know the ‘true’ proportion of racialized licensees to which we must weight our raw study population?

We undertook a two-step method to achieve an overall representative sample. First, we used a weight raking (sample balancing) algorithm to adjust the samples of lawyers and paralegals separately, using the 2010 Law Society snapshot documents as estimates of the true proportions of different subgroups of licensees. The survey data were weighted to align with the distributions for gender, age groups, racial and ethnic groups, type of practice and time since call to bar (lawyers only). It is important to highlight that the weighting process employed self-reported racial or ethnic groups and not the survey self-report question on racialization for weighting purposes. Using such a weight rating process is standard practice in survey methodology when adjusting for multiple weighting factors.

Second, the lawyer and paralegal subsamples were then combined and weighted to their correct proportions vis-a-vis one another. The overall population proportions of lawyers and paralegals were deduced from the total number of 2010 snapshot responses and the snapshot response rates for lawyers and paralegals, respectively.

This process results in a sample that produces representative, unbiased estimates of the views and opinions of Law Society licensees. The final study population of lawyers (Table 2) and paralegals (Table 3) are shown below, compared to the raw results of the online survey and the 2010 snapshot that was used to derive weights.

4.4 Racialization

In the final weighted study population, just over one-in-five (22%) licensees self-identify as racialized, and a further 11% say they are unsure. Two-thirds (67%) self-identify as non-racialized.

Chart 1 – Composition of Racialized licensees

In this survey we are seeking the opinions of both racialized and non-racialized licensed paralegals and lawyers. The term racialized refers to the process by which groups are socially constructed in terms of race, as well as to modes of self-identification related to race.

(Q9) Do you self-identify as racialized or non-racialized?

Weighted sample size = 3402 licensees

The breakdown for professional category is that 25% of paralegals say they are racialized, while 22% of lawyers indicated this.

Interestingly, cross tabulation of racialization to the typical ethno-racial identities as used by Statistics Canada reveals that there are different degrees of concordance for different subgroups. While the vast majority of black (95%) and Chinese (93%) see themselves as racialized, those of Arab (69%) and west Asian (64%) origins (for example) are much more likely to say they are either not racialized, or simply unsure.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>5</sup> In this question – which followed the question about racialization – respondents were presented with pre-coded ethno-racial identifiers such as ‘black’, ‘East Asian’, ‘Chinese’ each with example ethnicities that commonly fit under that term. There was also an ‘other’ open-ended box, which accounts for the additional references to ‘Jewish’ which was not included as a separate code, but which was represented frequently among ‘other’ mentions, justifying the addition to the list of ethno-racial identifiers.

For Aboriginal and Jewish licensees, racialization is a self-identity for less than half, further illustrating the multiplicity of identity and experience within groups that are often depicted as racially/ethnically uniform. The fact that 6% of licensees of Caucasian origin also identify as racialized demonstrates the overlap of racial markers between groups, or the fact that ‘racialization’ is still a very new concept to many people, or both.

4.5 Comparing Sub-groups (demographics)

As Table 4 illustrates, the population of racialized licensees are more likely to be young than their non-racialized colleagues. Fully 46% are under 40, compared to 29% for non-racialized licensees. And (not shown in the table below) the survey also revealed (Q 2) that whereas more than a third (37%) of racialized licensees were called within the past 5 years, that is true for only 22% of non-racialized licensees.

Racialized licensees are also more than three times as likely to be born outside Canada (44%) compared to non-racialized licensees (12%), and to have neither English nor French as their mother tongue (28% among racialized compared 6% among non-racialized). Sixteen percent (16%) received their law degree outside Canada, whereas among non-racialized licensees this figure is 6%.

Table 5 shows the data for racialized and non-racialized licenses, and lawyers and paralegals, by practice environment. Notable features of this table are that although the broad pattern of distribution across the practice environments is similar for both groups, the likelihood of being a sole practitioner or working in a small firm is 31% for racialized licensees, compared to 27% for non-racialized. In addition there is a greater chance of being unemployed if a licensee is racialized (7% vs. 4%).

In terms of practice areas, data in the tables below indicate some differences between racialized and non-racialized lawyers:

- As indicated to us in key informant interviews, racialized lawyers are more likely than their non-racialized counterparts to practice immigration (9% vs. 3%), and/or criminal/quasi-criminal (15% vs. 12%), but they are also more likely to be providing services in intellectual property law (12% vs. 8%). (Q7)

- Among paralegals, 82% of licensees practice in provincial offenses/summary offenses, compared to 56% among non-racialized. They are also more likely to practice in SABS and small claims, landlord/tenant, and human rights, but less likely to practice in property tax and workers' compensation. (Q8)

5. Experience of Licensees

5.1 What's the issue?

Building on the results of focus group research the survey phase sought to establish the context for understanding the experience of racialized licensees, and further define and measure the issues by asking racialized and non-racialized survey participants about their experience in the transition from school to articling, during entry into practice, and career advancement.

The issues explored were identified through the key informant and focus group process, which gave priority to the experiences, perceptions and concerns identified by racialized licensees. However, the key banks of questions were deliberately framed in neutral terms, and made no assumptions about differences of experience between the racialized and non-racialized licensees to whom they were addressed.

What emerges from this section of the report is an overview of the landscape of career challenges faced by both groups which illustrates the breadth and depth of divergent experiences of racialized and non-racialized licensees, as well as those points where there is a convergence of experience between the two main groups of respondents or sub-groups within them.

5.2 Personal Experience

Racialized and non-racialized respondents were offered a list of 16 statements related to their experience of entry into practice and career advancement, and asked to indicate if they agreed or disagreed with each. For purposes of analysis and interpretation responses have been grouped thematically in three separate charts.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Broad concepts or themes in the survey data were identified using exploratory factor analysis (EFA), a statistical technique designed to identify an underlying structure in the data based on correlations between survey items. For example in Chart 3 below respondents who agreed with any of the nine statements listed were also more likely to agree with one or more of the other eight, suggesting that there is an underlying theme (or factor) uniting this group of statements. These factor analytic models were estimated using specialized statistical software (Mplus) that allows for survey weights, and that also correctly accounts for the categorical nature of the survey data (e.g. dichotomous, or three, four or five point survey response scales).

5.2.1 Career Opportunities

Chart 3 – Career Opportunities/Professional Growth

Racialized licensees registered higher negative responses on eight of the nine statements shown in Chart 3, including six that referred to finding an articling position or training placement, finding suitable or preferred employment, and career advancement. For each of these six statements racialized respondents indicated lower levels of success.

Fifty-nine percent of racialized respondents agreed that they had found a suitable first job after being licensed, compared to 78% non-racialized (Q 16j)<sup>7</sup>. On a related issue 43% of racialized compared to 53% of non-racialized respondents reported having been offered employment at the firm where they had articulated or had a training placement (Q16e). On two other employment issues, 66% of racialized licensees agreed they had found employment in a suitable practice environment, and 66% also agreed they had been able to work in their preferred area of practice. This compared to 82% of non-racialized respondents who agreed with each of these statements (Q 16k, l).

Response to the two statements at the bottom of Chart 3 suggest wide differences of experience at entry into the profession, and in overall career trajectory. Among racialized respondents 43% agreed they had struggled to find an articling position or training placement, compared to 25% of non-racialized (Q16f). A majority (52%) agreed they had not advanced as rapidly as colleagues with similar qualifications, compared to 25% of non-racialized (Q16m). Among racialized licensees more than one quarter strongly agreed with each of these statements (27% and 28% respectively)<sup>8</sup>.

Among racialized respondents 67% agree that it was relative easy to get legal advice on client files from professional colleagues and mentors, compared to 79% of non-racialized respondents (Q16r). Differences between the two groups were somewhat narrower on other statements than about mentors and social networks. Sixty-two percent of racialized respondents agreed that mentors had played an important role in their career development, compared to 69% of non-racialized respondents (Q16a). A slightly higher percentage of racialized than non-racialized respondents indicated that social networks had played an important role in their career – 54% racialized compared to 51% non-racialized (Q16c).

Results shown in Chart 3 suggest there are wide differences of experience between racialized and non-racialized licensees across a number of key employment measures. Racialized licensees report substantially lower rates of success in finding articling positions and training placements, being re-hired following such placements, finding employment in the practice environment of their choice, and advancing as rapidly as colleagues with similar qualifications.

Further Comparisons: Paralegals

The focus group report noted that racialized paralegals, particularly the high proportion of recent licensees, might face greater challenges in the job market than racialized lawyers. Data not shown here reinforces this hypotheses, illustrating that whereas paralegals as a group report lower success rates in finding suitable employment than do lawyers, racialized paralegals are particularly disadvantaged in this respect.

On the key measure of finding a suitable first job just 26% of racialized paralegals agreed, compared to 36% of non-racialized paralegals (Q16j). On finding employment in their preferred practice environment 37% of racialized paralegals agreed, compared to 57% of their non-racialized counterparts (Q16k). Similarly, 41% agree they had found employment in their preferred area of practice as compared to 67% of non-racialized paralegals (Q16l).

5.2.2 Disrespect/Disadvantage

Chart 4 – Disrespect/Disadvantage

Weighted sample size =741 racialized licensees, 2277 non-racialized licensees

Chart 4 groups four statements associated with issues of respect and perceptions of disadvantage. Among racialized licensees 52% agreed they had experienced disrespect from other lawyers, compared to 36% of non-racialized licensees (Q16g). Asked about disrespect from other paralegals, 13% of racialized licensees agreed, including 37% of racialized paralegals (Q16h), compared to 7% of all non-racialized licensees and 20% of non-racialized paralegals (Q16h). Twenty-eight percent of racialized respondents and 21% of non-racialized respondents agreed that they had felt disrespect in court (Q16i).

Regarding experiences at law school, 38% of racialized licensees agreed that they had felt disadvantaged at law school compared to other students. This included 18% of racialized respondents who strongly agreed, exceeding the total of 17% of all non-racialized respondents who strongly/somewhat agreed with the same statement (Q16b).

5.2.3 Career Setbacks

Chart 5 – Career Setbacks

Chart 5 groups five statements around the theme of career setbacks. In comparison with results illustrated in Charts 3 and 4, responses presented here show narrower differences between racialized and non-racialized respondents.

Starting at the top of Chart 5, 42% of racialized licensees and 35% of non-racialized agreed they had left one or more positions because they felt they did not belong there (Q16n), including 22% and 13% respectively who strongly agreed. On a closely related issue, 40% of racialized and 31% of non-racialized respondents reported having left one or more positions because they did not feel they would advance commensurate with their performance and ability (Q16o).

Thirteen percent of racialized and 9% of non-racialized licensees agreed that they had been refused promotion to a management position (Q16s). Additional data not shown here indicates that those racialized respondents most likely to agree with this statement were: first language French (30%), employed by a Corporation (22%), Education (19%), Government (19%), and those 40-49 years of age (18%), 50-59 (18%), and over 65 (20%). Non-racialized licensees more likely to agree included: employed by Corporation (12%), Education (12%), and Government (12%).

Equal percentages of racialized and non-racialized licensees reported that their admission to partnership had been delayed (9%), and that they were not made partner despite meeting known criteria for advancement (6%) (Q 16 p, q).<sup>9</sup>

5.3 Barriers to Entry and Advancement

Racialized and non-racialized survey participants were presented a list of factors and asked to indicate in each case if they had experienced that factor as a barrier or challenge 'at any time during your entry into practices, at any time after your entry into practice (i.e. career advancement), or neither.' Table 7 reports the percentage of yes responses to each question during entry into practice. Responses to seventeen questions have been thematically grouped under four headings. Table 8 which follows, reports percentage of yes responses to each question after entry into practice. In this table, responses to the same seventeen questions have been thematically grouped under five headings.

<sup>9</sup> The low percentage responses for three of the statements presented in Chart 5 can be accounted for in part by the fact that between three fifths and three quarters of all respondents indicated the question 'does not apply to me.' Does not apply/not applicable was offered as a response throughout the online survey.

5.3.1 Identifying Barriers to Entry

Table 7 – Barriers During Entry to Practice

Weighted sample size =741 racialized licensees, 2277 non-racialized licensees

Race, Ethnicity, Culture

As Table 7 shows, fully 40% of racialized licensees identified their ethnic/racial identity as a barrier or challenge to entry into the practice of law or provision of legal services, contrasting sharply with the 3% of non-racialized licensees who perceived ethnic/racial identity as a barrier. Data not shown here indicates that racialized licensees who were most likely to cite race/ethnicity as a barrier to entry included: South East Asian (54%), Black (52%), Arab (50%), South Asian (46%), first language neither French/English (46%), female (45%) and born outside Canada (44%).

Whereas ethnic/racial identity was selected by a substantially higher percentage of racialized respondents than any of the other challenges or barriers tested, it ranked among the least important challenges identified by non-racialized respondents. This comparison underlines and reinforces the conclusion that racial status is a defining factor in shaping the experience that licensees have entering law practice or the provision of legal services, and in distinguishing their experience from that of their non-racialized colleagues.

Within the same group of statements your (family's) socio-economic status was identified as a challenge by 19% of racialized licensees and 8% of non-racialized. Where you were born/ raised was seen as a barrier by 17% of racialized licensees and 4% of non-racialized, and the way you speak English/ French by 12% of racialized compared to just 3% of non-racialized respondents.

Sex, Gender, Age

Seven potential barriers are grouped under this heading. Physique/physical appearance was identified as a barrier to entry into the legal professions by 24% of racialized and 8% of non-racialized licensees. Age (too young) was cited by 15% and gender identity by 11% of racialized licensees, compared to 8% and 6% respectively among non-racialized licensees.

On the top three issues listed in this section of the table – physical appearance, age (too young), and gender – women in both groups were more likely than their male counterparts to identify these factors as barriers to their entry into the profession. Among women 29% racialized and 12% non-racialized identified physique/appearance, compared to 19% racialized and 4% non-racialized men. On gender, 17% of racialized and 12% of non-racialized women identified it as a barrier to entry, compared to 5% of racialized men and just 1% of non-racialized men. Finally, on the issue of age (too young) 23% of racialized women and 11% of non-racialized women identified a barrier to entry, compared to 9% of racialized men and 5% of racialized men.

These comparisons suggest some convergence in the experience of the women (and men) in both groups around gender-related issues. However, the survey results also indicate that both racialized respondents as a whole and racialized women (data not shown) identified all seven issues within this group as barriers to entry more frequently than their non-racialized counterparts. Although some of the differences in the aggregate figures might be accounted for in part by the fact that a higher proportion of non-racialized respondents are women, the results reinforce the focus group findings that for many racialized women the experience of gender bias is compounded as a consequence of their racial status. Racialization and gender intersect to amplify barriers associated with each factor.

Academic Pedigree

Eighteen percent of racialized licensees identified the school or schools they had graduated from as a barrier to entry, compared to 9% of non-racialized. Along similar lines 16% of racialized compared to 7% of non-racialized licensees identified where they had been trained/educated as a barrier.

Data not shown indicates that among racialized respondents the percentage of those who identified where they had been trained/educated as a barrier to entry was highest for: unemployed (34%), paralegals (24%), and those born outside Canada (21%) as well as West Asian (23%), Jewish (22%), and Chinese (21%). On the issue of identifying which school they had graduated from as a barrier to entry, comparisons across demographic, ethno-racial categories and practice environments revealed less variation. Exceptions who were more likely to identify their alma mater(s) as a barrier to entry included: currently unemployed (30%), working for a small firm (23%) or under 30 years of age (23%).

Lifestyle, Personal Beliefs

Just under one fifth (18%) of racialized licensees acknowledged that their preferences in social activities constituted a barrier or challenge to entry, compared to just 5% of their non-racialized colleagues. On a related issue, 12% of racialized licensees identified their social or political views as a barrier to entry compared to 5% of their non-racialized counterparts. The percentage of those who identified their social preferences as barrier to entry included: West Asian (27%), South Asian (23%), South East Asian (23%), Chinese (23%), women (21%) and those whose mother tongue is neither French nor English (21%)

The relative frequency with which racialized respondents identified their social activity preferences and social/political views as barriers to entry, is consistent with focus group findings, which underlined the seriousness of challenges associated with participating in or easily adapting to the dominant social practices and culture, in and beyond the work place.

5.3.2 Barriers to Advancement

Both groups of respondents were also asked to identify which factors, from the same list, represented barriers at any time after entry into practice. Table 8 groups these issues under five thematic headings, establishing a fifth heading under the title of Disability. The important issue of physique/appearance has moved from the Sex, Gender, Age heading in Table 7 to the Race, Ethnicity and Culture group of issues with which it is slightly more closely correlated after entry into practice.

Both groups of respondents tended to identify the same factors as barriers after entry into the legal profession as they had during entry, with some notable differences which are discussed further below.

As was the case with the results presented in Table 7, results shown in Table 8 illustrate wide differences in the experiences of racialized and non-racialized licensees. With the single exception of sexual orientation, racialized licensees identified every factor listed as a barrier to advancement after entry more frequently than their non-racialized counterparts. In the case of many of the factors grouped under the headings Race, Ethnicity, Culture and Lifestyle, Personal Beliefs the differences between the two groups are substantial.

Race, Ethnicity, Culture

As noted, the greatest difference between the two groups lies in the importance of ethnic/racial identity which is perceived as a barrier/challenge to advancement by 43% of racialized licensees, compared to 3% of the non-racialized licensees.

Intersecting with this dominant issue are the other four issues in the same group of issues – physique/appearance, family socio-economic status, where you were born/raised and how you speak English/ French – all which have been identified as barriers after entry by at least 15% of racialized licensees. By contrast, for non-racialized licensees this group of issues represent barriers after entry to practice that are comparable or possibly of lesser importance than those associated with Sex, Gender, Age and Lifestyle, Personal Beliefs.

Sex, Gender, Age

Time away from work to care for children and other family members is identified with much greater frequency as a barrier after entry than it is during entry, rising from 7% to 25% for racialized and 5% to 23% for non-racialized licensees, comparing Tables 7 and 8.

Data not shown in Table 8 indicates that among racialized respondents those who most frequently flagged this issue as a barrier after entry included: female (33%), 40-49 years of age (31%), sole practitioners (28%), 30-39 years (27%), as well as West Asian (35%) and East Asian (32%). Among non-racialized respondents those who most frequently named this barrier included: women (36%), 40-49 years of age (32%) and 30-39 years (26%).

Consistent with the conclusion from the earlier comparisons, identification of barriers after entry suggest a convergence of the experience of racialized and non-racialized women (33% and 36% respectively) who identified the need for time away to care for children and family as a barrier to advancement .

Lifestyle, Personal Beliefs

Two issues emerged as more important barriers to advancement after than during entry. The types of social activities you prefer was identified as a barrier by 26% of racialized and 12% of non-racialized licensees, rising from 18% and 5% respectively (Table 7). Interestingly, racialized respondents ranked this issue second after ethnic/racial identity on the list of 17 potential barriers to advancement. Among nonracialized respondents it was tied for second with age (too young), with 12% of respondents naming each issue.

Data not shown indicates that racialized respondents who most frequently identified preferences for social activities as a barrier to advancement included: employed by a Corporation (33%), Chinese (36%), Arab (33%), South Asian (31%), and South East Asian (31%). Among non-racialized licensees the highest frequency of response included: age 30-39 (16%), Education (15%), Medium sized firm (14%), and employed in Government (14%).

On a closely related issue, 16% of racialized and 9% of non-racialized respondents identified their social and political views as a barrier during practice, compared to 12% and 5% respectively who identified this issue as a barrier to entry. Data not shown in Table 8 indicates that racialized respondents who most frequently identified this factor included: employed in Education (33%), Government (25%), French first language (22%), female (20%), Sole practitioners (19%) as well as Arab (33%), Aboriginal (29%), and South East Asian (25%).

Here, again survey results confirm the findings of focus groups where many participants stressed the importance of shared interest as a factor in career advancement. As one racialized young female lawyer explained in a larger discussion about the impact of 'fit':

“More work was delegated to those that fit in. For example, if you talked football with your colleagues then you had a better chance for business... As the years go on you can see the numbers of visible minorities decreasing as seniority increases.

6. Impacts of Racialization

6.1 What's the Issue?

The previous section reported results of survey questions which explored similarities and differences in the experience of racialized and non-racialized licensees in relation to the landscape of career challenges they face. It sought to identify, measure and compare which factors were perceived as barriers to entry and advancement within the legal professions.

This section of the report explores impacts: the extent to which identified challenges or barriers are perceived by racialized licensees to have disadvantaged them at any stage of their career. Results reported in this section are based on questions addressed to racialized licensees only.

6.2 Impacts: Have you been disadvantaged?

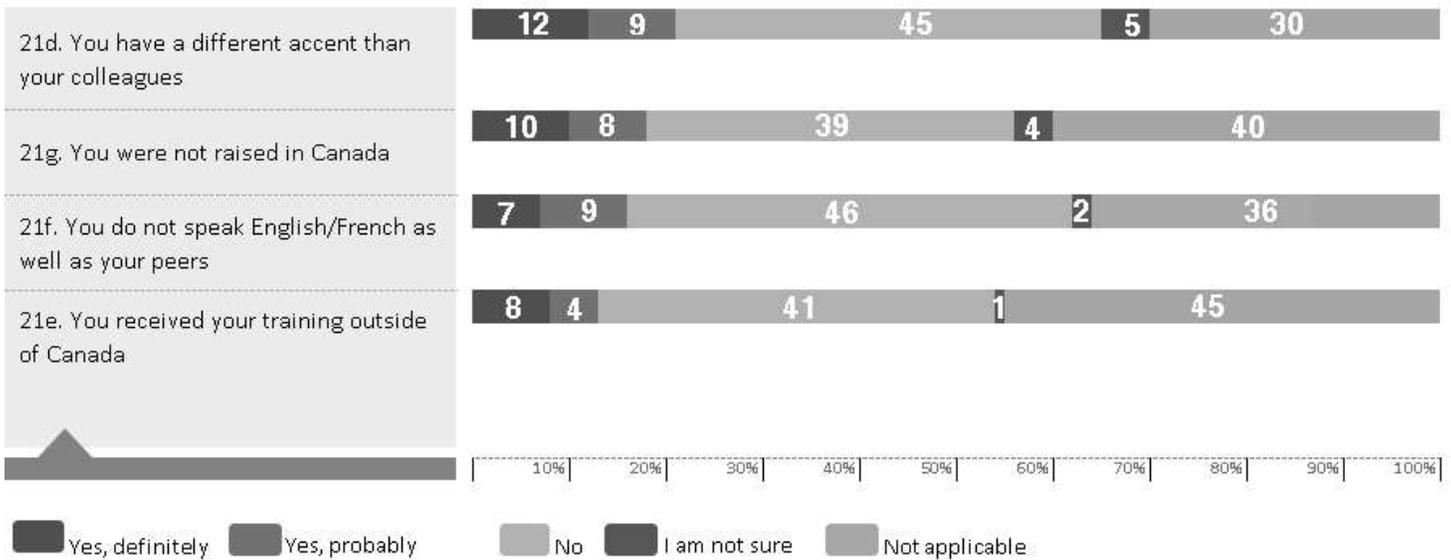

Racialized respondents only were asked if they had been disadvantaged in hiring, advancement, or pursuit of an area of practice, 'as a consequence of the factors listed below.' Response to 24 factors tested have been grouped in Charts 6, 7, and 8.

6.2.1 National Origin

Chart 6 – Disadvantages due to national origin

(Q21-1) Have you been disadvantaged in hiring, advancement, or pursuit of an area of practice as a consequence of any of the factors listed below?

Weighted sample size =741 racialized licensees

Twenty-one percent of respondents indicated that they had definitely (12%) or probably (9%) been disadvantaged as a consequence of having a different accent than their colleagues (Q21d), 18% as a result of not being raised in Canada (Q21g), 16% because they do not speak English/French as well as their peers (Q21f), and 12% because they had received their training outside Canada (Q21e).

The high proportion of No or Not Applicable responses in Chart 6 is accounted for, at least in part, by the fact that 55% of racialized licensees were born in Canada, 71% report first language either French nor English, and 88% of lawyers (91% of the total sample of racialized licensees) have a law degree from a law school in Canada.

Respondents whose first language is neither French nor English or who were born outside Canada were much more likely to answer the four statements in Chart 6 in the affirmative. Data not shown reveals that 36% of those reporting another first language and 35% of those born outside of Canada reported being disadvantaged due to their accent. Twenty-four percent of those reporting another first language, and 38% born outside Canada, reported being disadvantaged as a consequence of not being raised in Canada. Twenty-four percent of those who speak another first language, and 19% born outside Canada identified not speaking English/French as well as their peers as a source of career disadvantage. Finally, 22% of those who speak another first language, and 22% who were born outside Canada identified being trained outside Canada as a disadvantage.

In short, for up to two fifths of the subset of racialized licensees whose first language is neither French nor English and/or were born outside Canada the group of issues listed in Chart 6 are perceived as having been a source of disadvantage in hiring and/or career advancement.

6.2.2 Outgroup

Chart 7 – Disadvantages due to ‘Outgroup’

(Q21-2) Have you been disadvantaged in hiring, advancement, or pursuit of an area of practice as a consequence of any of the factors listed below?

Two statements drew the highest proportion of affirmative responses from the bank of 24 questions reported in Charts 6, 7 and 8. For the statement at the top of Chart 7, which refers to the disadvantage of growing up without a network of professional contacts, 68% (42% definitely) identified this factor as contributing to a career disadvantage (Q21h). For the second statement, which referred to not having had the same cultural background as one's colleagues, 57% (28% definitely) identified this factor as having disadvantaged their career (Q21a).

As noted elsewhere in this report (Section 3), issues of professional, social and cultural marginalization are closely associated with discrimination and isolation arising from racialization. Fully 50% of racialized licensees (23% definitely) identified prejudicial attitudes on the part of other legal professionals (Q21b), and 45% (26% definitely) identified lack of diversity in their work place environment (Q21p).

In the bottom half of Chart 7, six factors related to work place practices and attitudes drew affirmative responses from between one fifth and one third of racialized respondents. These included: your peers do not believe in a diverse working environment (33%) (Q21r), you were expected not to succeed because of stereotypes associated with your race (32%) (Q21l), you do not have mentors to give you advice on client files (30%) (Q21x), clients do not request lawyers from diverse backgrounds (26%) (Q21q), your social/cultural practices preclude participating in social networking functions (18%) (Q21s), and partners avoid giving you the most challenging work (18%) (Q21t).

Cross Tabulation: Some Comparisons

This section presents data not shown.

For the three statements listed at the top of Chart 7 – absence of professional networks, divergent cultural background, and prejudicial attitudes – women were more likely and men less likely to name these factors as contributing to career disadvantage. Sole practitioners were more likely and those in large firms less likely to identify each of these factors as contributing to career disadvantage. For all three statements respondents who are 30-39 years of age and those who are 40-49 were more likely, whereas younger (under 30) and older (50-65, and over 65) respondents were less likely to identify these factors as a source of career disadvantages.

Racialized respondents whose first language is neither English nor French, and those born outside Canada, were more likely than average to identify the three factors listed at the top of Chart 7 as sources of career disadvantage. Conversely, racialized licensees born in Canada were less likely than average to identify any of these factors as contributing to career disadvantage. For example, on the issue of having been subjected to prejudicial attitudes from other legal professionals (Q21b), 58% of those whose first language is neither French nor English, and 61% of those born outside Canada, reported being disadvantaged, compared to 41% of those born in Canada. The distribution of opinion between these two groups was similar for the two statements at the top of Chart 7 (21h, 21a).

Among ethno-racial groups, Black, South Asian, Chinese, East Asian and Arab respondents were more likely than average to identify all three factors as contributing to career disadvantage. To take one example, those most likely to flag prejudicial attitudes on the part of other legal professionals included: Black (67%), South Asian (59%) and East Asian (55%) (Q21b).

Whereas the absence of professional networks, divergent cultural background and prejudice based on race are identified as the most important sources of career disadvantage for a majority of all racialized respondents, comparisons illustrate some differences between different groups of racialized licensees. Among those more likely than average to name these factors as probable or definite sources of career disadvantage are:

- Women
- Soles practitioners
- First language other than French/English and
- Born outside Canada

Ethno-racial groups more likely than average to name all three factors as probable or definite sources of career disadvantage are:

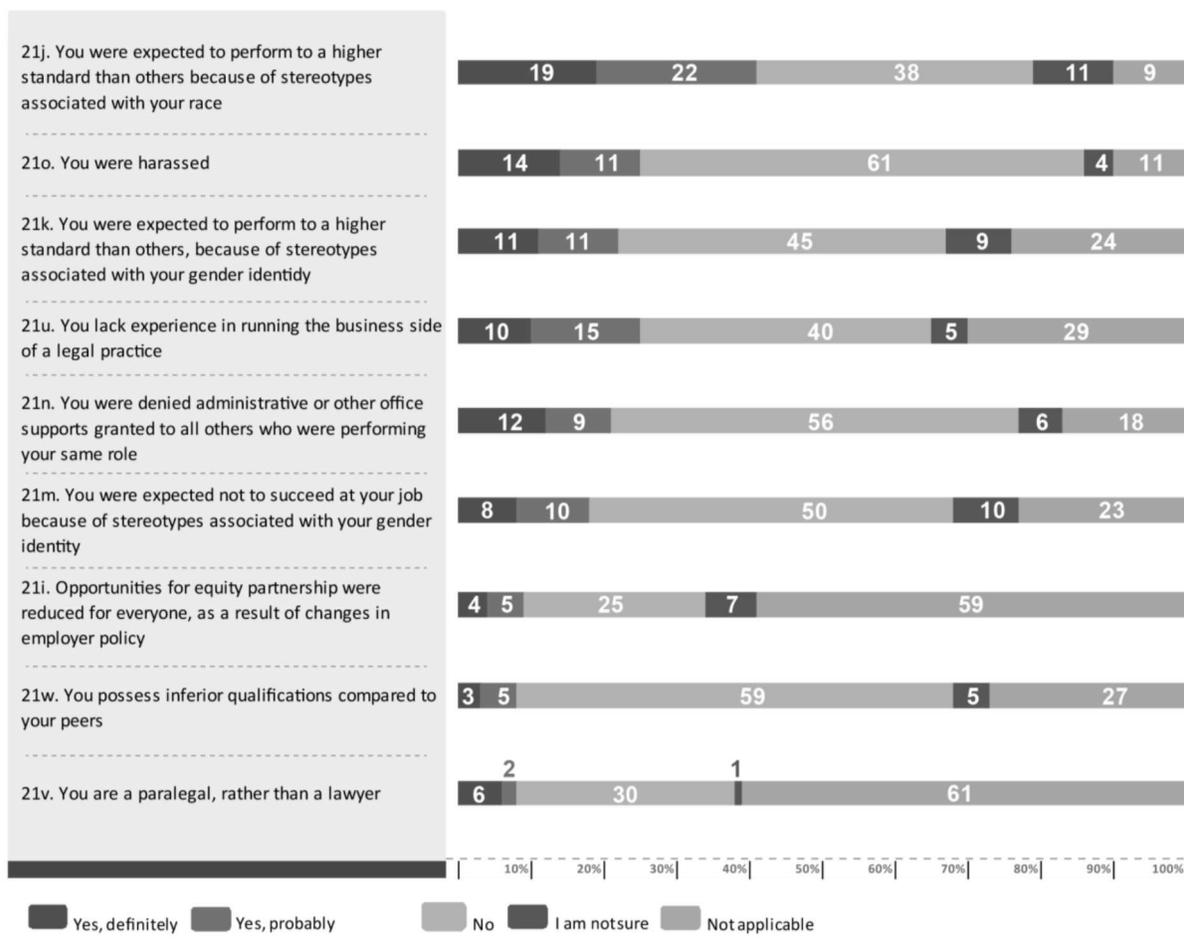

- Black
- South Asian
- Chinese
- Arab

6.2.3 Stereotyping

Chart 8 shows results of nine statements thematically grouped under the heading Stereotyping. Horizontal bars record responses of racialized licensees to each statement.

Chart 8 – Stereotyping

(Q21-3) Have you been disadvantaged in hiring, advancement, or pursuit of an area of practice as a consequence of any of the factors listed below?

Weighted sample size =741 racialized licensees

Forty-one percent of racialized licensees reported having been expected to perform to a higher standard than others due to stereotypes associated with race (Q21j). Data not shown indicates that those who most frequently identified this factor as a source of career disadvantage include: Sole practitioners (49%), Born outside Canada (47%), (female) 46%, 40-49 years of age (47%), 30-39 years (44%), first language neither French nor English (43%). Ethno-racial groups that named this factor more frequently than average included: Black (54%), Chinese (52%), South East Asian (46%), Arab (46%), and South Asian (45%).

The demographic characteristics, and to some extent the ethno-racial composition of those who were more likely to name race-based stereotyping as source of career disadvantage, is similar to the composition of those groups who identified the key factors of professional network, cultural divergence and racial prejudice of colleagues (see section 6.2.2).

Three statements in Chart 8 referred to harassment (Q21o), higher expectations due to gender stereotypes (Q21k), and lower expectations due to stereotypes (Q21m). On the issue of harassment 31% of women and 19% of men identified it as a factor contributing to career disadvantage, 38% of women and 11% of men who identified higher expectations associated with gender stereotyping, and 24% and 4% respectively who named lower expectations based on gender stereotypes. Although these numbers show that racialized male licensees are not free from harassment or from gender-based stereotyping, the difference are nevertheless clear, defined by the fact that a much higher proportion of racialized women – between one quarter and two fifths – view gender stereotypes as a factor contributing to their having been disadvantaged in hiring, advancement or pursuit of an area of practice.

7.1 What's the Issue?

This section explores the opinions of racialized and non-racialized licensees regarding the implications of the challenges faced by racialized licensees and remedies or best practices that should be followed to address those challenges.

The first part of this section (7.2) explores the extent to which both groups of survey respondents believe racialization exists as a process which imposes unique challenges on racialized licensees, exploring as well the implications of challenges associated with racialization of licensees for the justice system. The second part (7.3) canvasses opinion on diverse points of view about racialization. The third part (7.4) reports on the opinions of licensees regarding possible solutions and best practices, and who should lead or participate in the process of developing solutions to address the challenges facing racialized licensees.

7.2 Perspectives on Racialization

7.2.1 Does racialization exist?

Key informant interviews and focus groups for this study brought to light a powerful account of the extent to which race is a pervasive factor in shaping the experiences, choices and career outcomes of racialized lawyers and paralegals. Clearly, for many racialized licensees, 'racialization' is a very real phenomenon that has a material impact on their lives and careers in a variety of specific ways. Some participants in the non-racialized focus groups also reported experiences of discrimination or unequal treatment, which had had a significant impact on their career. However, their views on the challenges of racialization were mixed, and some were reluctant to accept the idea that racialization was a distinct unifying lens, or that the challenges faced by racialized licensees were qualitatively different than those they themselves had experienced.

The online survey explored the question further, measuring the extent to which the two groups of respondents agreed that racialization exists. Chart 9 reports results of a survey question that asked all respondents if racialized licensees faced challenges to their entry in practice and advancement compared to their non-racialized colleagues.

Chart 9 – Do Racialized Licensees Face Unique Challenges

Weighted sample size =741 racialized licensees

Among racialized respondents 83% agreed that they face more challenges than their non-racialized colleagues, including 45% who characterized those challenges as much more than non-racialized licensees. Other data not shown here identified the following groups of racialized licensees who were more likely than average to agree: Female (93%), those under 30 years of age (89%), 30-39 (89%), 40-49 (89%) as well as Black (97%), South East Asian (93%), Chinese (92%), South Asian (91%) and East Asian (91%).

In comparison, 62% of non-racialized respondents agreed that racialized licensees face more challenges, including 14% who said much more. Other data not shown indicates that non-racialized licensees who were more likely than average to agree included: Female (67%), 40-49 years of age (67%), working in Medium-sized firm (66%), Large firms (64%).

At the other end of the spectrum of opinion on this question, just 3% of racialized respondents characterized the challenges they face as less in comparison with non-racialized licensees. Whereas a larger percentage of non-racialized respondents identified the challenges facing the two groups as about the same (21%) or didn't know (12%), an almost equally small percentage (4%) characterized the challenges facing racialized licensees as less than those facing their non-racialized counterparts.

Across the whole survey population of racialized and non-racialized licensees (data not shown) a strong majority (65%) agree that racialized licensees face challenges compared to non-racialized licensees, and only 4% are in outright disagreement with this view. And although support is not as strong among non-racialized licensees, the unique challenges facing racialized licensees were nevertheless acknowledged by a majority of non-racialized respondents across almost every demographic and professional sub-group. The only exceptions in this respect were: first language neither French nor English, and paralegals of whom 45% and 37% respectively agreed that racialized licensees face challenges compared to their non-racialized colleagues.

7.2.2 The Challenges of Racialization: What Have You Seen?

Although a strong majority of all respondents acknowledged the existence of racialization and career challenges associated with racialization, differences between the two groups were greater when asked about what they had witnessed. Of racialized respondents 52% acknowledged having witnessed an instance in which challenges faced by a racialized licensee or candidate had a material impact on that individual’s entry into practice and/or career advancement. In comparison just 17% of non-racialized respondents reported having witnessed such a situation (Chart 10).

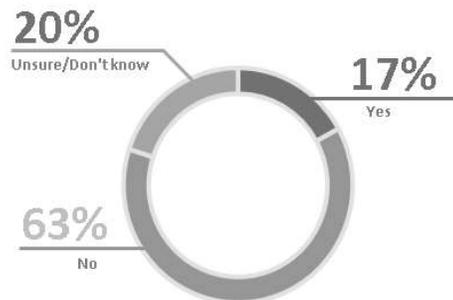

Chart 10 – Experiencing/Witnessing Challenges

➤ Racialized:

Weighted sample size=741 racialized licensees, 2277 Non racialized licensees

A follow-up question asked those who answered yes to describe the situation they had witnessed. A total of 820 responses were coded in 42 categories (Q20).

Racialized respondents (n=383) most frequently cited witnessing: Differential treatment based on skin colour/race/religion/appearance (23%), Difficulty for racialized licensees in OCIs and finding articles (22%), Discrimination because of accent/language barriers (8%), Derogatory comments or bullying in school/office/courts (7%), and Inappropriate/irrelevant/racist comments or questions during interviews (7%).

Non-racialized respondents (n=375) most frequently cited favouritism toward 'non-whites' in schools or hiring, and the effects of diversity policy/reverse racism/affirmative action (19%).<sup>10</sup>

Other observations of non-racialized licensees were more closely aligned with those of racialized licensees: Greater difficulty in OCI's/finding articles (15%), Differential treatment based on skin colour/race/religion/appearance (15%), Discrimination because of accent/language barrier (14%), Blacks face discrimination/harder time securing jobs/obtaining mentors (7%).

7.2.3 Challenges Facing Racialized Licensees and the Justice System

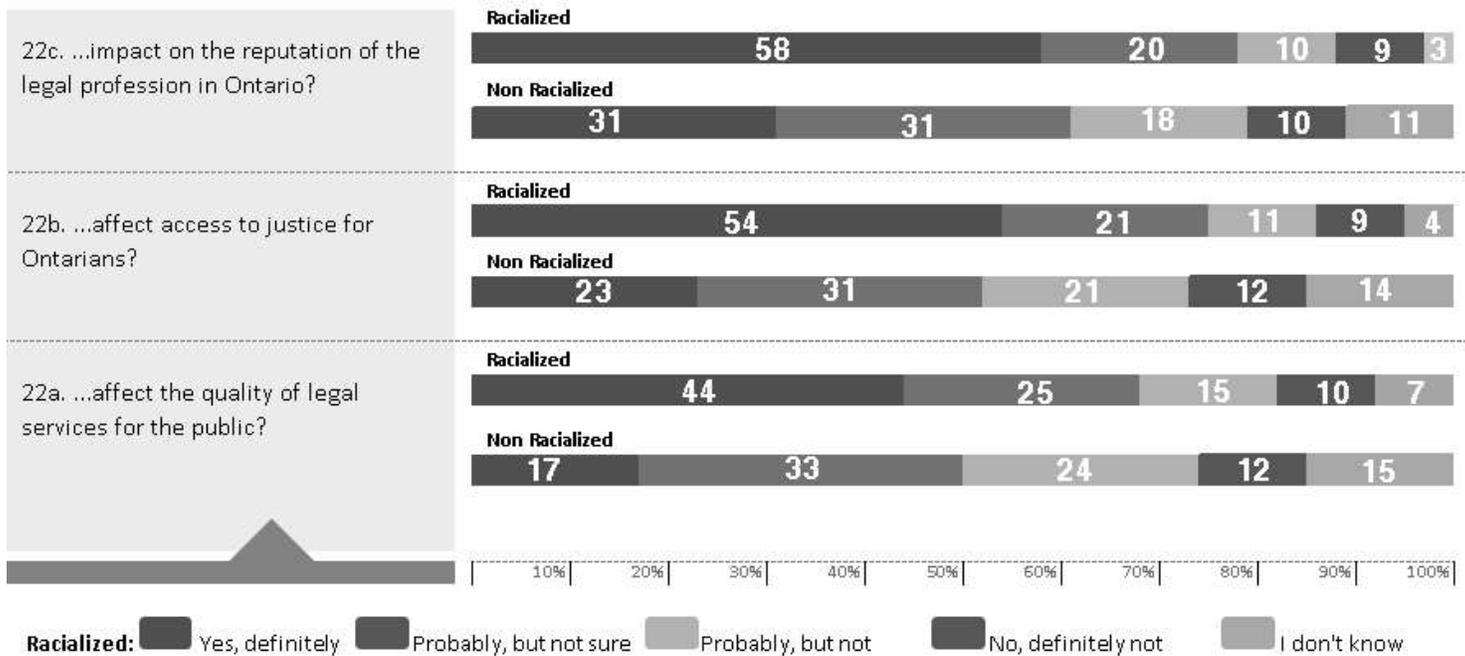

Having probed opinion regarding the existence, comparative challenges and evidence of racialization, a subsequent bank of three questions explored opinions regarding the impact of racialization on the profession, the justice system, and the public in positive or negative ways. Chart 11 shows responses to these questions.

Chart 11 – Impact on the Justice System

(Q22) In your view, do the challenges facing racialized candidates/licenseses...

Weighted sample size=741 racialized licensees, 2277 Non racialized licensees

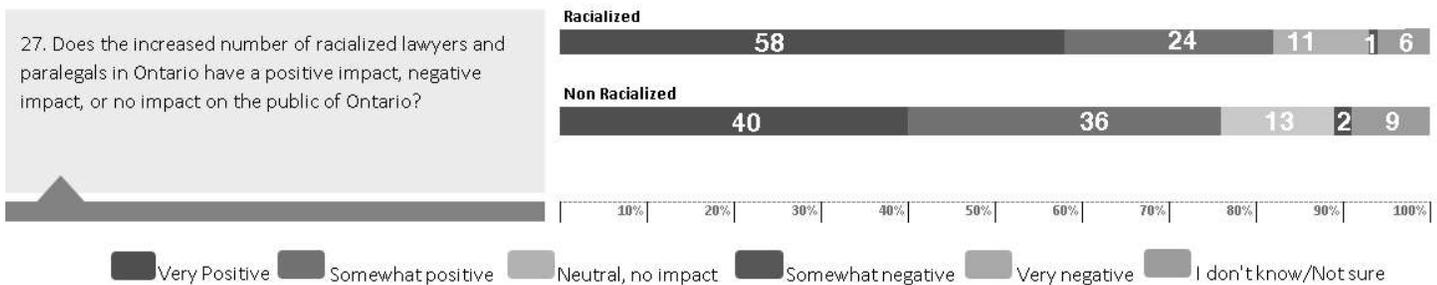

Close to four-fifths (78%) of racialized respondents agreed (58% definitely, 20% probably) that the challenges facing racialized licensees have an impact on the reputation of the legal profession in Ontario, compared to three-fifths (62%) of non-racialized licensees (31% definitely, 31% probably) (Q22c). Similarly, 75% of racialized licensees (75%) agreed (54% definitely, 21% probably) that challenges facing racialized licensees affect access to justice for Ontarians. This compared to 54% of non-racialized respondents (23% definitely, 31% probably) (Q22b). Finally, 69% of racialized respondents agree (44% definitely, 25% probably) that the challenges facing racialized licensees affect the quality of legal services for the public, compared to 50% of non-racialized licensees (17% definitely, 33% probably) (Q22a).

In both groups of respondents, those who see definite or probable impacts on the justice system arising from the challenges faced by racialized licensees substantially outnumber those who probably or definitely see no such impacts. Although there are differences in the overall balance and intensity of opinion, a very strong majority of racialized licensees, and a majority of non-racialized licensees support the view that the challenges facing racialized licensees are having an impact on the reputation of the legal professions, access to justice and the quality of services provided.

Chart 12 shows results of a question about the impact of increased numbers of racialized lawyers and paralegals on the public.

Weighted sample size=741 racialized licensees, 2277 Non racialized licensees

Among racialized licensees, 82% endorsed the view that the increased number of racialized lawyers and paralegals have a positive impact on the public of Ontario (58% very positive, 24% positive). Other data not shown here indicates that this includes 83% of lawyers and 71% of paralegals. This compares to 76% of non-racialized licensees (40% very positive, 36% positive), which included 79% of lawyers and 63% of paralegals.

As a follow-up to the question posed in Chart 12, survey participants were asked how the increased number of racialized licensees would impact on the public of Ontario. A total of 2,537 responses were coded into 23 substantive categories (Q28). Table 9 below lists the top six responses from both racialized and non-racialized respondents were:

7.3 Exploring the Diversity of Opinion

A bank of 12 questions explored agreement/disagreement with statements representing diverse opinions within the legal profession. Response to these 12 statements have been thematically grouped in three separate charts.

Chart 13 shows results of four statements grouped under the heading System Status Quo and ranked according to overall agreement of racialized licensees.

Chart 13 – System Status Quo

(Q24-1) In this question we pose statements from a variety of standpoints reflecting diverse opinions within the legal profession. For each statement please indicate if you agree or disagree or if you have no opinion either way.

Weighted sample size =741 racialized licensees, 2277 non-racialized licensees

A review of Chart 13 suggests relatively narrow differences between racialized and non-racialized respondents in terms of support for this group of four conservative or 'status quo' statements. Of racialized respondents 74% agreed (44% strongly) that reducing discrimination is important but that it should not impinge on the profession's main responsibility to serve clients with competent lawyers and paralegals (Q24e). This compares with 84% of non-racialized respondents who agreed (49% strongly).

A strong majority of paralegals in both groups (66% racialized, 69% non-racialized), endorsed the view that the candidates ability to fit into the firm's environment was the most important factor in hiring paralegals (Q24c). In a similar question addressed to lawyers, 48% of racialized licensees and 55% of non-racialized licensees endorsed the view that fit is the most important factor in the process of selecting articling students (Q24b). Finally, a majority of both groups (53% racialized, 56% non-racialized) agreed that it is natural and desirable for licensees from various backgrounds to conform to the existing professional culture in Ontario (Q24b).

These results suggest an interesting convergence of opinion between racialized and non-racialized licensees around a core group of conservative principles, which assert the limits of steps to reduce discrimination, the traditional use and benefit of fit as the key factor in the hiring process, and respect for the established culture of the legal profession.

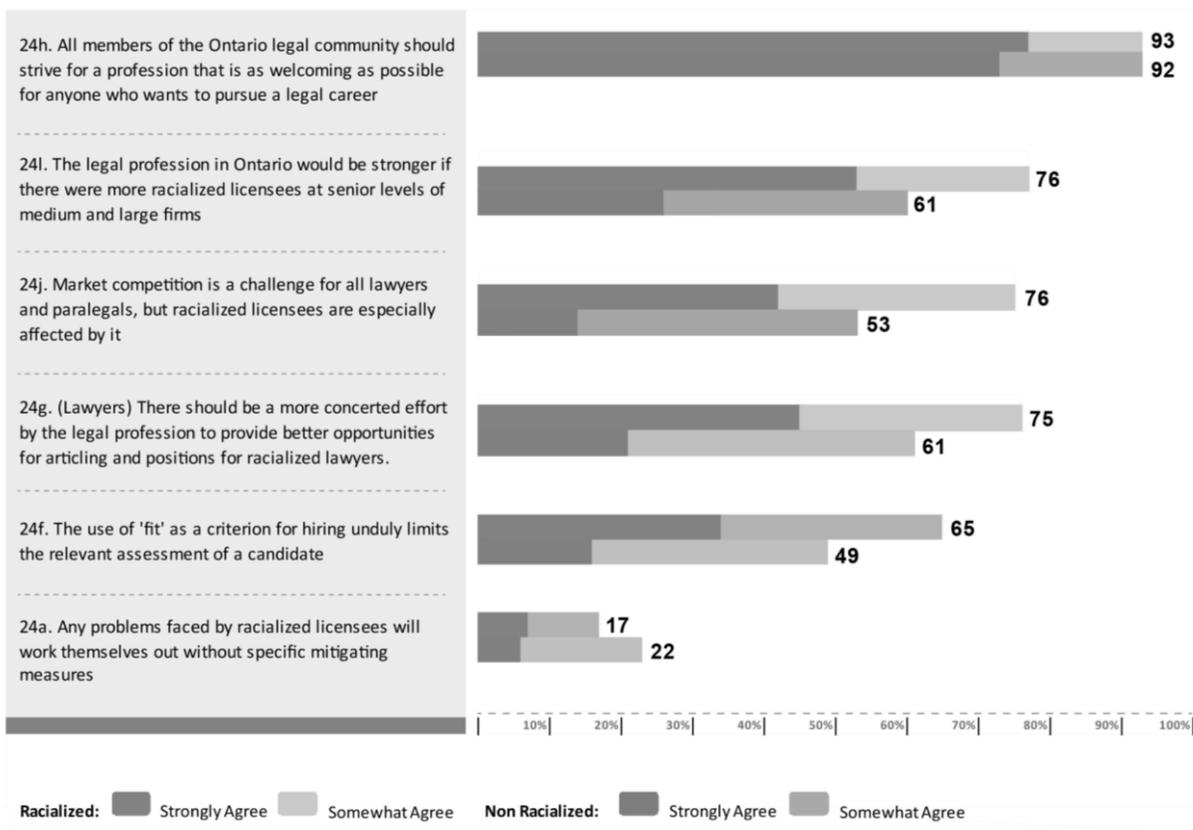

From one angle these results suggest substantial, and perhaps contradictory, support by racialized licensees for values and practices in the legal profession which, in other contexts of this research project, have been identified as discriminatory. On the other hand the results in Chart 13 may reflect a measure of ambivalence toward these values from both groups of licensees. On the issue of fit as the key tool for hiring articling students, 46% of racialized lawyers and 39% of non-racialized lawyers disagreed. And on the issue of adapting to the established professional culture, 41% of racialized licensees and 37% of non-racialized licensees disagreed. From this perspective, the response of racialized licensees might be interpreted as continued if reluctant loyalty to values and practices that serve them poorly, whereas the response of non-racialized licensees might be interpreted as growing awareness of the limitations and inequities associated with established practice and culture.

The convergence of opinion represented in Chart 13 suggests there may be an important point of consensus across the racial divide, which may contribute to defining both the scope and the limits of change when it comes to prioritizing measures to reduce the professional challenges faced by racialized licensees.

Chart 14 shows seven statements from the same bank grouped under the heading Fair/Equal Opportunity

Chart 14 – Fair/Equal Opportunity

(Q24-2) In this question we pose statements from a variety of viewpoints reflecting diverse opinions within the legal profession. For each statement please indicate if you agree or disagree or if you have no opinion either way

The statement at the top of Chart 14, endorsing the view that the legal profession should be as welcoming as possible, drew overwhelming support from racialized and non-racialized respondents, with 93% and 92% agreement respectively, including 76% and 73% respectively who strongly agreed (24h).

A moderate to strong majority of lawyers in both groups registered overall agreement with the view that there should be a more concerted effort to provide better opportunities for articling and positions for racialized lawyers ( 75% racialized and 61% non-racialized), although a substantially higher percentage of racialized compared to non-racialized lawyers strongly agreed (45% and 21% respectively) ( Q24g).

Similar majorities of both groups agree that the legal profession would be stronger if there were more racialized licensees at the senior levels of medium and large firms (66% racialized, 61% non-racialized), though here again strong agreement was much higher among racialized respondents (53% compared to 26% of non-racialized respondents) (24l). Among racialized licensees those employed in medium and large firms were more likely than average to agree with this statement (72% and 74% respectively). Among racialized licensees, 58% of those employed in medium and 63% of those employed in large firms agreed the profession would benefit from more racialized licensees as at senior levels. These percentages correspond roughly to the overall level of agreement among non-racialized licensees.

On the issue of market competition and the view that it presents greater challenges to racialized licensees there was a comparatively wider divergence of opinion, with 75% of racialized respondents agreeing, including 42% who strongly agreed compared to a bare majority of 53% of non-racialized respondents, just 14% of whom strongly agreed (Q24j).

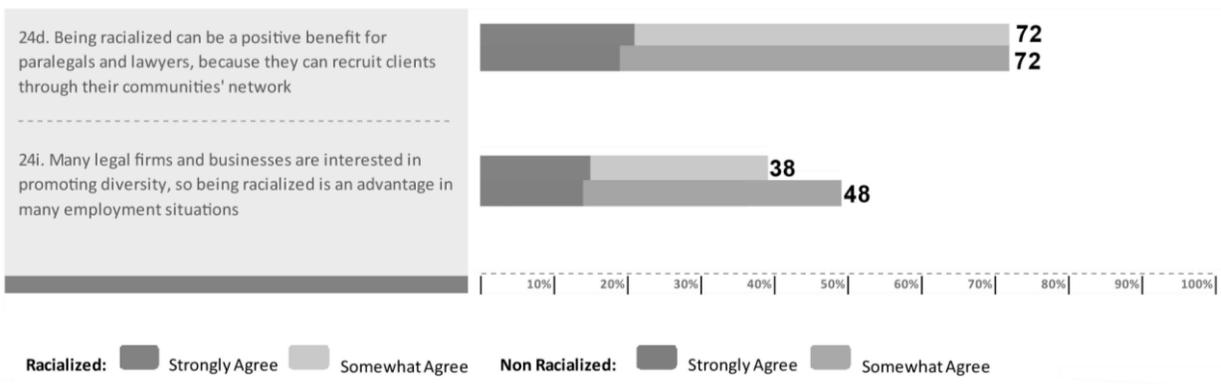

On the subject of fit, 65% of racialized respondents and 49% of non-racialized respondents agreed that as a criterion for hiring it unduly limits the relevant assessment of a candidate (Q24f). This modest reversal of opinion in comparison to the results shown in Chart 13 reinforces the view that both groups are ambivalent on the issue of fit: acknowledging its benefit as a tool in the hiring and advancement process, while recognizing its constraints and potential for bias when it comes to addressing the challenges faced by racialized licensees.

There was very low overall agreement from both groups with the proposition that the challenges facing racialized licensees will be resolved without specific mitigating measures (17% racialized, 22%) (Q24a). These results support the conclusion that not only does a strong majority of all licensees believe racialization imposes specific challenges on racialized licensees, but that majority also recognizes the need for concerted action to address those challenges.

Two remaining statements (Chart 15) were grouped under the thematic heading of racial/ethnic advantage.

Weighted sample size =741 racialized licensees, 2277 non-racialized licensees

A strong majority of both groups (72% racialized, 72% non-racialized), agreed that racialized lawyers and paralegals could benefit from being able to recruit clients from their community networks (24d). This balance of opinion concurs with the views expressed by many focus group participants, although focus group participants also explained that racialized status does not necessarily confer access to a corresponding community network. Lower percentages of both groups agreed that because many law firms and businesses are interested in promoting diversity, being racialized is an advantage in many employment situations (38% racialized, 48% non-racialized) (Q24i).

7.4 Measures to Promote Inclusiveness in the Profession

Survey participants were asked, ‘Have you seen what you consider to be good practices that you would want to recommend be studied or scaled up to address the challenges faced by racialized licensees?’ A total of 3,361 open-ended responses were coded in 30 substantive categories (Q25).

Over half (55%) of all respondents indicated that they had not seen any good practices or successful strategies. Among racialized licensees the most frequent mentions were:

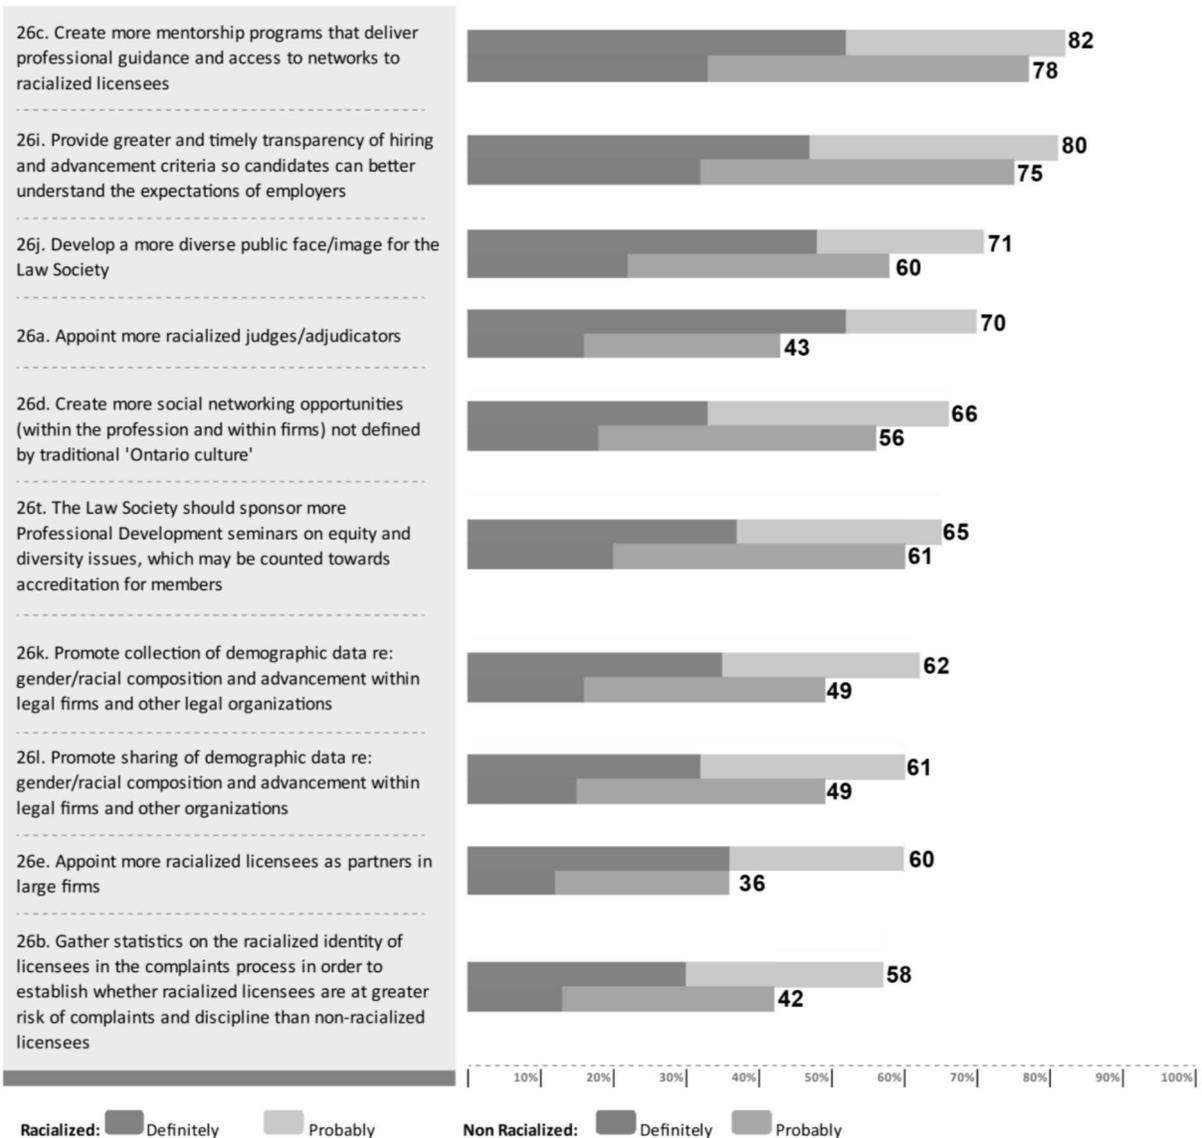

Merit/competency should be the basis of hiring people irrespective of an individual's 'label' (5%), Increased mentorship from successful lawyers (6%), and Establishing diversity as a positive goal to enable building stronger teams to serve a multi-cultural society (5%). Among non-racialized respondents most frequent mentions included: Merit/competency should be the basis of hiring people irrespective of an individual's 'label' (5%), Public sector/Canadian government/large corporations and law firms have good diversity practices (3%), and Establishing diversity as a positive goal enables building stronger teams to serve a multi-cultural society (3%).

A bank of twenty statements explored opinions of both groups regarding a variety of measures intended to make the legal profession more inclusive. In Charts 16 and 17 these statements are ranked by highest overall agreement of racialized licensees.

As the two charts show, a majority of racialized licensees endorsed almost the entire list of measures suggested for making the legal profession more inclusive for racialized licensees. The six measures listed at the top of Chart 16 were endorsed by two thirds or more of the racialized respondents and, of the remaining measures listed, all but two reported at the bottom Chart 17 drew majority endorsement from racialized licensees. By contrast, a majority of non-racialized respondents endorsed seven of the twenty measures as definitely or probably the right approach to making the profession more inclusive.

(Q26) The following is a list of measures that some licensees have suggested could be effective in making the legal profession more inclusive. For each, please tell us if you think it would be the right approach, wrong approach or if you would need more information before making up your mind.

Weighted sample size =736 racialized licensees, 2270 non-racialized licensees

Two measures listed at the top of Chart 16 drew strong endorsements from both groups of licensees. Reinforcing a message that was prominent throughout the focus group research, 82% of racialized licensees (52% definitely) identified more mentorship programs that deliver professional guidance and access to networks for racialized licensees (Q26c). This compared to 78% of non-racialized licensees (33% definitely). Both groups also registered comparable levels of support for providing greater and timely transparency of hiring and advancement criteria (80% racialized, 75% non-racialized) (Q26i).

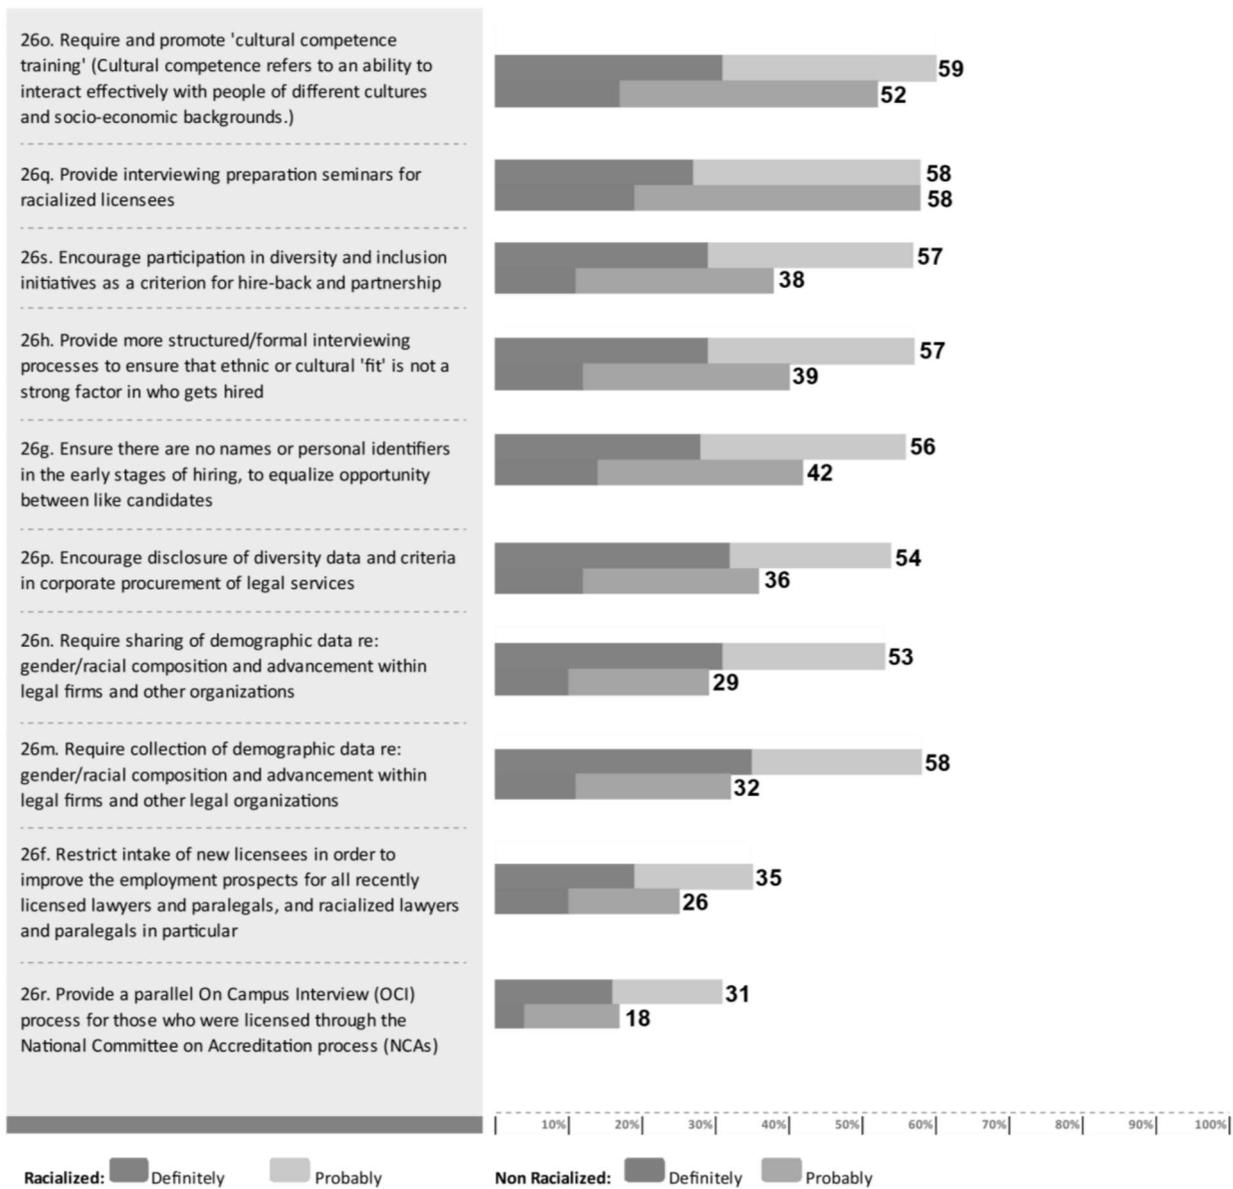

A strong majority of both groups endorsed developing a more diverse public face/image for the Law Society (71% racialized, 60% non-racialized), although 48% of racialized respondents identified this measure as definitely the right approach, compared to just 22% of non-racialized licensees (Q26j). Other data not shown here indicates that among racialized licensees, those most likely support a more diverse public image for the Law Society include: Paralegals (87%), Female (81%), Born outside Canada (77%), as well as South East Asian (90%), Black (84%), and East Asian (82%).

Two other measures attracted comparable levels of support from both groups. Creating more networking opportunities not defined by traditional 'Ontario culture' (66% of racialized and 56% non-racialized licensees) (Q26d), and Law Society sponsored Professional Development seminars on equity and diversity, which may be counted toward accreditation by member (65% racialized, 61% non-racialized) (Q26t).

Two other measures listed in Chart 16 reflect a comparatively wider divergence of opinion between racialized and non-racialized licensees. On the issue of appointing more racialized judges/adjudicators, 70% of racialized licensees endorsed this measure, including 52% who viewed it as definitely the right approach. In comparison, just 43% of non-racialized respondents endorsed this measure, with 16% describing it as definitely the right approach (Q26a). A similar divergence of opinion was evident on the issue of appointing more racialized licensees as partners in large firms, endorsed as the right approach by 60% of racialized licensees including 36% definitely, compared to 36% of non-racialized respondents, and just 12% definitely (Q26e).

Chart 17 – Solutions: Less Support

(Q26) The following is a list of measures that some licensees have suggested could be effective in making the legal profession more inclusive. For each, please tell us if you think it would be the right approach, wrong approach or if you would need more information before making up your mind.

Weighted sample size=736 racialized licensees, 2270 Non racialized licensees

Chart 17 lists the 10 measures that had less overall support from racialized licensees. Two of these attracted similar support from both groups of respondents. Requiring and promoting cultural competence training was endorsed by 59% of racialized and 52% of non-racialized licensees (Q26o). Providing interview preparation seminars for racialized licensee was endorsed as probably or definitely the right approach by 58% of respondents from both groups (Q26q).

Of the remaining list of proposed measures there was a moderate divergence of opinion between the two groups. The widest differences were related to requiring sharing of demographic data related to the racial/gender composition of legal firms and other organizations (53% racialized, 29% non-racialized) (Q26n), and requiring collection of demographic data related to racial/gender composition of legal firms and other organizations (58% racialized, 32% non-racialized) (Q26m).

Although a majority of racialized licensees favoured these measures related to collecting and sharing data, the comparatively lower levels of majority support echo some of the reservations expressed by focus group participants who were concerned that such measures might be construed as setting diversity targets and thereby bypassing traditional principles of hiring and advancement based on merit.

Charts 16 and 17: Summary

Charts 16 and 17 illustrate both the scope and relative intensity of support for a wide range of issues, highlighting a group of measures to promote inclusiveness that have substantial support from both racialized and non-racialized licensees. Measures that were endorsed by a moderate or large majority of racialized and non-racialized respondents, and might be viewed as representing the convergence of opinion across the two groups, included:

- More mentorship programs that deliver professional guidance and access to networks for racialized licensees (Q26c)
- Greater and timely transparency of hiring and advancement criteria (Q26i)
- Developing a more diverse public face/image for the Law Society (Q26j)
- More networking opportunities not defined by traditional 'Ontario culture' (Q26d)
- Law Society sponsored Professional Development seminars on equity and diversity, which may be counted toward accreditation by members (Q26t)
- Requiring and promoting 'cultural competence training' (Q26o)
- Providing interview preparation seminars for racialized licensees (Q26q)

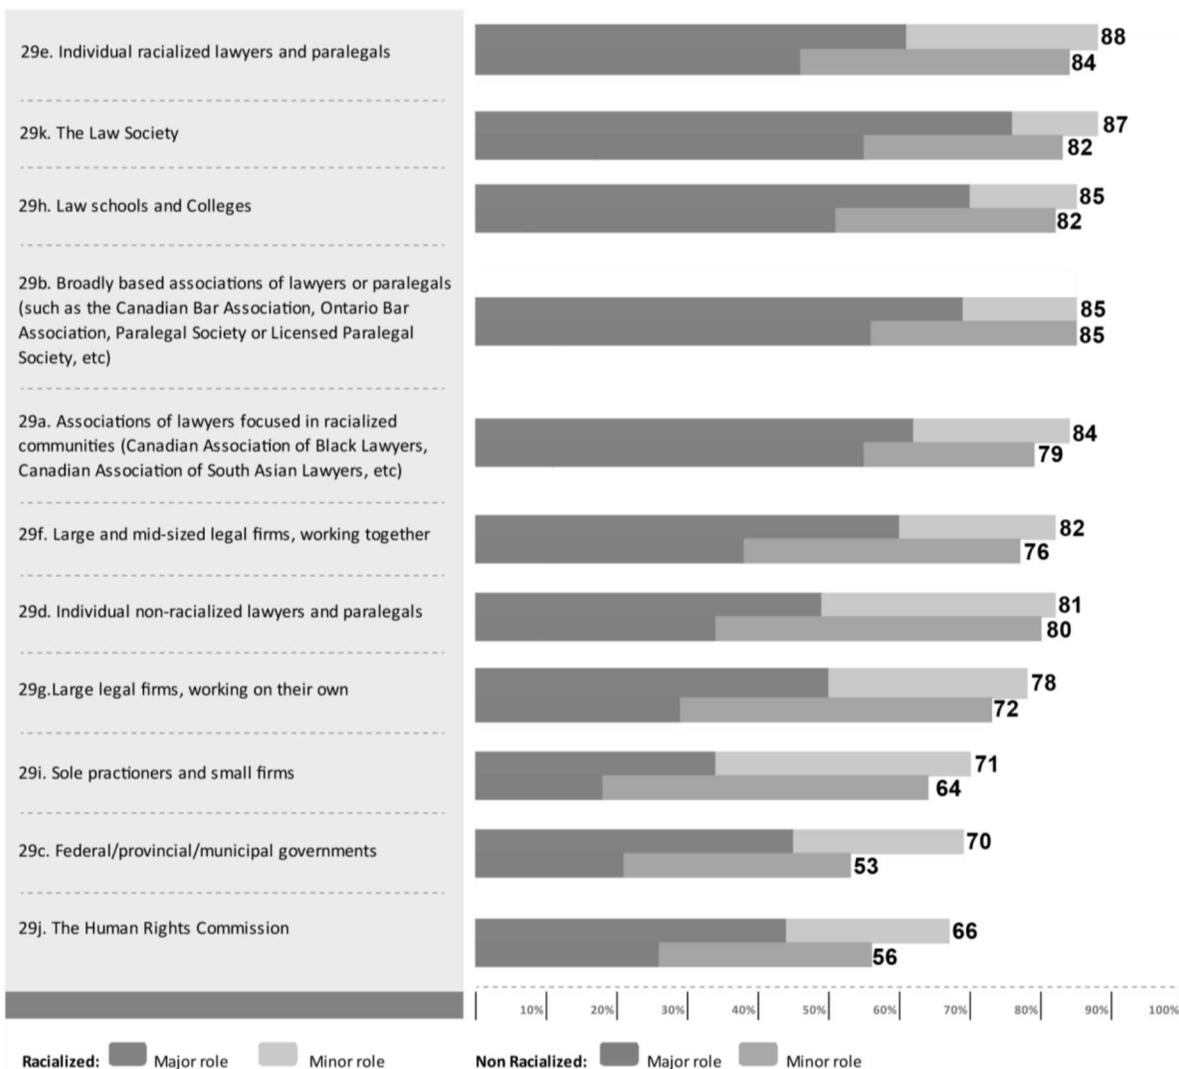

Differences were wider, and support from non-racialized respondents was substantially lower, for measures that might be described as harder-edged or more directive. Measures where there is both lower overall agreement and much less concurrence between the two groups included: appointing more racialized judges and adjudicators, appointing more racialized licensees as partners in large firms, promoting and requiring collection and sharing of demographic information, and modifying/formalizing the interview process to reduce the use of fit as a hiring tool and other factors that may disadvantage racialized candidates.

7.4.1 Who should play a role?

Chart 18 – Who should play a role?

(Q29) In your view what role should each of the following take to address the challenges facing racialized licensees?

Weighted sample size =713 racialized licensees, 2206 non-racialized licensees

Survey participants were offered a list of 12 stakeholder groups and constituencies and asked what role (Major, Minor or None) each should play in addressing the unique challenges facing racialized licensees. Results are shown in Chart 18.

A majority of all respondents endorsed a major or minor role for all 12 of the stakeholder constituencies listed in Chart 18. Differences in the two groups' overall responses are narrow, with the exceptions of the role of all three levels of government (Q29c) and the role Human Rights Commission (Q29j) where there is a moderate divergence of opinion between racialized and non-racialized licensees.

Wider differences appear in the comparisons of which stakeholders are assigned a major role in addressing the challenges faced by racialized licensees, which may reflect underlying differences between the two groups in their perception of the seriousness and urgency of the issue. Based on the percentages of 'Major Role,' racialized licensees assigned a priority role to the following organizations and groups: Law Society (75%) (Q29k), Law Schools and Colleges (70%) (Q29h), broadly-based associations of lawyers and paralegals (69%) (Q29b), associations of lawyers focused on racialized communities (62%) (Q29a), and individual racialized lawyers and paralegals (61%) (Q29e).

Identification of a major role for the Law Society is consistent with what we heard in the focus groups. Although many racialized licensees expressed some degree of pessimism regarding the (political) will and capacity of the Law Society to pursue effective strategies of inclusiveness, a majority nevertheless endorsed a lead role for the Law Society.

8. Complaints and Discipline

8.1 What's the issue?

Following objectives set out at the beginning of the research project and based on themes and issues that surfaced in the Focus Group phase, a final series of questions explored the views of licensees regarding the possible risks of complaints and discipline associated with the challenges faced by racialized licensees.

8.2 Identifying Risk of Complaints

Both groups of licensees were asked if, in their view, the Law Society could undertake to more proactively address the issue of the influence of race in the complaints and discipline process. A total of 2,222 responses were coded in 34 substantive categories (Q30).

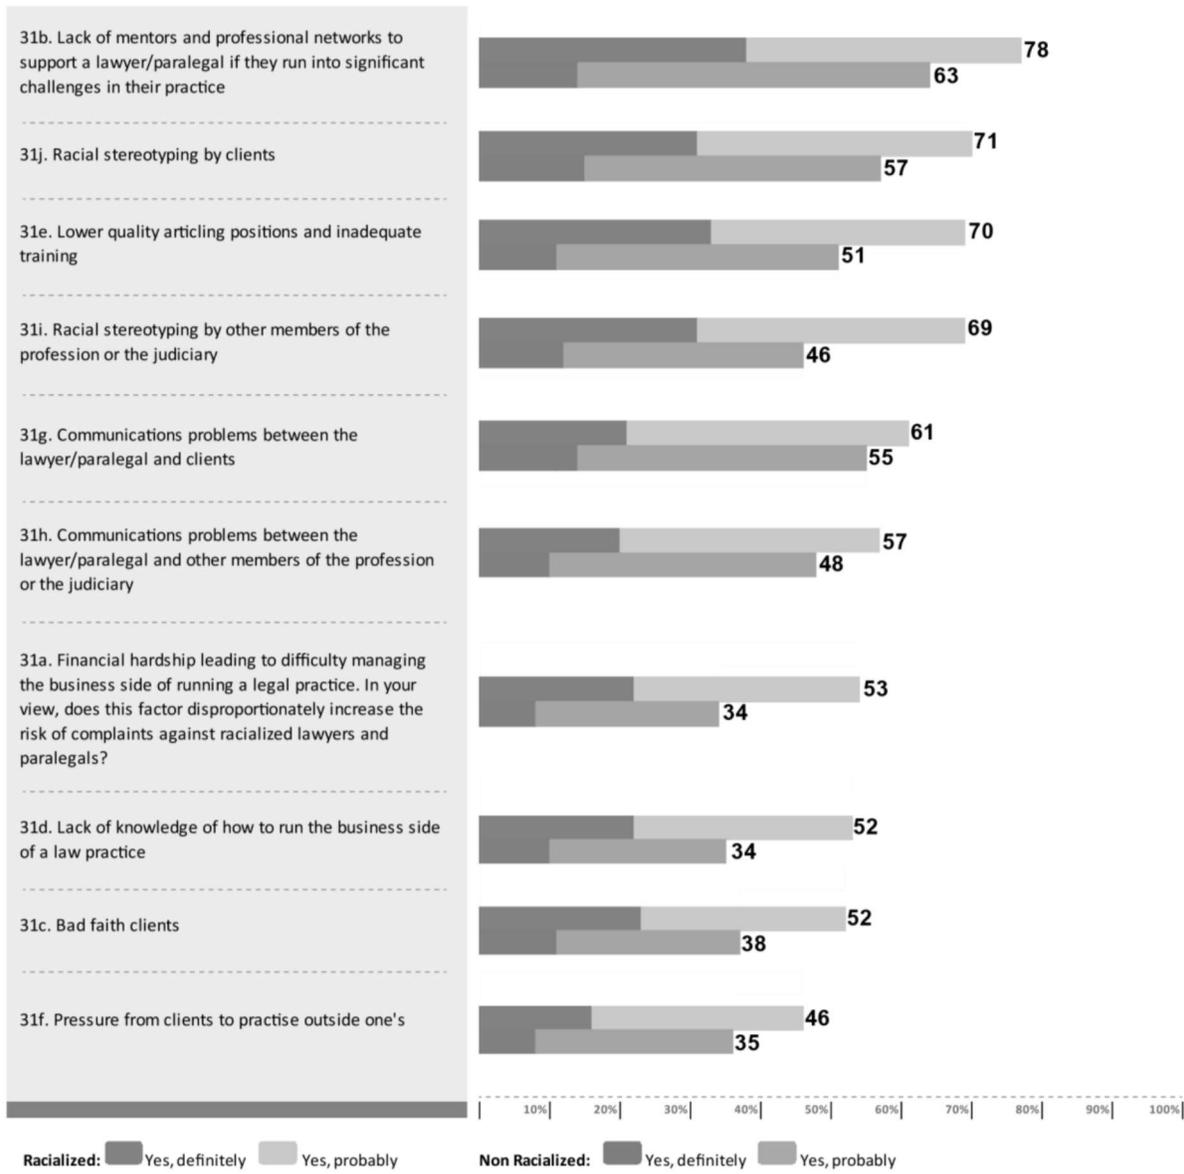

Thirty-six percent of racialized licensees and 52% of non-racialized licensees who responded to this open-ended question indicated there are no additional steps required or that the Law Society is sufficiently proactive. The relatively large numbers of racialized licensees who identified no issues, and another group who indicated no familiarity with race as a factor in the complaints process (reported below), accords with an observation from the focus groups that a minority of participants, represented in many of the 14 focus groups, “reported not having seen any evidence of factors contributing to increased complaints and discipline for racialized licensees.”

Other frequent responses from both groups of licensees included: Not familiar with race as a main factor in the complaint process (14% racialized, 11% non-racialized), Complaints and discipline should be analyzed/treated fairly regardless of race/sex (7% racialized, 6% non-racialized), Educate and train Law Society/firms/individuals on diversity and race issues (6% racialized, 4% non-racialized), and Have proportionate ethnic/race representation on discipline/investigation boards (5% racialized, 2% non-racialized).

A final bank of 10 questions explored opinions regarding the extent to which specific factors might contribute to increased risk of complaints against racialized licensees.

Chart 19 – Risks of Complaints Against Racialized Licensees

(Q31) The following is a list of factors ... In each case, please indicate if you think that factor is more likely to increase the risk of complaints against racialized lawyers and paralegals.

Weighted sample size =707 racialized licensees, 2195 non-racialized licensees

A majority of racialized licensees agreed that nine of the ten factors listed in Chart 19 are definitely or probably likely to increase the risk of complaints against racialized licensees, whereas only four of the ten factors were viewed by the majority of non-racialized respondents as contributing to a higher risk of complaints against racialized licensees.

At the top of the list of risk factors for both groups is the lack of mentors and professional networks (78% racialized, 63% non-racialized) (Q31b), and racial stereotyping by clients (71% racialized, 57% non-racialized) (Q31j). Both factors were identified as potential sources of elevated risk by focus groups participants.

A majority of racialized and almost half of non-racialized respondents (57% and 48% respectively) indicated that miscommunication was definitely or probably a factor increasing the risk of complaints, dovetailing with the findings of the focus groups, which identified factors of cultural miscommunication often overlapping with miscommunications based in language differences, as factors contributing to the risk of increased complaints.

Racialized and non-racialized licensees diverged somewhat on the issues of lower quality articling positions and inadequate training (70% racialized, 51% non-racialized) (31e), and racial stereotyping by other members of the profession or the judiciary (69% racialized, 46% non-racialized) (31i). Here again survey results validate focus group findings, in which racialized participants named both factors as sources of risk.

8.3 Racialized Licensees and the Regulatory Process

Survey participants were asked if differentiation should be made in the regulatory processes for racialized licensees in certain circumstances. Chart 20 shows responses for racialized and non-racialized licensees as well as the whole survey population.

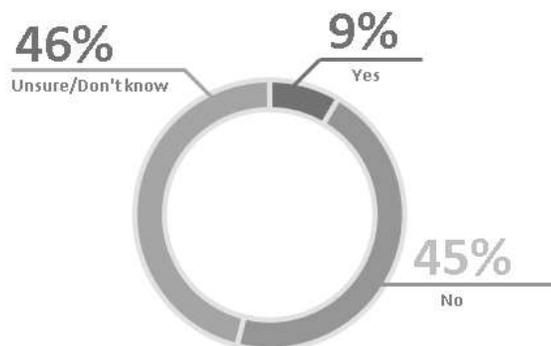

Chart 20 – Should Racialization be Reflected in the Regulatory Process?

(Q32) In the administration of Justice there are circumstances in which legal processes treat those in the system differently depending on whether they are a member of a group viewed to suffer a disadvantage. Do you believe that such a differentiation should be made in the regulatory processes with respect to racialized licensees in certain circumstances?

► Racialized

► Total Sample

► Non Racialized

Weighted sample size =3260 licensees (704 racialized/2185 non-racialized)

Seventeen percent of racialized and 6% of non-racialized respondents agreed that differentiation in the regulatory process be made for racialized licensees. Half or almost half of all respondents indicated they were unsure or required more information (50% racialized, 45% non-racialized).

A final open-ended question asked those who answered yes to the previous question to describe the circumstances where this should occur. A total of 264 responses were coded in 31 substantive categories (Q 32).

Among racialized respondents the five most frequently mentioned instances where racialized licensees should be treated differently were: When applying to Law School (6%), When in need of networking or training programs (6%), In the case of a First Nations person (6%), and When there is evidence of racial discrimination or bias (5%).

Non-racialized respondents most frequent mentions were: Misunderstanding of cultural background/conflict of culture (9%), Language barriers (9%), Mentorship and support services (8%), Where there is evidence of racial discrimination or bias (8%), and When in need of networking/training programs (5%).

9. Conclusions

The goal of this research project, to identify challenges faced by racialized lawyers and paralegals in different practice environment, including entry into practice and advancement proved to be ambitious, complex and at different points, methodologically challenging. Nevertheless, the scope of the research, combined with the mixed method design has yielded a nuanced account of the experience of racialized licensees, validating much of that experience through detailed measurement across the whole population of licensees. Indeed, one of the striking features of the research results was the close agreement of the analysis and insights of key informants and the narrative account emerging from the focus groups, with the quantitative measures generated in the survey phase.

Key Informants depicted a landscape in which racialization is a “consistent and persistent factor” affecting racialized licensee across the arc of their careers as students, during and after entry into practise. From the focus group phase of research their emerged an “overarching narrative of the extent to which racial identity is a pervasive factor in shaping the experiences, choices and career outcomes of racialized lawyers and paralegals.”

Findings of the survey research demonstrated the extent to which racialization establishes a measurable constellation of career challenges for racialized licensees that are distinct from those of their non-racialized colleagues: challenges that are rooted in their racialized status as well as many related challenges that are compounded and amplified as a consequence of the racialization process. In comparison with their non-racialized colleagues, racialized licenses and specific sub-groups, encounter qualitatively more severe challenges during and after entry into practise, yielding measurably greater negative impacts throughout their careers.

As noted in this report not all non-racialized licensees acknowledged the significance and unique challenges associated with the process of racialization. However, one important finding, highlighted in the survey phase, was that a strong majority of non-racialized licensees recognize that ‘racialization exists,’ that the challenges faced by racialized licensees have negative consequences for the legal professions and the public, and that pro-active measures are called for to enhance inclusiveness. Results reported in Section 7 demonstrate a substantial overlap across the racial divide, reflected both in shared opinions regarding the value, scope and direction of change, as well as endorsement for specific measures to address the challenges of racialization and make the legal professions more inclusive.

The methodology and findings of this research will provide the basis for further targeted exploration of the issues associated with the challenges of racialization encountered by specific groups, career stages and practice environments. It is hoped that these results will also lend support to the ongoing effort to design and implement practical measures to reduce the challenges associated with racialization and promote inclusiveness within the legal professions.

Issue Matrix Tier 1 Research Priorities (Lawyers and Paralegals)

	Recruitment and Hiring	Career Paths	Advancement in Mid – Large Firms	Risk of Complaints and Discipline
Why	Key issue as it is both complex and cuts across a number of themes including career paths, advancement in mid and large size firms, and sole and small practices. Issues may involve systemic, cultural, intercultural, and interactive dynamics. Little understanding of this area also warrants Tier 1 attention.	Career trajectories in the legal profession are often set at early stages through self-selection and / or intercultural selection processes operating in the labour market. There is an underrepresentation of racialized lawyers in large firms and a slight overrepresentation of racialized lawyers in sole practices and small firms. Implications for earnings and opportunity are evident. Reasons for these patterns need to be investigated.	This is another key area of research. There is a consensus in diversity research that an essential element in catalyzing change is leadership. It follows that where there is an absence of critical mass and little representation in leadership, cultural and systemic change is more difficult. This is especially true in the legal profession where, for example, consideration for the judiciary is eased by partnership status. Partners have a strong influence on organizational culture.	Available information regarding risk is anecdotal but raises concerns. Data on representation throughout the regulatory process is quite limited. Opportunity to investigate risks is complicated by fact that licensee participants in research will only be those in good standing.
Key Gaps	The 2007 Articling Consultation report revealed that several racialized respondents expressed general concerns that they simply did not fit in at law firms. 2013 informal consultations also found a persistence of this issue.  Gap Summary: How do employers and employees experience ‘fit’? How is it weighted? What is its role in the interview process? Are criteria around ‘fit’ made transparent to the candidate?	Gap Summary: What is the experience of racialized lawyers in large firms at all levels – articling interviews, articling, associate level and partnership? What are the possible explanations for underrepresentation in mid and large firms? What are the possible explanations for the slight overrepresentations in sole practices and small firms? Why are racialized licensees overrepresented in government? What are the factors determining career paths?	The Kay Report found that racialized lawyers are underrepresented in more senior positions, such as partnerships. In 2010, 16% of all lawyers who answered the self-identification question are partners while only 6% of racialized lawyers are partners.  Gap Summary: Why are racialized lawyers not ascending to partnership levels? What are the criteria and procedures that firms use to advance associates to partnerships? What factors determine how associates get opportunities to work on important files? How has partnership track structure changed over time?	Gap Summary: What are the perceptions of racialized lawyers and non-racialized lawyers respecting risk factors? Are there meaningful differences that may inform future research, policy, program design, outreach and communications?

Tier 2 Research (Lawyers and Paralegals)

Direct and Overt Discrimination and Bias

Why This is an important area of study. Overt or direct discrimination, constructive discrimination and bias are incompatible with equality of opportunity and access. Investigation of this theme is fundamental to the study at issue. However, this area may also be more easily observed than Tier 1 systemic issues. Remedies may also be more accessible in that they already exist or may be readily actioned.

Key Gaps Some specific concerns were raised about communications with judges and lawyers. In a 2004 report to the Law Society (the “Kay Report”), Professor Fiona Kay found that racialized lawyers are more likely than non-racialized lawyers to report experiencing disrespectful remarks by judges or other lawyers. Twenty-six per cent (26%) of racialized lawyers reported experiencing disrespectful remarks by judges and other lawyers occasionally, routinely or frequently, compared to 21% of non-racialized lawyers. A focus group in a different study found members experienced bias throughout their careers. 2013 informal consultations found that improper questions were asked during interviews. Cynthia Peterson, DHS counsel indicated that most of her cases by licensees

Areas of Law

The Kay Report found non-racialized lawyers equally likely to practice civil litigation and corporate / commercial law as racialized lawyers. But there is divergence in other practice areas. Racialized lawyers are more likely to practise criminal, immigration, and poverty law whereas non-racialized lawyers are more likely to practice real estate and insurance law. Apart from the impacts of recruitment / hiring practices and Career Paths, this theme may offer distinct areas of inquiry. Broad patterns of diverging experience justify inclusion as a Tier 2 research focus.

Gap 1: What are the factors that determine the areas in which racialized and non-racialized licensees practice?

Incidents of Representation

The Society has found that among most recent licensees the profession is diverse upon entry for both lawyers and paralegals based on 2006 Statistics Canada baseline representation of visible minorities. However, racialized persons are substantially overrepresented in other professions including medicine and engineering, as well as in the proportion of population with post-secondary education. This is a Tier 2 consideration as the issue and related sub-issues rely on demographic data and data which may involve less interactive dynamics.

Representation Generally

Gap Summary: Current Statistics Canada information (2011) about visible minority representation in the Ontario population would provide more useful comparative data. Overrepresentation of visible minorities among university graduates, medicine, and engineers is not reflected in the legal profession. Why / Why not?

Retention

Gap Summary: Change of Status research by Strategic Counsel and Statistical Snapshots indicate concerns around attrition of racialized lawyers. If it is occurring, why? Are non-racialized licensees more or less likely to have access to informal supports such as mentoring, networks, information resources than racialized licensees?

Direct and Overt Discrimination and Bias

against other licensees are complaints arising from employment about sex discrimination / harassment. Caveat: racialized status of complainants is generally not captured during telephone interviews. Of cases involving race, 1/2 of all complainants are Black and most of those are women. DHS is concerned about significant underreporting of complaints.

Gap Summary: A 5% differential may be significant and this work needs updating. Further, forms and impacts of bias need to be investigated with larger qualitative and quantitative sampling. To what extent are incidents of discrimination going unreported? What are the factors militating against reporting? Investigation of the allegation of improper questions is required.

Challenges Facing Racialized Licensees Project Key Informant Interview Guide (FINAL) May 16, 2013

Introduction

As part of its mandate to ensure access to justice, “the Law Society builds equity and diversity values and principles into its policies, programs and procedures,” which includes seeking to “ensure that both law and the practice of law are reflective of all the peoples of Ontario, including Aboriginal Peoples, Francophones and equity-seeking communities.” (LSUC website).

In September 2011 Benchers identified the following as a priority: “considering the development of programs to encourage law firms to enhance diversity within firms, based on identified needs, and create reporting mechanisms”. As a result, Convocation created the Working Group on Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees.

This research project is led by the Working Group and managed by the Equity Initiatives Department. Strategic Communications Inc. (Stratcom) has been contracted by the Law Society to conduct research to identify:

- Challenges faced by racialized lawyers and paralegals in different practice environments, including entry into practice and advancement;

- Factors and practice challenges that could increase the risk of regulatory complaints and discipline, and;
- Identify perceptions of best practices for preventive remedial and/or support strategies.

This interview is part of the first step of the research process. Following a round of individual interviews, Stratcom will convene a series of focus groups in June, and conduct a comprehensive survey of the profession toward the end of the summer. A full written report will incorporate the qualitative and quantitative research findings.

Before we begin, you should know that all interviews are on a not-for-attribution basis. We may use quotes from our interview notes but individuals will not be identified. Original interview notes will be kept in the hands of Stratcom researchers.

This interview will take about 45 minutes [offer to shorten as necessary]. May I proceed?

BACKGROUND

First, could you tell me a little about yourself: how you came to be involved with [firm or organization] and your role there.

Organizations

1. What are the key priorities for [name of organization] at this time?
2. Can you give me a brief description of your membership: numbers, demographic composition (age, gender), and the types of practice environments represented by your membership?

3. What would you say are the benefits of belonging to [name of organization] from the point of view of individual members?
4. Thinking about different practice environments which you've mentioned, how would you describe the major challenges and successes your members face during their respective careers?

*[Probe for differences based on practice environment]
[As necessary, probe for challenges and successes specifically shaped/influenced by racialization]*

Firms/Government/ In-House

5. Thinking about all your colleagues, as a group, how would you describe the major career challenges and successes that lawyers/paralegals face in your firm/practice environment ?

6. And if I asked you about racialized lawyers/paralegals [offer definition] in your firm/practice environment [or based on your wider career experience] how would you describe the major career challenges and successes facing this group?

*[Probe for similarities and differences with non-racialized licensees]
[Probe for differences based on practice environment. ]
[As necessary, probe for challenges and successes specifically shaped/influenced by racialization]*

RACIALIZATION

7. [You have mentioned/Do you see] racialization [offer definition] as a barrier to advancement for some of your members/colleagues - how does that manifest itself in the day-to-day experience of lawyers?

<sup>1</sup> 'Racialized' expresses race as the process by which groups are socially constructed, as well as to modes of self-identification related to race, and includes Arab, Black (e.g. African-Canadian, African, Caribbean), Chinese, East-Asian (e.g. Japanese, Korean), Latin American and Hispanic, South Asian (e.g. Indo-Canadian, Indian Subcontinent), South-East Asian (e.g. Vietnamese, Cambodian, Thai, Filipino), and West Asian (e.g. Iranian, Afghan) persons.

8. How does racialization play a part in the following circumstances:

- Entry into the profession after articles?
- Career paths?
- Representation, retention, change of status of racialized members within the profession?
- Access to justice for Ontarians?

9. When you think about the barriers facing your members/racialized colleagues arising from their racialized status, what would you say are the most difficult to remedy?

Are there other barriers that you would identify as significant, but perhaps not as difficult to change as the ones you just described?

[Probe for ranking of issues/barriers, most difficult → less difficult, applying the Tier 1 and Tier 2 framework]

[Probe for IMPACTS: How does each factor affect entry, career paths, representation, and access to justice?]

10. Earlier you mentioned challenges not directly related to racialized status facing your members/colleagues, such as [from Q's 4-5 above]. Do these other challenges have as great an impact, just as much impact, or less impact overall than racialization on the careers and practices of your members/ colleagues, in your view?

[Probe for relative weighting of factors, different impacts for subgroups, comparisons and exceptions, case examples]

11. Part of our study is to inquire about risk factors facing all Society members<sup>2</sup>. What are the factors that could increase the risk of complaints / discipline generally? Are there any factors of greater concern to your members/colleagues?

12. Let's turn to solutions. Thinking about the barriers you mentioned earlier are there specific measures you would recommend to deal with the challenges faced by racialized licensees? [Probe for best practices]

13. What do you feel should be the Law Society's role in addressing the barriers you've outlined? Compared to the role of other bodies/agencies?

14. Do you have any final comments you would like to add before we finish up?

Introduction (5 minutes)

Introduction / Purpose of the Research

GOOD EVENING. WELCOME AND THANK YOU FOR TAKING THE TIME TO PARTICIPATE IN THIS FOCUS GROUP DISCUSSION. MY NAME IS DAVID KRAFT AND THIS IS MY COLLEAGUE ANGELA LEE.

IN SEPTEMBER 2011 BENCHERS IDENTIFIED THE FOLLOWING AS A PRIORITY: "CONSIDERING THE DEVELOPMENT OF PROGRAMS TO ENCOURAGE LAW FIRMS TO ENHANCE DIVERSITY WITHIN FIRMS, BASED ON IDENTIFIED NEEDS, AND CREATE REPORTING MECHANISMS." AS A RESULT, CONVOCATION CREATED THE WORKING GROUP ON CHALLENGES FACED BY RACIALIZED LICENSEES.

THIS RESEARCH PROJECT IS LED BY THE WORKING GROUP AND MANAGED BY THE EQUITY INITIATIVES DEPARTMENT OF THE LAW SOCIETY. STRATEGIC COMMUNICATIONS INC. (STRATCOM) HAS BEEN CONTRACTED BY THE LAW SOCIETY TO CONDUCT RESEARCH TO IDENTIFY:

- CHALLENGES FACED BY RACIALIZED LAWYERS AND PARALEGALS IN DIFFERENT PRACTICE ENVIRONMENTS, INCLUDING ENTRY INTO PRACTICE AND ADVANCEMENT; [POST DEFINITION OF RACIALIZATION]
- FACTORS AND PRACTICE CHALLENGES THAT COULD INCREASE THE RISK OF REGULATORY COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE, AND;
- IDENTIFY PERCEPTIONS OF BEST PRACTICES FOR PREVENTIVE REMEDIAL AND/OR SUPPORT STRATEGIES.

THIS FOCUS GROUP IS PART OF THE QUALITATIVE PHASE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT. FOLLOWING THE COMPLETION OF THE FOCUS GROUP RESEARCH IN JULY WE WILL CONDUCT A COMPREHENSIVE ONLINE SURVEY OF THE PROFESSION, ALL MEMBERS OF THE LAW SOCIETY WHO ARE IN GOOD STANDING, INCLUDING YOU AND THE OTHER FOCUS GROUP PARTICIPANTS.

A FULL WRITTEN REPORT WILL INCORPORATE THE QUALITATIVE AND QUANTITATIVE RESEARCH FINDINGS.

IN THIS DISCUSSION I'M INTERESTED IN EXPLORING YOUR EXPERIENCE, PERCEPTIONS AND IMPRESSIONS REGARDING THE CHALLENGES FACING RACIALIZED LAWYERS AND PARALEGALS.

I AM NOT A LAWYER OR PARALEGAL AND I AM NOT RACIALIZED. MY ROLE HERE IS AS A RESEARCHER AND FACILITATOR, RELYING ON EACH OF YOU TO SHARE YOUR EXPERIENCES, PERCEPTIONS AND IMPRESSIONS. THE QUESTIONS THAT I WILL BE ASKING ARE COMPLETELY OPEN-ENDED. YOU ARE FREE TO INTERPRET THEM IN THE WAY THAT YOU BELIEVE IS MOST APPROPRIATE. I AM EQUALLY INTERESTED IN EVERYONE'S INTERPRETATIONS AND RESPONSES TO MY QUESTIONS.

How it works

THIS DISCUSSION IS ORGANIZED AS A FOCUS GROUP - AN ORGANIZED CONVERSATION IN WHICH WE WILL TOUCH ON A NUMBER OF DIFFERENT TOPICS.

Confidentiality

WE ARE TAKING NOTES/RECORDING AND VIEWING THIS CONVERSATION. WE USE THESE NOTES AND RECORDINGS TO PREPARE A REPORT. HOWEVER, YOUR NAME WILL NOT BE MENTIONED ANYWHERE IN THE FINAL REPORT, AND IT WILL NOT BE POSSIBLE FOR ANYONE TO IDENTIFY YOU PERSONALLY. THERE ARE STAFF MEMBERS FROM THE LAW SOCIETY OBSERVING THIS DISCUSSION AND THEY ARE PLEDGED TO KEEP ANYTHING THAT THEY HEAR IN THIS DISCUSSION STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL. THAT MEANS NO COMMUNICATION OF ANY KIND THAT WOULD ASSOCIATE YOU WITH ANY OPINION OR REMARK ARISING FROM THIS DISCUSSION.

I WOULD ASK YOU ALSO TO RESPECT THE CONFIDENTIALITY OF THE OTHER PARTICIPANTS. YOU MAY WANT TO TALK ABOUT THIS DISCUSSION WITH FRIENDS, FAMILY OR COLLEAGUES AND FEEL FREE TO DO SO, BUT PLEASE DON'T ATTRIBUTE ANY COMMENTS OR SPECIFIC IDEAS TO ANY OF THE INDIVIDUALS WHO PARTICIPATED IN THIS DISCUSSION, IN ANY WAY THAT COULD LEAD TO THEIR BEING ASSOCIATED WITH A SPECIFIC IDEA OR REMARK. OKAY? DOES EVERYONE AGREE? [GET RESPONSE]

My role, your role

MY ROLE HERE IS TO ASK QUESTIONS AND LISTEN. I WILL ENCOURAGE ALL OF YOU TO PARTICIPATE. AS THE DISCUSSION GETS GOING PLEASE FEEL FREE TO JUMP IN, EXPRESS YOUR THOUGHTS AND FEELINGS, AND ALSO MAKE ROOM FOR OTHERS TO PARTICIPATE. THERE ARE NO WRONG ANSWERS IN THIS DISCUSSION AND I'M NOT SEEKING AGREEMENT WITH ANY PARTICULAR OPINION. SO PLEASE FEEL FREE TO SPEAK YOUR MIND.

OUR TIME IS LIMITED AND I HAVE A LIST OF QUESTIONS THAT I WANT TO DISCUSS. CONSEQUENTLY, FROM TIME TO TIME I MAY INTERRUPT THE DISCUSSION, EITHER TO HEAR FROM SOMEONE ELSE OR TO MOVE ON TO ANOTHER QUESTION. I APOLOGIZE IN ADVANCE FOR THOSE INTERRUPTIONS.

OKAY? *[MODERATOR PAUSES FOR QUESTIONS/FEEDBACK]

IF YOU HAVE A CELL PHONE, PLEASE TURN IT OFF, OR SET IT TO SILENT [IF YOU CAN].

[REMINDEE PARTICIPANTS OF THE LENGTH OF THE DISCUSSION AND THE END TIME. PROVIDE DIRECTIONS TO WASHROOMS]

1. Go 'ROUND: YOUR JOB / PROFESSION (10 MIN)

LET'S START WITH INTRODUCTIONS. AS WE GO AROUND THE TABLE, PLEASE INTRODUCE YOURSELF, BRIEFLY DESCRIBE YOUR PRACTICE CONTEXT OR YOUR EMPLOYMENT STATUS IF YOU ARE NOT PRACTISING AT THIS TIME, AND YOUR EXPERIENCE.

2. REFLECTING ON THE PROFESSION (35 MIN)

TELL ME A LITTLE BIT ABOUT WHAT IS HAPPENING IN YOUR PROFESSION? WHAT ARE THE IMPORTANT EVENTS, DEVELOPMENTS OR TRENDS THAT AFFECT HOW YOU ARE ABLE TO DO YOUR JOB AND PURSUE YOUR CAREER?

[PROBE FOR IMPORTANT CHALLENGES TO EMPLOYMENT/ESTABLISHING A PRACTICE, CAREER ADVANCEMENT, CHOICES WITH RESPECT TO AREAS OF PRACTICE, QUALITY OF SERVICES AND ACCESS TO JUSTICE]

AS YOU KNOW, WE'RE HERE TO IDENTIFY AND DISCUSS CHALLENGES FACED BY RACIALIZED LAWYERS AND PARALEGALS. WHAT DOES THAT MEAN TO YOU? WHAT COMES TO MIND WHEN I SAY WE'RE TALKING ABOUT 'CHALLENGES FACED BY RACIALIZED LAWYERS/ PARALEGALS'?

[OPEN ENDED, DON'T PROMPT AT FIRST...LET THIS CONVERSATION GO FOR A FEW MINUTES]

HOW SIGNIFICANT IS RACE TO YOU IN YOUR LIFE AS A LAWYER? IN WHAT WAYS DOES RACE MAKE A DIFFERENCE (POSITIVE OR NEGATIVE) FOR YOU?

[GO AROUND. ALL DISCUSS]

WE'VE HEARD MENTION OF [NOTE ISSUES ARISING FROM THE PRECEDING DISCUSSION]. DO THESE OUTCOMES DIFFER IN DIFFERENT PRACTICE ENVIRONMENTS?

[PROBE ON SPECIFIC PRACTICE AREAS ACCORDING TO WHO'S IN THE ROOM.]

DOES RACE MAKE A DIFFERENCE AT DIFFERENT CAREER STAGES OR IN DIFFERENT CIRCUMSTANCES? FOR EXAMPLE:

ENTRY INTO PRACTICE?

[PROBE FOR SPECIFIC EXAMPLES OF RECRUITMENT EXPERIENCES, TYPE AND FORM OF INTERVIEWS, HOW INDIVIDUAL PARTICIPANTS FIND OUT ABOUT POSITIONS, ETC.]

ADVANCEMENT WITHIN A SPECIFIC FIRM?

CAREER PATH?

[PROBE HIGHER PROPORTION OF SOLES ARE RACIALIZED (19% TO 17%), LOWER PROPORTION ARE PARTNERS (6% OF RACIALIZED VS. 16% OF RESPONDENTS ARE)]

AREAS OF LAW?

REPRESENTATION, RETENTION, CHANGE OF STATUS OF RACIALIZED MEMBERS WITHIN THE PROFESSION?

OTHER? [DECISIONS TO LEAVE THE PROFESSION?]

3. DIFFERENCES AND SIMILARITIES (15 MIN)

YOU HAVE ALREADY TOLD ME THAT THE OUTCOMES OF RACIALIZATION VARY DEPENDING ON DIFFERENT PRACTICE ENVIRONMENTS AND CAREER CIRCUMSTANCES [REFERENCE PRECEDING DISCUSSION]. DOES RACE IMPACT DIFFERENT GROUPS OF LAWYERS DIFFERENTLY?

TALK ABOUT YOUR EXPERIENCES ACCORDING TO THE RACIALIZED GROUP WITH WHICH YOU ARE ASSOCIATED.

[EXPLORE PERCEPTIONS OF OUTCOMES FOR:]

LICENSEES WHO ARE FEMALE AND RACIALIZED? [ASK FOR EXAMPLES]

YOUNGER AND RACIALIZED LAWYERS/PARALEGALS? [ASK FOR EXAMPLES]

OTHER GROUPS?

COMMUNITIES/ REGIONS?

4. IMPACTS (25 MINUTES)

WE HAVE TALKED ABOUT [BRIEF SUMMARY OF MAIN TOPICS]

- MARKET COMPETITION MAKING LIFE HARDER FOR ALL LAWYERS BUT RACIALIZED LAWYERS IN PARTICULAR
- OVERT DISCRIMINATION/RACISM
- STRUCTURAL AND BEHAVIOURAL BARRIERS THAT HAVE THE EFFECT OF DISCRIMINATING THOUGH NOT DESIGNED TO DISCRIMINATE? [GIVE EXAMPLES FROM DISCUSSION]
- LOW EXPECTATIONS (BY CLIENTS/COLLEAGUES/JUDGES/OFFICERS OF THE COURT)
- STANDARDS OF PERFECTION APPLIED TO RACIALIZED LAWYERS – INCREASING COMPLAINTS?
- THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN 'FIT' AND RACIALIZATION IN HIRING/ADVANCEMENT/WORKFLOW.
- UNDER-REPRESENTATION AT SENIOR LEVELS OF MEDIUM AND LARGE FIRMS
- OVER-REPRESENTATION IN SOLES / SMALLS
- LACK OF ARTICLING OPPORTUNITIES

ARE THERE OTHER IMPACTS OF RACIALIZATION THAT HAVE NOT BEEN MENTIONED THAT YOU WOULD LIKE TO ADD TO THIS LIST? [NOTE ADDITIONS]

I'D LIKE TO LEARN MORE ABOUT THE IMPACT THAT THESE FACTORS HAVE.

HOW MANY OF YOU [HANDS UP] FEEL THAT ONE OR MORE OF THESE FACTORS HAS NEGATIVELY AFFECTED YOUR CAREER PATH? [COUNT] WHAT WAS THE IMPACT, CAN YOU DESCRIBE IT FOR ME IN A NUTSHELL?

DO THESE IMPACTS AFFECT THE QUALITY OF SERVICES YOU CAN PROVIDE TO YOUR CLIENTS AND THE COMMUNITY? [REMINDER OF CONFIDENTIALITY. THEY MAY NOT BE COMFORTABLE ANSWERING IN FRONT OF COLLEAGUES].

DO THESE IMPACTS OR CHALLENGES THAT YOU HAVE DESCRIBED INFLUENCE ACCESS TO JUSTICE FOR THE PUBLIC IN ONTARIO?

[PROBE ADEQUACY/'FIT' OF LEGAL REPRESENTATION FOR RACIALIZED COMMUNITIES]

[PROBE REPRESENTATION OF RACIALIZED GROUPS IN PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS – CROWN PROSECUTORS? THE JUDICIARY?]

IN MY INTRODUCTION TO THIS DISCUSSION I MENTIONED THAT ONE OF THE OBJECTIVES OF THIS PROJECT SPECIFIED BY THE LAW SOCIETY WAS TO IDENTIFY “FACTORS AND PRACTICE CHALLENGES THAT COULD INCREASE THE RISK OF REGULATORY COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE” FOR RACIALIZED LICENSEES. DO ANY OF THE IMPACTS OF RACIALIZATION THAT WE HAVE BEEN DISCUSSING INCREASE THE RISK OF REGULATORY COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE?

[PROBE FOR EXAMPLES]

[TEST FOR CONSENSUS: ARE RACIALIZED LICENSEES MORE VULNERABLE/AT HIGHER RISK OF COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE?]

ARE THERE ANY POSITIVES ABOUT RACIALIZATION?

5. REMEDIES (20 MIN)

MANY LAWYERS AND FIRMS ARE CONCERNED ABOUT DIVERSITY AND EQUITY. HAVE YOU SEEN WHAT YOU CONSIDER TO BE GOOD PRACTICES THAT YOU WOULD WANT TO RECOMMEND BE STUDIED OR SCALED UP TO ADDRESS THE CHALLENGES WE HAVE BEEN DISCUSSING?

- BY INDIVIDUALS AND VOLUNTARY ASSOCIATIONS?
- BY HR DEPTS IN FIRMS? BY MANAGING PARTNERS IN FIRMS?
- BY GOVERNMENTS/PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS BUYING LEGAL SERVICES?
- BY THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL? CROWN PROSECUTORS?
- BY THE LAW SOCIETY?

ARE THESE GOOD APPROACHES (AND IF SO, WHY?)

[LIST SPECIFIC MEASURES THAT HAVE BEEN IMPLEMENTED OR PROPOSED, E.G.]

- APPOINT MORE RACIALIZED JUDGES/ADJUDICATORS
- GATHER STATISTICS ON RACIALIZED IDENTITY OF LICENSEES IN COMPLAINTS PROCESS
- ENFORCE PROCUREMENT RULES BY GOVERNMENT
- MENTORSHIP PROGRAMS
- MORE SOCIAL OPPORTUNITIES NOT LINKED TO TRADITIONAL 'WHITE' CULTURE
- RESTRICT INTAKE OF NEW LICENSEES
- HR/RECRUITMENT PRACTICES
  - 'BLIND' HR POLICIES (NO NAMES OR PERSONAL ID IN EARLY PHASES OF HIRING)
  - [ADD] OTHER SPECIFIC HR AND RECRUITMENT PRACTICES
- DEVELOP A MORE DIVERSE PUBLIC FACE/IMAGE FOR THE LAW SOCIETY
- SANCTION/PROMOTE COLLECTION AND SHARING OF DEMOGRAPHIC DATA RE: GENDER/RACIAL COMPOSITION OF LAW FIRMS
- PROMOTE 'CULTURAL COMPETENCE TRAINING'

- ENCOURAGE DIVERSITY CRITERIA IN CORPORATE PROCUREMENT OF LEGAL SERVICES [AS EVIDENT TO SOME DEGREE AMONGST LEGAL LEADERS FOR DIVERSITY]

6. CLOSING REMARKS (5 MIN)

THAT BRINGS US TO THE END OF THE DISCUSSION.

[TIME PERMITTING MODERATOR MAY ALLOW ONE OR TWO FINAL COMMENTS]

AS I HAVE EXPLAINED, THE RESULTS OF THIS AND OTHER FOCUS GROUP DISCUSSIONS - AS WELL AS THE RESULTS OF AN ONLINE SURVEY THAT YOU WILL BE INVITED TO PARTICIPATE IN - WILL BE INCORPORATED INTO A RESEARCH REPORT SUBMITTED TO LAW SOCIETY. TO REPEAT MY EARLIER PROMISE, ALL OF THIS WILL BE REPORTED IN A STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL WAY AND YOU WILL NOT IDENTIFIED ANYWHERE IN THE REPORTING PROCESS.

THANK YOU FOR TAKING THE TIME TO PARTICIPATE THIS DISCUSSION.

IN THIS DISCUSSION I'M INTERESTED IN EXPLORING YOUR EXPERIENCE, PERCEPTIONS AND IMPRESSIONS REGARDING THE CHALLENGES FACING RACIALIZED LAWYERS AND PARALEGALS. ALTHOUGH YOU YOURSELVES ARE NOT RACIALIZED LAWYERS OR PARALEGALS, I'M INTERESTED IN YOUR EXPERIENCES AND YOUR PERCEPTION OF THE ISSUES. I'M INTERESTED IN YOUR VIEWS REGARDING THE EXPERIENCES OF RACIALIZED LAWYERS AND PARALEGALS IN DIFFERENT PRACTICE ENVIRONMENTS.

I AM HERE AS A RESEARCHER AND FACILITATOR, RELYING ON EACH OF YOU TO SHARE YOUR EXPERIENCES, PERCEPTIONS AND IMPRESSIONS. THE QUESTIONS THAT I WILL BE ASKING ARE COMPLETELY OPEN-ENDED. YOU ARE FREE TO INTERPRET THEM IN THE WAY THAT YOU BELIEVE IS MOST APPROPRIATE. THERE NO RIGHT OR WRONG ANSWERS A FOCUS GROUP. I AM EQUALLY INTERESTED IN EVERYONE'S INTERPRETATIONS AND RESPONSES TO MY QUESTIONS.

How it works

3. DIFFERENCES AND SIMILARITIES (15 MIN)

ENTRY INTO PRACTICE

IN OUR STUDY AND IN PAST RESEARCH WITH RACIALIZED LAWYERS, THERE HAVE BEEN REPORTS OF :

- IMPROPER QUESTIONS ASKED IN INTERVIEWS (QUESTIONS ABOUT FAMILY ORIGIN, RELIGION, POLITICAL PARTY AFFILIATIONS ETC.
- DISPARATE OUTCOMES IN FINDING ARTICLES AND POST-CALL FIRST POSITIONS INCLUDING HIRE-BACK

ARE YOU FAMILIAR WITH THESE CONCERNS?

ANY THOUGHTS AS TO WHY OR WHY NOT THESE PATTERNS MAY EXIST?

HAVING REGARD TO OUR EARLIER DISCUSSION ABOUT YOUR EXPERIENCES ENTERING THE PRACTICE, ARE THERE ANY PROCESSES THAT MAY CREATE CHALLENGES (INTENDED OR UNINTENDED)?

ADVANCEMENT

PAST QUANTITATIVE RESEARCH CONDUCTED BY THE SOCIETY HAS SHOWN THAT RLS ASCEND TO PARTNERSHIPS IN FIRMS AT LOWER RATES. (6% OF RACIALIZED VS. 16% OF TOTAL RESPONDENTS).

ANY THOUGHTS AS TO WHY THESE PATTERNS PERSIST?

HAVING REGARD TO OUR EARLIER DISCUSSION ABOUT YOUR ADVANCEMENT EXPERIENCES, DO ELEMENTS OF THAT PROCESS POSE ANY CHALLENGES FOR RLS? (INTENDED OR UNINTENDED)

ANY DIFFERENCES FOR GOVERNMENT OR CORPORATE ENVIRONEMENTS?

CAREER PATH?

PAST QUANTITATIVE RESEARCH BY THE SOCIETY SHOWS RLS OCCUPY A HIGHER PROPORTION OF POSITIONS IN SOLE AND SMALL FIRMS THAN NRLS ( RACIALIZED V. TOTAL RESPONDENTS (21% TO 19%), AND ARE OVERREPRESENTED IN GOVERNMENT AS WELL.

ANY THOUGHTS AS TO FACTORS THAT MAY CONTRIBUTE TO OVERREPRESENTATION OF RLS IN SOLES / SMALLS / GOVERNMENT?

HAVING REGARD TO OUR EARLIER DISCUSSION ABOUT HOW YOUR CAREER WAS CONSTRUCTED, DO YOU HAVE ANY INSIGHTS INTO THE PATTERNS?

AREAS OF LAW

PAST RESEARCH BY THE SOCIETY (PROFESSOR MCKAY P113) SHOWS NON-RACIALIZED LAWYERS EQUALLY LIKELY TO PRACTICE CIVIL LITIGATION AND CORPORATE / COMMERCIAL LAW AS RACIALIZED LAWYERS. BUT THERE IS DIVERGENCE IN OTHER PRACTICE AREAS. RACIALIZED LAWYERS ARE MORE LIKELY TO PRACTICE CRIMINAL, IMMIGRATION, AND POVERTY LAW WHEREAS NON-RACIALIZED LAWYERS ARE MORE LIKELY TO PRACTICE REAL ESTATE, INSURANCE LAW AND FAMILY.

ANY THOUGHTS AS TO FACTORS THAT MAY CONTRIBUTE TO THE PERSISTENCE OF THESE PATTERNS?

ANY INTENDED OR UNINTENDED BARRIERS TO RLS PRACTICING REAL ESTATE, INSURANCE, OR FAMILY LAW?

HAVING REGARD TO OUR EARLIER DISCUSSION ABOUT FACTORS THAT LED YOU TO YOUR PRACTICE AREA, DO YOU HAVE ANY INSIGHTS THAT MAY INDICATE REASONS FOR THE PATTERNS?

OTHER

DECISION TO LEAVE THE PROFESSION?]

MANY OF YOU HAVE SUGGESTED THAT THE OUTCOMES OF RACIALIZATION VARY DEPENDING ON DIFFERENT PRACTICE ENVIRONMENTS AND CAREER CIRCUMSTANCES [REFERENCE PRECEDING DISCUSSION].

DOES RACE IMPACT DIFFERENT GROUPS OF LAWYERS DIFFERENTLY?

TALK ABOUT YOUR KNOWLEDGE OR IMPRESSIONS OF THE EXPERIENCES OF DIFFERENT RACIALIZED GROUPS WITH WHICH YOU HAVE BEEN ASSOCIATED.

[EXPLORE PERCEPTIONS OF OUTCOMES FOR:]

NEW LICENSEES AND RACIALIZED LICENSEES COMPARED TO NEW LICENSEES AND NON -RACIALIZED

FEMALE AND RACIALIZED COMPARED TO MALE LICENSEES AND RACIALIZED? [ASK FOR EXAMPLES]

OTHER GROUPS?

COMMUNITIES/ REGIONS?

4. IMPACTS (25 MINUTES)

WE HAVE TALKED ABOUT [BRIEF SUMMARY OF MAIN TOPICS]

- MARKET COMPETITION MAKING LIFE HARDER FOR ALL LAWYERS BUT RACIALIZED LAWYERS IN PARTICULAR

DO ANY OF THE IMPACTS OF RACIALIZATION THAT WE HAVE BEEN DISCUSSING INCREASE THE RISK OF REGULATORY COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE? FROM YOUR EXPERIENCE AND OBSERVATIONS, ARE RACIALIZED LICENSEES AT MORE RISK OF REGULATORY COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE THAN NON-RACIALIZED LICENSEES?

WHAT DOES SUCCESS LOOK LIKE TO YOU WITH RESPECT TO THE ISSUES WE'VE TALKED ABOUT TONIGHT?

IS IT APPROPRIATE FOR THE LAW SOCIETY TO CONDUCT THIS TYPE OF RESEARCH? IS THIS PROJECT A GOOD IDEA?

6. CLOSING REMARKS (5 MIN)

THAT BRINGS US TO THE END OF THE DISCUSSION.

[TIME PERMITTING MODERATOR MAY ALLOW ONE OR TWO FINAL COMMENTS]

AS I HAVE EXPLAINED, THE RESULTS OF THIS AND OTHER FOCUS GROUP DISCUSSIONS - AS WELL AS THE RESULTS OF AN ONLINE SURVEY THAT YOU WILL BE INVITED TO PARTICIPATE IN – WILL BE INCORPORATED INTO A RESEARCH REPORT SUBMITTED TO LAW SOCIETY. ### A. Introduction and Demographics

Welcome.

The Law Society of Upper Canada is committed to advancing equity and diversity in the legal profession. As the general population of Ontario grows increasingly diverse, the legal profession is evolving with it. To ensure the public's access to justice and to promote excellence in the profession, the Law Society considers equity and diversity in all aspects of its mandate.

As one step in this effort, Convocation created the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group in 2012, with a mandate to identify those challenges and consider strategies for enhanced inclusion at all career stages. The term 'Racialized' expresses race as the process by which groups are socially constructed, as well as to modes of self-identification, related to race, and includes Arab, Black (e.g. African-Canadian, African, Caribbean), Chinese, East-Asian (e.g. Japanese, Korean), Latin American and Hispanic, South Asian (e.g. Indo-Canadian, Indian Subcontinent), South-East Asian (e.g. Vietnamese, Cambodian, Thai, Filipino), and West Asian (e.g. Iranian, Afghan) persons.

Because the Law Society has already completed a thorough consultation with the Aboriginal bar, this consultation does not focus on barriers faced by that community. The Aboriginal Bar Consultation Report is available on the Law Society website.

This survey is an initiative of the Law Society of Upper Canada's Working Group but it is being conducted by Strategic Communications Inc. (Stratcom), an independent Canadian research firm. The survey is the third part of a larger study that included one-on-one interviews with experts (May/June 2013) and focus groups (July /August 2013). In addition the Working Group has arranged informal consultations with members of the legal profession.

The questions in this survey are designed to fulfill the mandate of the Working Group by enquiring into:

- challenges faced by racialized and non-racialized lawyers and paralegals in different practice environments, including entry into practice and advancement; factors and practice challenges that could increase the risk of regulatory complaints and discipline, and
- best practices for preventive, remedial and/or support strategies.

Note on terminology: For brevity we often use the term ‘licensees’ rather than ‘lawyers and paralegals’.

This survey will take about [FINAL TEST TIMING, max 20 min] to complete.

All of the responses are confidential and anonymous. The collected data will not be attributed to any individual respondent.

YOUR PARTICIPATION IS VALUED AND APPRECIATED. WHETHER YOU CONSIDER YOURSELF A RACIALIZED LICENSEE OR NOT, YOUR INPUT IS EXTREMELY IMPORTANT. THANK YOU FOR PARTICIPATING.

If you have questions or concerns about the survey, please email armand.cousineau@stratcom.ca

1) Are you currently licensed as a lawyer or a paralegal in Ontario?

Practising -- LAWYER

Not practising at this time – LAWYER

PARALEGAL providing legal services

PARALEGAL currently not providing legal services

2) How long have you been licensed to practise or to provide legal services in Ontario?

<2 years

2-5 years

6-10 years

11-15 years

>15 years

2a) [for Paralegals] Were you licensed under the ‘grandparenting’ provisions that were introduced when the Law Society became the regulator of the paralegal profession in 2007?

Yes

No

3) Which of the following best describes your practice environment?

Repeat questions with response categories for the following:

- b) [PARALEGALS] When employers interview paralegals, the most important factor to assess is the ability of the candidate to fit within the firm environment.
- c) Any problems faced by racialized licensees will work themselves out without specific mitigating measures.
- d) Being racialized can be a positive benefit for paralegals and lawyers, because they can recruit clients through their communities' networks.

- e) It is important to reduce discrimination but the profession's main responsibility is to the client and making sure they are being served by competent lawyers and paralegals.
- f) The use of 'fit' as a criterion for hiring unduly limits the relevant assessment of a candidate.
- g) [LAWYERS] There should be a more concerted effort by the legal profession to provide better opportunities for articling and positions for racialized lawyers.
- h) All members of the Ontario legal community should strive for a profession that is as welcoming as possible for anyone who wants to pursue a legal career.
- i) Many legal firms and businesses are interested in promoting diversity, so being racialized is an advantage in many employment situations.
- j) Market competition is a challenge for all lawyers and paralegals, but racialized licensees are especially affected by it.
- k) It is natural and desirable that licensees from various backgrounds conform to the professional culture that is already established in Ontario.
- l) The legal profession in Ontario would be stronger if there were more racialized licensees at senior levels of medium and large firms
- m) The challenges faced by racialized licensees have more to do with challenges associated with language than race.

D. Best Practices and Role of the Law Society and Other Actors

- 25) Many lawyers, paralegals, and firms are concerned about diversity and equity. Have you seen what you consider to be good practices that you would want to recommend be studied or scaled up to address the challenges facing racialized licensees? [OPEN ENDED]

31) Some concerns have been raised in the profession that racialized licensees may be more vulnerable to complaints (from other lawyers/paralegals, or from clients) compared to non-racialized licensees.

The following is a list of factors that some have suggested may contribute to increasing the risk of complaints against racialized licensees. In each case, please indicate if you think that factor is more likely or not more likely to increase the risk of complaints against racialized -- as compared to non-racialized -- lawyers and paralegals.

a) Financial hardship leading to difficulty managing the business side of running a legal practice. In your view, does this factor disproportionately increase the risk of complaints against racialized lawyers and paralegals?

Yes, definitely

Yes, probably

No, probably not

No, definitely not

I don't know

- b) Lack of mentors and professional networks to support a lawyer/paralegal if they run into significant challenges in their practice. [In your view, does this factor disproportionately increase the risk of complaints against racialized lawyers and paralegals?]
- c) Bad faith clients. [In your view, does this factor disproportionately increase the risk of complaints against racialized lawyers and paralegals?]

- j) Racial stereotyping by clients. [ In your view, does this factor disproportionately increase the risk of complaints against racialized lawyers and paralegals?]

32) In the administration of justice there are circumstances in which legal processes treat those in the system differently depending on whether they are a member of a group viewed to suffer a disadvantage. Do you believe that such a differentiation should be made in the regulatory processes with respect to racialized licensees in certain circumstances.

Yes

No

I am not sure, I would need more information

31) [IF YES TO PREV Q] Please describe the circumstances where this should occur. [OPEN]

1. The Audit & Finance Committee (“the Committee”) met on October 14, 2014. Committee members in attendance were Chris Bredt (co-chair), Peter Wardle (co-chair), Adriana Doyle (vice-chair), Seymour Epstein, Michelle Haigh, Judith Potter (phone), James Scarfone, Alan Silverstein and Catherine Strosberg (phone). Bob Evans also attended.
2. Law Society staff in attendance: Robert Lapper, Wendy Tysall, Fred Grady, Brenda Albuquerque-Boutilier and Andrew Cawse.

TAB 1.3

FOR DECISION*J.S. DENISON FUNDIN CAMERAMotion

3. That Convocation approve:
  - a) a grant of $2,500 to Applicant 2014-24 with $1,000 already paid under the administrative provisions of the Fund.
  - b) a grant of $3,000 to Applicant 2014-25 with $1,000 already paid under the administrative provisions of the Fund.

RationaleApplicant 2014-24

4. Applicant 2014-24 was called to the bar in January 2013 but did not immediately start her professional career due to some mental and physical issues, only changing her status to sole practitioner last month. She is also looking for other work and is working part-time. Part of her networking is volunteering for the Lawyers Feed the Hungry program. She is unmarried with no dependents and lives with her father but he cannot provide total financial support.
5. Her 2013 income totaled just under $18,000 with $15,000 of this sourced from employment insurance benefits. Her only income in 2014 is currently $5,000 from sporadic contract work and $500 a month from her part time work. Her total expenses are difficult to quantify as she is living with her father but she estimates incremental amounts for payments such transport, communication, LAWPRO and Law Society fees at $780 per month. She has no assets and student loans of $27,000.
6. The applicant is struggling at the start of her career with limited financial resources and for the purposes of applying the terms of Mr. Denison's will can be described as indigent. Her recent mental and physical problems separate her from the usual financial difficulties experienced by people at the start of their careers. However she does have the underlying support of her father. A grant of $2,500 is recommended based on the payment of fees and premiums to enable her to practice and also funding some modest living expenses.

Applicant 2014-25

7. Applicant 2014-25 was called to the bar in June 2014 after serving abridged, unpaid articles. He is living in another province but this does not disqualify him from a grant. As an NCA student he has found integration difficult and this has been aggravated by marital and family problems leading to mental health issues. He is divorced with two young children so he needs to provide financial and parenting support.
8. He is not practicing and is currently unemployed, looking for any kind of work after losing a part-time job. His 2013 taxable income was $23,000 and he estimates his 2014 income at $17,000 including $4,000 in employment insurance. He received $500 from the Law Society's Repayable Allowance Program this year. He has received some financial support from friends but has probably depleted this resource. The low income cut-off for one person (ignoring child support) in the applicant's area is $26,000.
9. His core living expenses are estimated at $17,000 per year, relatively low as he is staying in a room with low rent. He has no assets and liabilities totaling $48,000 in loans and credit card debt.
10. The applicant is projecting a low income level in 2014 after a number of years of low income and for the purposes of applying the terms of Mr. Denison's will can be described as indigent. This is created and aggravated by being a recent immigrant and stress issues. A grant of $3,000 is recommended with $1,000 paid immediately under the administrative provisions of the fund. This is based on the projected difference between his income and expenses, the average amount of grant for the circumstances and the balance remaining in the Fund.

Key Issues and Considerations

11. The balance of the fund at the beginning of 2014 was $46,000 with payments of $36,000 paid during the current year leaving a balance of $10,000 ($4,500 if the current applications are approved).

TAB 2.1

FOR DECISION
2015 LIBRARYCO INC. BUDGET

Motion:

3. That Convocation approve the LibraryCo Inc. budget for 2015 incorporating Law Society funding of $7.7 million or $202 per lawyer.

Rationale

4. The draft 2015 LibraryCo budget is being presented to Convocation under the terms of the Unanimous Shareholders Agreement.
5. The Law Society levies and collects funds for county and district law library purposes and transfers these funds to LibraryCo. Convocation internally restricts these funds for use by county and district law libraries to carry out their annual operations and any special projects approved by Convocation.
6. LibraryCo's draft budget for 2015 is attached.

Key Issues and Considerations

7. At the September Law Society Audit & Finance Committee, the Committee requested that LibraryCo submit a budget maintaining the library levy at $202, the same as 2014. This increases total funding to $7.7 million in 2015 from the $7.5 million in 2014 because of the budgeted increase in the number of lawyers. The LibraryCo budget currently submitted complies with this request. The Law Society's own draft budget for 2015, included for decision in this Report to Convocation, includes the library levy of $202 per lawyer.
8. With the per-member levy agreed at $202 providing total revenues of $7.7 million, the LibraryCo Board has approved $278,000 allocated to "Electronic Products and Implementation of Business Plan" as a contingency until a future corporate direction is concluded.
9. LibraryCo, a wholly-owned, not-for-profit subsidiary of the Law Society, was established to develop policies, procedures, guidelines and standards for the delivery of county law library services and legal information across Ontario and to administer funding on behalf of the Law Society. The Law Society holds all of the 100 common shares. Of the 100 special shares, 25 are held by the Toronto Lawyers Association ("TLA") and 75 are held by the County and District Law Presidents' Association ("CDLPA"). The Law Society may appoint up to four directors, CDLPA may appoint up to three directors and TLA may appoint one director.

Budgetary Issues

Electronic Products

10. LibraryCo is facing an operational challenge regarding the provision of the electronic toolkit provided under contract. In years past, the Law Foundation of Ontario (LFO) provided grant funding for the provision of the toolkit. For 2015, the LFO has withdrawn its funding ($542,000) for the toolkit.
11. The Law Society's Audit & Finance Committee did not agree to LibraryCo's request to make up this shortfall in funding and pay the full cost of the toolkit in 2015 of $762,000 and notice of cancellation of the contract has been provided.

LibraryCo Staffing

12. LibraryCo's shareholders, the County & District Law Presidents' Association, the Toronto Lawyers Association and the Law Society, have made the decision to discontinue the positions of LibraryCo Board Manager and Assistant and associated costs will be funded from the LibraryCo Reserve Fund in 2014. The 2015 budgeted expenses associated with these two positions have been retained in the LibraryCo budget until a future direction is concluded.

County Library Funding

13. The LibraryCo budget incorporates a 1% increase in funding for county law libraries. The current inflation rate is 2.6% and collection costs are increasing well above the rate of inflation.

Administrative Expenses

14. Expenses for administration and centralized services are decreasing by $123,000 largely as a result of a reduced Administrative Services fee paid by LibraryCo to the Law Society.

General Fund and Reserve Fund

15. The General Fund accounts for the delivery, management and administration of library services. After the budgeted use of the general fund in 2015 amounting to $100,000, the General Fund will have a negligible balance. The Reserve Fund is projected to have a balance at the end of 2014 of $410,000 comprising a general component of $200,000, a capital and special needs component of $150,000, and a staffing and severance component of $60,000.

Stakeholder Management

16. Stakeholder responses are assessed as part of the ongoing budget and financial reporting cycle.

17. The Treasurer has provided an overview report to benchers, completed in consultation with the shareholders of LibraryCo through the Library Information and Support Services (LISS) Working Group which sets out the principles that the shareholders agree should frame the process for moving forward.

From: Frankie Woods, Chair of LibraryCo Inc on behalf of the Board of LibraryCo Inc.

Date: October 7, 2014

In response to the request from the Law Society's Audit and Finance Committee, LibraryCo is hereby submitting its revised budget for 2015. The only significant change is that resulting from the cancellation of the LexisNexis subscription for 2015 as described below. Over the coming months, LibraryCo will be engaging with shareholders and stakeholders to consider the best allocation of the funds attributed to the Electronic Product / Implementation of Business Plan expense.

The budget includes an expense of $278,041 for Electronic Product / Implementation of Business Plan. The provision of electronic products was previously significantly financed by a grant from the Law Foundation of Ontario ("LFO"). The LFO is not renewing its grant funding for electronic products in 2015. The contract with the service provider allows the contract to be cancelled in the event of inadequate funding from the LFO at a cost of $6,888 in liquidated damages and notice of cancellation has been provided. The $278,041 has therefore been allocated as a contingency amount as LibraryCo transitions to its new business plan, possibly different electronic products and any changes initiated by the Legal Information and Support Services Working Group.

4. A full discussion can be found in the Society's draft 2015 budget materials presented as:
  - 2015 Draft Budget Summary
  - 2015 Draft Budget Detail (in camera)
5. The Law Society's draft 2015 budget was presented to benchers for input at a budget information session on September 23, 2014 and previously to the Audit & Finance Committee in September.

Key Issues and Considerations

6. Under S.50 of By-Law 2:
  - i. The annual budget shall be presented to Convocation for final approval not later than November 30 each year.
  - ii. The budget shall be consistent with the activities planned by Convocation for the next financial year.
  - iii. The budget shall include a reasonable projection of all expenses and revenues.
  - iv. The use of reserve funds to supplement estimated revenues requires the express approval of Convocation.
  - v. Where Convocation has approved a budget that provides for the continuation of a program, activity or service, any significant reduction or cancellation of that program, activity or service during the financial year requires the express approval of Convocation.
7. The budget is intended to address the established priorities for the 2011 – 2015 bencher term.

This material has two parts – a medium term financial plan comprising budget scenarios for 2015, 2016 and 2017 (pages 3 – 9) and the 2015 Draft Budget Overview (pages 11 – 28).

2015-2017 BUDGET PLANNING SCENARIOS

BUDGET GOALS MET

- Maintain fees for lawyers and paralegals at the 2014 amount for the years 2015-2017
- Comply with the fund balance policies when using fund balances to mitigate annual fees

FINANCIAL OUTCOMES

- i. The financial plan incorporates the use of fund balances to mitigate annual fees for lawyers and paralegals while complying with the fund balance policies. The balance of the lawyer General Fund at the end of 2015 is projected to be $16.9 million. The balance of the paralegal General Fund at the end of 2015 is projected to be $1.5 million. The approved fund balance policy requires that a minimum of two months and a maximum of three months operating expenses be maintained in the lawyer General Fund balance.
- ii. The LibraryCo per lawyer levy is maintained at $202 for a total transfer of $7.7 million in 2015, $7.8 million in 2016 and $8.0 million in 2017. The Law Society remains committed to a viable library system and is exploring potential efficiencies and options to achieve this goal.
- iii. Compensation fund balances remain in a strong position to absorb an extraordinary defalcation and current high profile potential claims are being monitored.
- iv. The capital levy is increased to $69 from $50 in 2014 to provide funding for facilities related capital expenditures.

BUDGET SCENARIO SENSITIVITIES

These scenarios, like all budget exercises, include a number of assumptions and variables. Each of these variables and assumptions has the possibility to vary the projected outcome to a lesser or greater degree depending on their individual nature. The major sensitivities in these scenarios are discussed below.

Membership growth

Perhaps the factor with the greatest sensitivity in the scenarios is the projected annual growth in the number of lawyers and paralegals. The current assumption for 2015 is an increase of 900 full fee paying equivalent lawyers and 350 full fee paying equivalent paralegals. For 2016 and 2017 the projection is 700 lawyers and 350 paralegals. For every 100 member variance, the annual fee for lawyers would go up or down by $5 and for paralegals by $21.

Salaries and benefit expenses

The single largest category of expenditure in the Society's budget is spending on salaries and benefits. As set out on page 6, salaries and benefits constitute approximately 53% of annual expenditures. The scenarios assume salary and benefit expenditures increase at a rate of 2% annually over the three year period. This assumption incorporates both changes in staffing, increases to benefit costs and merit increases for existing staff. Every 1% change in the cost of salaries and benefits adds or subtracts approximately $570,000, or $13 per member to the Society's budget. The increase of 2% is less than the published survey sources which are projected to be between 2.7% and 3.0%.

Other expenses

All other expenses assumed to increase at 1% per year.

Investment returns

The Society's operations are currently supported by the combined investment income of the General Fund and the Compensation Fund. In total, the 2015 budget includes investment income of $1.9 million. Over the past five years interest rates have been at historic lows and are expected to increase in the coming years. If, as expected, interest rates rise in outlying years, this could have a positive impact on the annual fee requirements for both lawyers and paralegals.

CPD revenue

The 2015 budget reflects a decline in CPD revenues of $800,000 to reflect trends in 2014 and the revenue is projected to be relatively static for the two years thereafter.

Regulatory Issues

Professional regulation has maintained its provision for outside counsel and expert witness fees at 2014 levels. If a major regulatory issue emerged, like mortgage fraud did in the mid 2000's, the need to engage external counsel and expert witnesses could once again spike and drive costs higher. There are currently some potentially material cost award claims against the Law Society which are too uncertain to include in the financial projections.

BUDGETARY AND FISCAL RISKS*Inflation

The North American economy has experienced a sustained period of low inflation. Since 2009, central banks have been adding liquidity to the world's financial system in an effort to stimulate economic growth. Historically, money supply expansion has been followed by periods of rising inflation. If inflation begins to rise significantly over the period of these scenarios, the pressure to adjust salaries to offset the decline in purchasing power will increase as will the cost of all materials and supplies purchased for operations.

Compensation Fund Claims

The Society has experienced a ten year period of relatively low compensation fund claims. Although the fund is strong, several simultaneous large scale defalcations could strain the fund balance and eventually force the annual levy of $225 for lawyers higher to meet claim demands and maintain the policy approved fund balance.

New Convocation Initiatives

Convocation could initiate new programming that would require significant new resources to achieve the program objectives. Major new programs generally require additional staff. Some programs such as CPD, also generate revenue that offset the increased costs, however, most programs like the Parental Leave Assistance Plan, do not and directly impact the members' annual fee.

2015 Draft Budget Summary

The Law Society of Upper Canada
2015 Draft Budget
Assumptions

- Increase in Full Fee Paying Equivalent members, 900 for lawyers to 38,100 and 350 for paralegals to 4,700
- 2% provision for salary and benefits
- Allocation of $1.5 million from the accumulated surplus investment income in the E&O Fund to mitigate fee increase for lawyers (2014: $1.5 million)
- $641,000 allocated from the General Fund accumulated surplus to mitigate fee increase for lawyers (2014: $446,000)
- $541,000 allocated from the General Fund accumulated surplus to mitigate fee increase for paralegals (2014: $313,000)
- Allocation of $707,000 (2014: $707,000) from accumulated surplus in the lawyer Compensation Fund and $77,000 (2014:$40,000) from the paralegal Compensation Fund to mitigate fee increases
- Capital levy increased from $50 to $69
- LibraryCo funding increased from $7.5 million to $7.7 million
- Contingency set at $1 million (2014: $1 million)
- The lawyer Licensing Process fee for the 2015-2016 licensing term remains at $4,710 per candidate for all fees associated with licensing. The paralegal licensing fee is also unchanged at $1,400. In addition to the $1 million lawyer subsidy, financial assistance is available to lawyer candidates in the form of repayable allowances. $100,000 has been provided in 2015 (2014: $100,000). The projected repayable allowance fund balance at the beginning of 2015 is $400,000
- A $400,000 grant from the Law Foundation of Ontario for Access to Justice replaces the 2014 grants for the licensing processes which were $365,000 for lawyers and $36,000 for paralegals
- Projected Lawyer General Fund balance and Compensation Fund balance to comply with Convocation's fund balance management policy

2015 Draft Budget Overview

The draft 2015 budget is based on the 2015 – 2017 budget scenario and maintains the fee at the 2014 level for lawyers and paralegals, broken down as follows:

	2014		2015
	Lawyers	Paralegals	Lawyers	Paralegals
General Fee	$ 1,376	$ 796	$ 1,370	$ 804
Compensation Fund	238	150	225	123
Capital	50	50	69	69
LibraryCo Inc.	202	0	202	0
Total	$ 1,866	$ 996	$ 1,866	$ 996

2015 Budget Highlights

While demonstrating fiscal restraint, the draft budget focuses on the organization’s core responsibilities of professional regulation, professional development and competence and policy development and facilitating access to justice, while addressing the established priorities for the 2011-2015 bench term.

Growth in the number of lawyers will increase budgeted full fee paying equivalent lawyers by 900 to 38,100. Growth in the number of paralegals will increase the budgeted full fee paying equivalent paralegals by 350 to 4,700. While the “full fee equivalent” is used as a measure for budget purposes, the Law Society will regulate over 50,000 fee paying lawyers and paralegals in 2015.

The primary factors that have played a role in drafting the 2015 budget are:

- focussing on the priorities for the 2011-2015 bench term
- considering the three-year pilot project that will allow lawyer licensing candidates to either article or complete a Law Practice Program, which started in the 2014-15 licensing year
- incorporating sustainable CPD revenues based on a longer history of the mandatory program
- using fund balances to mitigate annual fee increases and complying with the Convocation approved fund balance management policies

- maintaining the LibraryCo levy at the 2014 level of $202. As the number of lawyers is increasing, LibraryCo funding is increasing by $198,000
- incorporating a grant of $400,000 from the Law Foundation of Ontario for access to justice initiatives which replaces Licensing Process grants for a similar amount
- decreasing the number of full-time equivalent employees by seven
- considering potential increases in outside counsel expenses and cost awards
- providing for a 2% increase in salary and benefit costs.

Revenue Summary

As set out on page 19 (row 10), annual fee revenue totals $75.8 million in 2015 (2014: $73.7 million).

The budget utilizes a combined total of $2.0 million (2014: $1.5 million) from accumulated fund balances to mitigate fee increases comprising $1.4 million from the lawyer fund balances and $618,000 from the paralegal fund balances. If these funds were not utilized, lawyers' annual fees would increase by $35 and paralegals' by $132. In addition, $1.5 million (unchanged from 2014) in surplus investment income is being transferred from the Errors & Omissions Insurance Fund to mitigate the annual fee for lawyers. Utilizing accumulated fund balances is a normal practice to fund operations in the short term but is not a sustainable practice in the long term.

It is anticipated that the 21 percent decrease in registrations for full-fee Continuing Professional Development programs experienced in the first half of 2014 compared to the same period in 2013 will continue to the end of the year. It also anticipated that revenue from professionalism programs, for which a nominal fee was introduced in 2014, will continue to be lower than anticipated. As electronic materials are included with the price of the program and members increasingly prefer this format over hard copy materials, expected revenue from publications has been reduced. As a result, the 2015 revenue projection for CPD is $800,000 lower than in 2014.

The lawyer Licensing Process has undergone major change. The lawyer candidate fee for the 2015-2016 licensing term is proposed to remain at $4,710 per candidate for all fees associated with licensing, including the costs of the Law Practice Program and the enhanced Articling Program, which have been equalized across all candidates in the process. As the Law Foundation of Ontario grant funding will no longer be available, it is expected that revenues for the Lawyer Licensing Process will decrease by approximately 3.5%. The fee for the paralegal licensing process candidates remains the same at $1,400 with candidate numbers continuing to increase.

Budgeted investment income has been increased by $300,000 in total for the General and Compensation funds.

Under an Administrative Services Agreement between LibraryCo Inc. and the Law Society, the Law Society performs the administrative functions for LibraryCo. The fee for these services has been renegotiated to $430,000 in 2015 (2014 budget: $520,000), funding the operating expenses of the Law Society necessary to provide these services.

Although the total annual fee for lawyers and paralegals is unchanged for 2015, the Compensation Fund component is budgeted to decrease from a levy of $238 to $225 for lawyers and from $150 to $123 for paralegals. The Compensation Fund levies have been reviewed by the Compensation Fund Committee and were set after an actuarial assessment of claims and fund balances based on expected requirements to meet future potential claims in excess of routine annual requirements. No change in the provisions for claims is budgeted. Both Funds, lawyer and paralegal, are financially and actuarially sound.

For both lawyers and paralegals, the Capital Allocation levy increases from $50 to $69 as part of the financing plan for the acquisition and maintenance of capital assets proposed as part of the 2015 budget. In particular, the Audit & Finance Committee has reviewed the allocation of $1.3 million in leasehold improvements related to the Ontario Justice Education Network leaving Law Society premises, and the consequent relocation of the Tribunal Office, Equity department and parts of the Information Systems department which will improve processes and efficiencies.

The budget maintains the LibraryCo levy at $202 per lawyer (2014: $202 per lawyer), which increases Law Society funding of LibraryCo by $198,000 to $7.7 million because of the increase in the number of lawyers. LibraryCo's total revenues are reduced as the Law Foundation of Ontario is no longer providing funding for expenses related to electronic products.

Expense Summary

As set out on page 19, total direct expenses are increasing from $106.3 million in 2014 to $109.0 million in 2015.

The draft 2015 budget contains a provision of 2.0% for salaries and benefits for merit increases and any changes to staff levels.

The draft 2015 budget contains a net decrease of 7 full-time-equivalent employees.

The budget request for Professional Regulation, Tribunal and Compliance is at $28.7 million (page 20). Most areas of the division are projecting increased file volumes of around 2%, in line with long term trends. At 205 full time equivalents, the number of employees is relatively static with staffing for the new Disclosure and Risk Management Unit being accomplished by internal transfers. The external counsel expense budget remains the same as in 2014 at $1.6 million.

The budget for Professional Development and Competence is at $26.7 million (page 21).

- The total expenditures for the lawyer licensing process, which is a cost recovery process that covers its expenses through the payment of fees by licensing candidates, is mitigated by a $1 million contribution by the profession approved by Convocation for 2014 and continuing. In the paralegal licensing process there is a one-time expense of $500,000 to develop the new and extended paralegal licensing examination.
- Projected CPD program-related expenses in 2015 have been decreased by $48,000 to reflect the decrease in costs associated with producing, marketing, and distributing publications and participation in fewer joint programs. The CPD unit will be maintaining the same level of staffing.
- In Legal Information and Library Services, the Great Library's print collection continues to face constraints as small budget increases are outstripped by certain print format costs increasing by over 10%. The staff count is decreasing by 2.
- Pursuant to the business case approved by Convocation in 2013, expenses for the Spot Audit Department will see a further reduction of $200,000 in 2015 for a total budget reduction of $500,000 from 2013 to 2015 including 4 fewer FTEs.

The budget request for Convocation, Policy and Outreach is at $10.7 million (page 24). The major change is the new office of Executive Director, Policy, Equity and Public Affairs which was implemented in 2014. Also included is a provision for an increase of $5 in the per lawyer levy for the Federation of Law Societies and an increase of 3% in the CANLII levy. Remuneration for benchers in 2014 is well below trends of the past two years with the expanded use of adjudicators and the Tribunal Chair. Bencher remuneration has been reduced by $250,000 from $1.1 million to $850,000. The provision for bencher remuneration is inclusive of an adjustment for anticipated change in CPI of 3%. A provision of $250,000 has been included to support the planned post-election bencher strategic planning retreat in 2015.

The budget for Services to Members and the Public is at $16.2 million (page 25). The Parental Leave Assistance Plan fund is expected to end 2014 with a balance in excess of $350,000. In 2014, the levy raised $400,000 to top up the fund balance to support the payment of benefits to lawyers on parental leave. Likely attributable to the implementation of the means test in January 2014, payments for 2014 are significantly below previous years, $101,000 compared to $243,000 at this time last year. The budget for 2015 will only require a $300,000 top up to restore the amount available for benefit payments to a total $650,000 in 2015.

The financial projection includes a rent subsidy of $75,000 to the Ontario Justice Education Network which declines over 5 years. OJEN previously obtained free accommodation on Law Society premises but as part of their corporate development will be moving to separate premises in 2015.

The budget for Corporate Services & Administration is at $23.8 million (page 26). Expenses in the office of the general counsel are budgeted to increase by $250,000 for outside counsel primarily to provide for the anticipated cost of litigation involving TWU.

The Society's contingency allowance to provide funding for unanticipated events or activities that occur throughout the year is maintained at $1.0 million. For the past two years the Society has maintained a contingency budget of $1,000,000 primarily to provide for the anticipated costs related to organizational restructuring. The contingency has been maintained at $1,000,000 in 2015 in anticipation of additional initiatives emerging after the bench election and declines to $250,000 in subsequent years.

General Fund Balance

In May 2013, Convocation approved policies to manage the size and use of the Law Society's Lawyer General and Compensation Fund balances maintaining the sum of the Lawyer General Fund balance at no less than two, and no more than three months of General Fund budgeted expenses. The projected balance of the lawyer General Fund at the end of 2015 is $16.9 million, a little below the midpoint of the approved range.

The balance in the Paralegal General Fund balance is projected at $1,459,000 at the end of 2015. This is viewed as appropriate although no formal fund balance management policies have been adopted due to the size of the balance and limited operational history.

Compensation Fund

The budget for 2014 sets the allowance for claims at $2.5 million (2014 budget: $2.5 million) for lawyers and $122,000 (2014 budget: $111,000) for paralegals. The Fund's actuary indicates this level of claims experience is consistent with routine, recurring claims levels for lawyers over the past ten years and a reasonable estimate for paralegals given the six years of historical data.

LibraryCo Inc.

LibraryCo will continue to be funded at $202 per lawyer, for a total of $7.7 million in 2015. The 2015 Budget, approved by the LibraryCo board and recommended to the Audit & Finance Committee, requests funding of $7.7 million or $202 per lawyer compared to the 2014 approved funding of $7.5 million or $202 per lawyer. 2015 will be a year of transition for LibraryCo as it deals with the loss of LFO funding for electronic products.

Access to Justice

The Society has applied for and received approval from the Law Foundation of Ontario for a grant related to the development and delivery of Access to Justice initiatives. The grant is for $400,000 with the associated expenses included in the Policy, Equity and Public Affairs Budget. Hired in 2014, the Policy, Equity and Public Affairs Executive Director has primary responsibility for supporting the Treasurer's Access to Justice Group initiative, and the formation of a stakeholder Reference Group to steer the Access to Justice initiative.

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA
2015 BUDGET DETAIL

PROFESSIONAL REGULATION AND COMPLIANCE PROFESSIONAL REGULATION

1. DIVISIONAL OVERVIEW

As part of its mandate to protect the public interest, the Law Society addresses issues of capacity, conduct and competence of lawyers and licensed paralegals. For Professional Regulation this includes response to complaints, investigations, discipline prosecutions, trusteeships' management of the Compensation Fund and related activities.

Almost 5,000 complaints each year are referred to the Professional Regulation division. The Intake, Complaints Resolution, Investigations, and Discipline departments address complaints at various stages of the process. The Disclosure Unit, Monitoring and Enforcement, and Trustee Services and Compensation Fund departments provide related services. The Case Management department supports the entire operation and facilitates effective and efficient management of issues and cases.

The mandate of the Division is to identify and manage risk, to respond to complaints based on good standards, to ensure a fair, accessible, transparent and effective process, to identify and bring forward issues concerning regulation, and to manage relationships with the communities and individuals related to the regulatory work of the Law Society.

1. Complaints

(a) Rate of New Complaints

Between 2008 and 2011, the number of complaints increased by approximately 2% each year (which coincides with the increase in the number of licensees). However, in the following three years (2012, 2013 and 2014), the number of new cases received has fluctuated, leaving no discernable trend. Consequently, it has been very difficult to predict future input:

- 2012 shows a decrease in the number of complaints compared with 2011 (2% decrease).
- 2013 recovered the loss from 2012 and showed an increase of 3.6 % compared with 2011.
- 2014 looks like there will be a lower number of complaints – about the same as in 2012.

Predictions for 2015 are based on the assumption that the increase in cases will follow the yearly trend (excepting 2012 and 2013), which would be a 2% per year increase.

The charts below set out the predicted increases for 2014 and 2015.

INPUT	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015
Intake	4,867	4,782	5,040	4,750	4,850
Complaints Resolution	1,803	1,868	1,889	1,400	1,730
Investigations	1,412	1,226	1,348	1,300	1,330
Discipline (individual licensee, not case)	137	136	152	135	145

(b) Case Complexity and Seriousness

The complexity and seriousness of cases handled by professional regulation staff has been increasing over time. This is affecting the allocation of resources required to complete cases within targets. The increase in the complexity of cases is evidenced in a number of ways:

- The number of allegations in each case has increased. In 2014 each case has 20% more allegations than each case in 2008. This means that in 2014 there were 800 more allegations than in 2008. An increase in the number of allegations can reflect both the complexity of the case and impacts the time required to investigate and prosecute it.
- The number of interlocutory suspension motions held and completed has increased in 2014. As at August 31, 7 interlocutory suspension matters have been heard and completed, an increase from 3 in 2013 and 5 in 2012. Interlocutory suspensions require the immediate deployment of resources and they require significant preparation both for Investigations and Discipline.
- The rate of new mortgage fraud investigations has increased. As at August 31, 2014, over 5 (5.4) new reports were received each month identifying new lawyers against whom allegations of mortgage fraud were made.

2. Trustee Services & Compensation Fund

In 2014, Trustee Services was challenged by two very large trusteeships, and an increasing number of both court-order and voluntary trusteeships. These have put additional pressure on staff resources, delaying completion of some trusteeships.

Based on the pattern of the last several years (around 150 claims a year) it is expected that the Compensation Fund will see an increase in new claims in 2014 and 2015 (around 180 per year). To June 30, 2014, the Fund had already received 86 claims in respect of lawyer dishonesty and 15 claims in respect of paralegal dishonesty. This compares to a three-year average of 120 claims related to lawyers and 26 claims related to paralegals, for the entire year.

3. Staffing

The 2015 Professional Regulation budget request includes one new position that was transferred to Trustee Services from Administrative Compliance in the Corporate Services Division (the corresponding reduction in the Corporate Services Division is reflected under the Corporate Services budget). In addition, three Professional Regulation staff positions were redeployed for the new Disclosure Unit. These changes are described below.

4. Outside counsel and legal opinions

The need for outside counsel and expert witnesses was reduced in 2014, in part due to the anticipated completion of hearings in two major cases. In addition, the costs for outside counsel had stabilized as a result of greater reliance on specific firms with expertise in mortgage fraud and unauthorized practice, which are able to provide services at a reduced rate. No changes to the outside counsel budget are recommended for 2015. Outside counsel expenses are expected to exceed budget in 2014 due to unanticipated developments in three cases.

5. Update on 2014 initiatives

With the influx of an unexpectedly large number of new cases in 2013, the Professional Regulation Division developed strategies for completing cases within the current budget allocation for resources. As a result, there were limitations imposed on responses to certain types of complaints including those that were judged to be repetitious, stale or otherwise not focused directly on risk to the public. The Division provided less extensive responses to some types of complaints as a result, including certain advertising complaints and unauthorized practice complaints. Cases were completed at an earlier stage with less process including little or no investigation. Reducing resources allocated to such cases allowed staff to focus on cases which had priority including those that were a risk to clients, the administration of justice, the professions and the public in general.

The change in focus was communicated to the Professional Regulation Committee and the Paralegal Standing Committee and the Law Society's templates and external communications, including the Complaint Form and website, were amended to reflect this approach.

6. Mortgage Fraud Investigations

In 2013, there was a reduction in the number of new reports of mortgage fraud complaints with three new lawyer investigations per month. Unfortunately that trend reversed in 2014. So far in 2014, that average increased to over five new lawyer investigations per month. As a result, the inventory of mortgage fraud investigations has increased from 79 lawyers at the beginning of 2014 to 93 lawyers.

7. Disclosure Unit / Risk Management Strategies

(a) Disclosure Unit

In June 2014, the Disclosure Unit was established as a permanent Unit and as part of the Case Conference/PAC processes overseen by the Executive Director, Professional Regulation. The Unit started operations in 2013 as a pilot project. This formed part of the implementation of recommendations made by Brian Gover in his 2011 review of discipline processes. That report recommended that the Law Society adopt more standardized, better recorded disclosure, which could be used as a precursor to implementation of electronic disclosure. It suggested that improvements in disclosure practice will likely reduce the time cases take in discipline overall, which is a key objective for Professional Regulation.

The Disclosure Unit plan is to increase the types of cases accepted into the process during 2014. By the end of 2014, all cases except Summary Hearing matters and cases referred from Monitoring and Enforcement will be processed in the Unit. The standardized and indexed disclosure process will provide permit greater efficiency in the implementation of the Electronic Content Management (ECM) system once implemented in the Division.

(b) Risk Management Strategies

Risk assessment and management is at the heart of all regulatory response activity, and as such forms part of the daily operations of Professional Regulation. In 2014, the Executive Director increased the focus on risk management by appointing a senior staff to be responsible for risk management, including the development of greater formality in the identification, assessment and mitigation of risk. Anne-Marie Kearney assumed the dual management role as the Manager of the Disclosure Unit and Risk Strategy Manager. Anne-Marie Kearney, an experienced forensic auditor, manager and investigator is responsible for developing new procedures, guidelines and templates for staff for the analysis of risk, as well as managing current risks particularly where they involve more than one department.

(c) Budget and Staffing

In order to implement these new initiatives, existing positions were redeployed from the Investigations and Trustee Services departments. The Disclosure Unit has three full-time staff (two law clerks and one Manager, who is also the Manager of Risk Management Strategies).

The two law clerk positions were transferred from the Investigations department. To fund the manager position, the management of the Trustee Services and Compensation Fund departments was combined, with one manager for the two departments. The vacant Trustee Services Manager position was used to fund the Disclosure Unit/Risk Management Strategies Manager position.

The budget for the Disclosure Unit has been largely transferred from the Investigations department on the basis that the work of the Unit primarily concerns Investigations files which would otherwise have required additional preparation for disclosure. Two-thirds of the photocopy budget ($223,000) has been transferred from Investigations as it is estimated that this percentage of the Investigations budget was used for disclosure. This proportion will be assessed in 2015.

(d) Law Clerk – Closed Trusteeships – Transfer of Position from Corporate Services

One of two FTEs designated as Closed Trustee positions has been transferred to Trustee Services in the Professional Regulation Division from Administrative Compliance in the Corporate Services Division. Now designated as a Law Clerk, the position will be focused on handling inquiries related to defunct practices, in particular those resulting from closed trusteeships. Previously, Administrative Compliance addressed calls from people looking for information relating to a licensee's practice. This transition was based on an analysis that this work was more closely aligned with the work of Trustee Services and that it is more efficient to locate it in that department.

II. Details of the Division’s 2014 Experience and Assumptions for 2015

As noted earlier, between 2008 and 2011, the number of regulatory complaints received in Professional Regulation increased by approximately 2% each year. During 2012, 2013 and 2014, the experience has been uneven and less predictable. In 2013, the number of new cases increased significantly, followed by a year with reduced intake in 2014. Overall, despite the fluctuations during each of these three years, the long trend indicating a 2% annual increase is likely the most reliable predictor. On that basis, it is expected that Professional Regulation will likely receive 4,850 new complaints in 2015.

Total Number of Complaints Received in Professional Regulation – 2010 to 2015

The following graph demonstrates the trends in complaints about lawyers, paralegals, lawyer applicants, paralegal applicants and unauthorized practitioners. There has been a decrease in complaints about lawyers and paralegal licensees from 2013 to 2014. The other complaints have remained relatively stable.

(a) Intake Department

Intake is the regulatory gatekeeper. It receives all new complaints referred to Professional Regulation.<sup>1</sup> Its functions are to provide early and expert complaint assessment by reviewing and substantiating complaints where necessary, to resolve complaints where possible, to identify regulatory and risk issues, to triage where required and to stream complaints appropriately where required. The objective of the department is to ensure that complaints are addressed and resolved as early as possible and complaints that represent a public or other risk are identified quickly. Intake also has an important case management function, determining and facilitating the regulatory approach that will best serve the requirements of the case and ensuring that different investigations concerning the same licensee are appropriately linked.

It is expected that in 2014 Intake will receive 4,750 complaints and the department will close a similar number of cases in the year.

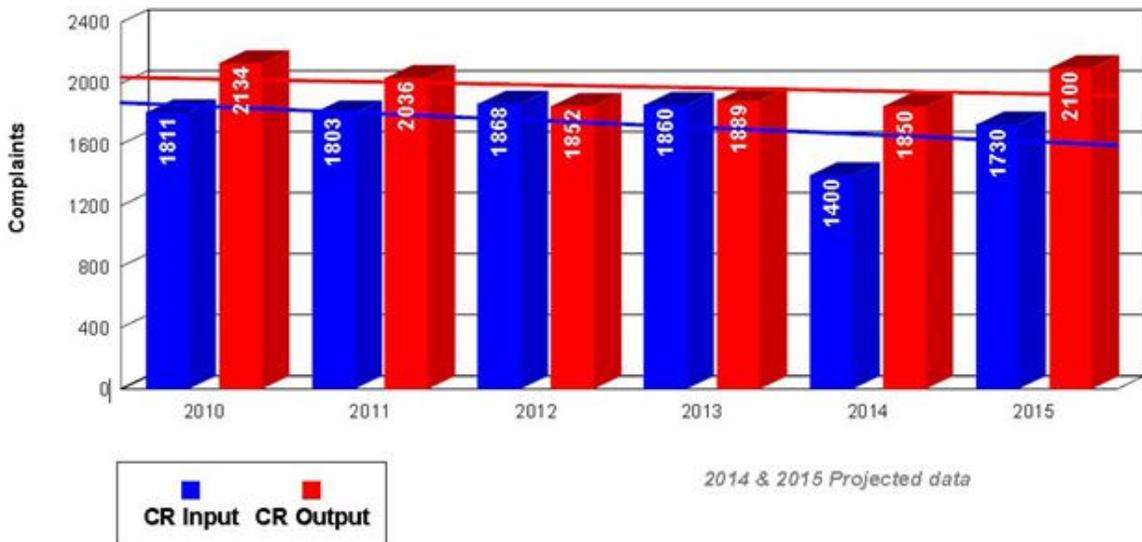

<sup>1</sup> All complaints to the Law Society receive initial processing in Complaints Services, Client Service Centre. It is the responsibility of this group of staff to sort these complaints to identify those which may raise regulatory issues, and to forward them to Professional Regulation.

(b) Complaints Resolution Department

The role of Complaints Resolution is to investigate and resolve complaints where the allegations indicate breaches of the Rules of Professional Conduct, the Paralegal Rules of Conduct or the By-Laws where even if the evidence supports the allegations, the outcome is unlikely to be discipline. The majority of complaints are resolved through investigation and negotiation, or closed on the basis of an informal regulatory response. Where a significant breach of the rules is shown on investigation, or where the lawyer fails to cooperate in the regulatory process, a prosecution or other response may be sought from the Proceedings Authorization Committee.

The input of new cases into the Complaints Resolution department in the first half of 2014 has been lower than was predicted in part due to the reduced rate of incoming new cases, as well as the diversions that were developed in 2013 to cope with a higher than expected incoming caseload. As the intake of new cases in 2014 is reduced, the Division can now reallocate the cases that were diverted from Complaints Resolution to ensure that they are provided with appropriate response, particularly where the diversion was less than successful and led to the conclusion the case required full review and investigation.

Complaints Resolution - Input / Output By Year

(c) Investigations Department

This department investigates complaints in which breaches of the Rules of Professional Conduct, the Paralegal Rules of Conduct or the By-Laws are alleged, which, if supported by the evidence, are likely to lead to discipline or other proceedings. Investigations staff includes lawyers, investigators and auditors. On completion of the investigation, a complaint is referred to the PAC for consideration, closed or resolved. On reviewing any complaint referred to it, the PAC may authorize a prosecution, order further investigation or authorize an alternative resolution such as an Invitation to Attend. The Investigations Department has a specialized team that investigates allegations of real estate and mortgage fraud and is responsible for the investigation of unauthorized practice cases and good character cases in admission matters.

It is expected that in 2014, the department will receive 1,250 new complaints and the number of new cases coming into Investigations in 2015 is anticipated to be around 1,300 with 1,330 completions. The department is continuing to receive more than expected complaints of mortgage fraud.

Investigations - Input / Output By Years

2014 & 2015 Projected Data

Discipline counsel represent the Law Society before Hearing and Appeal Panels and in the courts when appeals are taken from the decisions of these panels. The department is responsible for the prosecution of a variety of matters including those concerning licensee conduct, capacity and competency as well as applications of various types for a license.

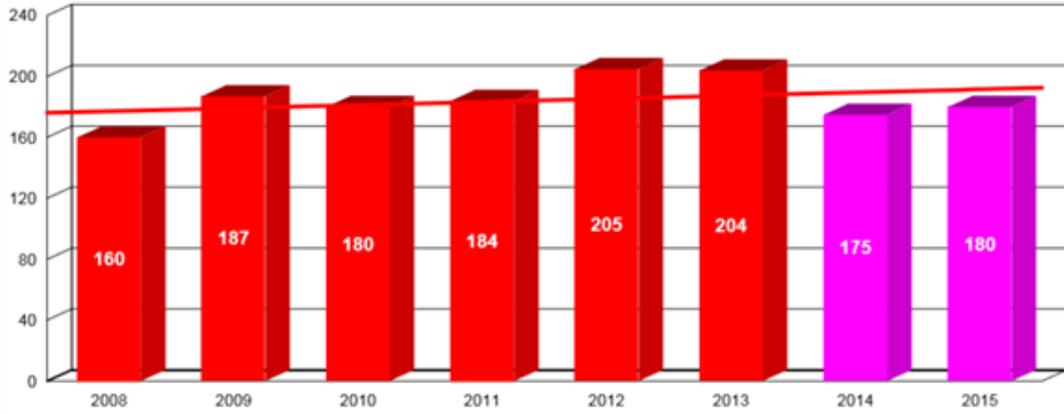

The input of cases into the department in 2013 was higher than expected for non-mortgage cases but lower for mortgage fraud (expected cases against 12 licensees/applicants but received only 9). Given the input to date and the cases Investigations has projected to transfer to Discipline in the remainder of 2014, it is expected that there will be 12 new mortgage fraud matters and 123 non-mortgage fraud matters transferred into Discipline in 2014. The projected numbers for 2015 are based, in part, on the increase in cases into Investigations in 2013.

2014 & 2015 - Projected Data

* Note that this graph understates actual counsel time committed to hearings as it does not include hearings of motions before the hearing panel, arguments with respect to adjournments, and PMC/AMC attendances. Therefore in addition to the hearing days noted, counsel attend PMC which is held every two weeks (26 per year) and typically does not complete until noon. Additional PMC dates have been scheduled on a regular basis to accommodate growing hearing activity.

(e) Monitoring & Enforcement Department

This department is responsible for the enforcement of Hearing Panel orders including collecting costs orders, monitoring compliance by licensees of undertakings. The department also monitors reported bankruptcies and enforces judgments or security obtained by or assigned to the Compensation Fund and responds to all public regulatory inquiry calls requesting information concerning a licensee’s current practice restrictions and current and past discipline history. The department is responsible to report on regulatory information to the Federal and Provincial Judicial Appointments Committee.

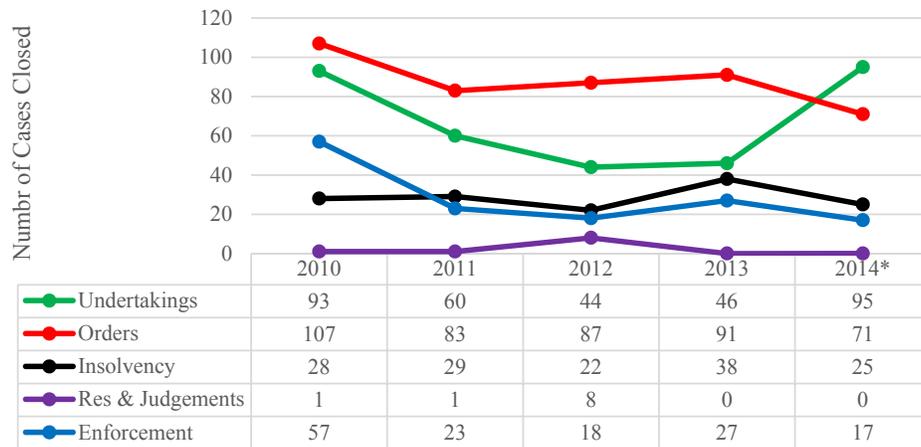

The inventory in 2014 is anticipated to increase from 2013. The department has noticed an increase (approximately 17%) in the number of public inquiries received in the first half of 2014 compared with 2013. In the first half of 2013, the department received 2,233 inquiries (about 2,616 licensees) whereas in the first half of 2014, received 2,602 inquiries (about 3,138 licensees).

In addition to its active inventory, M&E monitors undertakings and orders which are in abeyance. While these undertakings and orders are not restrictive and do not require active monitoring, they continue to bind the licensees affected.

The responsibility of the Executive Director is to oversee all departments within the Division including budget, staffing, technology, issue management and case process including an effective and timely complaints process, and appropriate risk management. This includes coordination and liaison with other divisions of the Law Society and external parties, communications both within the outside the division, development of policy and rule amendment proposals, oversight of case process including the management of significant investigations and prosecutions, and resource management. The Executive Director reports to the Professional Regulation Committee and supports work of Convocation as necessary on strategic initiatives in licensee regulation. Staff in the Office of the Executive Director have responsibility for business process management, policy matters, budget management and communications.

As of 2014, the Office of the Executive Director includes the Disclosure Unit as part of the process of approvals in preparation for the Proceedings Authorization Committee.

(g) Case Management

This department's main responsibility is the oversight of Professional Regulation's case management, its templates and processes, and the tracking of caseloads. The Integrated Regulatory Information System ("IRIS"), is the key tool for the department in carrying out its case management work.

More specifically, the department is responsible for: the development of qualitative analysis and recommendations regarding file handling, issue management, work process and procedural improvements. The department develops reports for all production areas and evaluates casework results to determine whether targets are met as required, and that quality standards are met. Case Management is also responsible for various divisional projects, including the Discipline History Project and the Reasons Analysis Project.

(h) Trustee Services

Trustee Services responds in situations where a lawyer has abandoned his/her practice or is unable to practise due to serious health problems, or where there are regulatory issues such as a suspension or revocation of licence. Trustee Services may provide informal support, may negotiate an informal, voluntary trusteeship, or may apply for a formal trusteeship of the practice under the Law Society Act. The department also provides information and assistance to lawyers and their personal representatives who are closing their practices. Trustee Services is also responsible for the administration of the Unclaimed Trust Fund Program. This program enables lawyers to submit unclaimed trust funds that they have held for at least two years to the Law Society and allows members of the public to make claims for these funds.

Trustee Services has seen growth in the volume of trusteeships as well as in other activities and in the complexity of the work performed. At least some of this is attributable to an aging profession, in which some licensees have not made adequate provision for succession planning.

The following statistics show a greater number of active formal trusteeships, as well as a higher volume of voluntary trusteeships.

(i) Compensation Fund

This fund receives and processes claims from clients who have lost money because of a lawyer's or paralegal's dishonesty. The Fund depends entirely on the lawyer and paralegal fee levies. Staff receive claims and assess their merits based on a set of Guidelines approved by Convocation. The maximum compensation payable under the Guidelines is $150,000 to any one claimant for claims involving lawyers and $10,000 per claimant for claims involving paralegals. The per claimant limit is currently under review.

As noted above, the overall workload for the Compensation Fund has increased, with the number of claims currently on pace to exceed the recent average of 150 per year by as much as 25-30%.

(j) The Office of the Complaints Resolution Commissioner

Where a complaint is closed by Law Society staff as unfounded following an investigation of its merits, the complainant may ask for a review of that decision by the Complaints Resolution Commissioner. The Office of the Complaints Resolution Commissioner was created by the Law Society Act and By-Law 11. The Commissioner receives all cases where a complainant requests a review and holds meetings with the complainants. At the end of the process, the Commissioner may confirm the Law Society decision or recommend further investigation. The Commissioner may also make informal recommendations for improved process. The current Complaints Resolution Commissioner is Bernard Morrow.

OUTSIDE COUNSEL

The two budget lines for outside counsel retainers will continue to be required to support the need for external counsel to take on and complete complex or extended discipline matters as well as those matters assigned to outside counsel on fixed retainer. The budget for discipline prosecutions was reduced for 2014 due to the apparent completion of several major matters in 2013. However, with the resurrection of major cases in 2014, there was in fact an increased need for outside counsel budget and this need will continue into 2015. The full breakdown is as set out below.

Category	2014 budget	2015 request	Explanation
UAP	150,000	150,000	Expenditures in this category are expected to remain stable in 2015.
Mortgage fraud experts opinions and testimony	200,000	200,000	Expenditures in this category are expected to remain stable in 2015.
Expert opinions and testimony other than mortgage fraud	150,000	150,000	Expenditures in this category are expected to remain stable in 2015.
Discipline prosecutions	850,000	850,000	This category is utilized for the completion of large or complex matters, appeals and for reduced rate retainers in mortgage fraud cases which cost approximately $50,000 each. Expenditures in this category are expected to remain stable in 2015.
Bencher complaints	100,000	100,000	Amounts expended fluctuate from year to year and are unpredictable however it is prudent to maintain funding in this line as there have been bencher issues that required significant retainers.
Investigations and other retainers	200,000	200,000	Expenditures in this category are expected to remain stable in 2015.

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA 2015 BUDGET DETAIL

TRIBUNAL OFFICE 2015 BUDGET SUMMARY

Purpose

The Law Society Tribunal is an independent adjudicative tribunal within the Law Society of Upper Canada, consisting of staff and appointed adjudicators. It processes, hears and decides regulatory cases about Ontario lawyers and paralegals in a manner that is fair, just and in the public interest.

Staff

There are 14 employees within the Tribunal of which 13 are full-time and one is part-time. Two are on contract. They are: Chair; Registrar & Sr. Counsel; Executive Assistant to the Chair; Sr. Counsel, Tribunal Chair (part-time, contract); Counsel; Publications Counsel (2); Administrator; Hearings Coordinator; Clerk to Tribunal (3); and Bilingual Clerk to Tribunal (2, with one being on contract). In addition, the assistance of an off-site contract for services Legal Editor is retained as needed.

The Tribunal is led by an independent non-bencher Chair. The Chair is responsible for the overall strategic direction, innovation, education and performance of the Tribunal in accordance with governing legislation, Convocation policy and current administrative law principles. Examples of recent work led by the Chair, together with assistance and input from Tribunal staff, Vice-Chairs and members, the Tribunal Implementation Working Group, Tribunal Committee and external stakeholders include:

- establishment of a Law Society Tribunal identity, mission statement and core values
- development of a new scheduling methodology for hearings and appeals
- implementation of a colleague draft review process for written reasons
- creation of a Tribunal member position description and evaluation proposal
- recruitment of skilled and diverse lay appointee adjudicators
- offering adjudicator education and training sessions and orientation sessions for newly appointed Tribunal members
- founding of the Chair's Practice Roundtable
- instituting standing meetings of proceeding management and pre-hearing conference adjudicators
- creation of a separate Law Society Tribunal website

In 2014, the Chair continued to mediate files, adjudicate numerous hearings and appeals and write the accompanying jurisprudence. He also represented the Law Society Tribunal and raised its profile to the administrative justice community through speaking engagements at several events and conferences.

The Registrar and Sr. Counsel is responsible for managing and evaluating the staff and performance of the Tribunal Office, deciding procedural matters and works extensively with the Chair to administer and enhance the Tribunal's work. The Chair, Registrar and other counsel within the Tribunal provide legal and editorial advice to inform the work of the Tribunal and its jurisprudence, identify and examine issues requiring the attention of the Tribunal Implementation Working Group and Tribunal Committee, develop Rule amendments, practice directions, policy and Tribunal processes. In addition, Tribunal counsel create and implement Law Society Tribunal website content (Regulatory Notices, Current Hearings and Tribunal Orders and Dispositions), order summaries for publication in the Ontario Reports, media releases, case management logic and design and quarterly statistics.

The Administrator, Hearings Coordinator, Clerks and Executive Assistant to the Chair administer hearing and operational requirements of the Tribunal. Examples include:

- receipt, cataloguing and safekeeping of all public and non-public Tribunal file materials
- scheduling conferences, hearings, appeals and adjudicators
- securing hearing logistics – court reporter, interpreter, venue, videoconference service, catering and security
- clerking hearings
- preparation and delivery of tribunal orders
- release and publication of tribunal jurisprudence in the Canadian Legal Information Institute (CanLII) and QuickLaw databases
- facilitating communication between the parties and panels
- responding to requests for file materials or status from the parties, public and media
- maintenance of the electronic case management system and Tribunal process documents
- liaison to Tribunal members regarding Tribunal processes, events and communications from the Chair

Trends

The Tribunal continues to manage a demanding caseload. At the end of the second quarter in 2014, the Tribunal had opened 71 files, 20% fewer files than the 89 files opened in the same time period of 2013. However, the Tribunal also closed 96 files, 39% more than the 69 files closed in the same time period of 2013.

As of the end of the second quarter of 2014, 217 hearings were scheduled compared to 189 for the same time period in 2013, an increase of 15%. This increase may be due to more motions and continuation dates being required for lengthy proceedings.

Although the same number of appeal files were opened in the first two quarters of 2014 and 2013, being 10, only 24 appeal hearings were scheduled to be heard during the second quarter of 2014 compared to 30 in the same time period of 2013, a 20% decrease. This decrease may be attributed to narrower issues being pursued on appeal that in turn require less hearing time.

A new scheduling process was created and launched in 2014. This innovative approach to scheduling hearings allows the Chair to assign panel chairs and panelists to ensure diversity of experience, topical knowledge and availability. The new scheduling process maximizes hearing date offerings and eliminates last minute adjudicator conflicts. At the second quarter of 2014, hearings were scheduled on 122 of the 125 days available or 98%, often with multiple hearings proceeding on the same calendar day with different panels. These statistics are similar to the 114 hearings scheduled on the 125 days available or 91% in the same time period of 2013.

Overall, the first two quarters of 2014 realized a decrease in activity before the proceeding management conference (PMC). The PMC dealt with 89 files resulting in 196 considerations, a decrease from the 102 files resulting in 253 considerations during the same time period in 2013. This decrease may be due to efforts to triage files through enhanced case management and dispute resolution at pre-hearing conferences (PHC). However, the Hearing Division experienced a 19% increase in file activity compared to the first two quarters of 2013. The Hearing Division dealt with 114 files by the end of the second quarter of 2014 resulting in 199 considerations by a hearing panel. During the same time period in 2013, 96 files were dealt with by the Hearing Panel resulting in 165 considerations. This increase may be related to the increased number of closed files dealt with by the Hearing Division in the first two quarters of 2014.

In first two quarters of 2014, the Law Society Tribunal produced more jurisprudence than in the same time period of 2013. In 2014, 94 written reasons and 49 oral reasons were produced compared to 72 written reasons and 40 oral reasons in 2013, an increase of 31% and 23%, respectively.

Operating and Program Expenses

In 2014, the budgets of the Tribunal Chair and Tribunal Office were merged to represent the Tribunal's global budget. The Tribunal is not seeking any increase or decrease to its overall budget for 2015, with exception of the 1% inflationary provision. However, the Tribunal proposes to reallocate funds to better meet the needs of the Tribunal's operating and program expenses.

Reallocations are proposed to better reconcile the 2015 proposed budget with 2014 actual projected costs. Significant reallocations include increasing the operating expense of professional memberships and the program expenses of hearing reporters, miscellaneous hearing costs and adjudicator remuneration. Offsetting these increases are decreases to the proposed program expenses of transcripts and adjudicator education. The net result is no change in the overall budget requested for 2015.

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA
2015 BUDGET DETAIL

PROFESSIONAL REGULATION AND COMPLIANCE
COMPLIANCE

Administrative Compliance (CSC)

This area administers many of the Law Society's by-law driven processes including Foreign Legal Consultant permits, Professional Corporation authorizations, Multi-Discipline Partnerships, Affiliations, licence surrender and licensing following surrender.

Some of the duties formerly performed in this area are being transferred to Trustee Services, resulting in the transfer of one Administrative Compliance position to that area. There should be no overall financial impact associated with this change, since it is a reallocation of existing resources.

By-Law Administration Services (CSC)

This department is responsible for the administration of the Lawyer Annual Report and Paralegal Annual Report, as well as ancillary processes such as defaults and administrative suspensions. In addition, BAS records paralegal insurance information, responds to written queries regarding licensee status as well as a number of other status-related requests.

The budget request for 2015 remains essentially unchanged in this area.

Complaints Services (CSC)

The primary role of Complaints Services begins with a review of all complaints about licensees to determine whether they are new, or related to an existing file. For new complaints an electronic file is created and an acknowledgement letter prepared, followed by a review to determine whether the allegations may be within the Law Society's jurisdiction – if so, the complaint is transferred to the Intake department of the Professional Regulation Division. In limited circumstances, staff will also attempt to resolve the complaint.

No changes are requested in this area for 2015.

Budget Summary

The 2015 and 2014 budget before transfers for the PD&C Division is summarized below.

	Lawyers		Paralegals		Total
	2015	2014	2015	2014	2015	2014
Direct Revenues	17,968,000	19,121,000	2,585,000	2,017,000	20,553,000	21,138,000
Direct Expenditures	24,231,000	24,973,000	2,496,000	2,011,000	26,727,000	26,984,000
Net Expenditure	6,263,000	5,852,000P	(89,000)	(6,000)	6,174,000	5,846,000

Staff complement in the PD&C Division is proposed at 137.5 full-time equivalent employees in the 2015 budget. This includes the reduction of 2 FTE's from 2014.

Lawyer Supports

Licensing Process

The Licensing Process fee for the 2015-2016 licensing term is proposed to remain at $4710 per candidate for all fees associated with licensing (not including HST), including the costs of the Law Practice Program and the enhanced Articling Program, which have been equalized across all candidates in the process. This increased fee was approved last year. As the Law Foundation of Ontario grant funding will no longer be available, it is expected that revenues for the Lawyer Licensing Process will decrease by approximately 3.5%.

The total expenditures for the lawyer licensing process, which is a cost recovery process that covers its expenses through the payment of fees by licensing candidates, is mitigated by a contribution by the profession approved by Convocation for 2014 and continuing. The issue of licensing fees and work placement payments will be before Committee and Convocation in the Fall of 2014 as part of the monitoring process for the experiential learning components of licensing.

Competence

a) Practice Management Resources and Helpline

Practice Management has been focused on an extensive analysis of all practice management supports and tools to ensure alignment with the Model Code of Conduct. There was a tremendous effort which included redirecting staff to review and revise almost every resource and product that has been produced in the PD&C Division to support member competence in the past 12 or more years. The Practice Management Helpline continues to respond to over 7,000 calls from practitioners annually and to provide substantial supports and resources to sole practitioners and small firm lawyers, and licensing and accreditation initiatives.

b) Certified Specialist Program

The Certified Specialist Program continues to maintain itself as a cost-recovery initiative at this time. The staff allocated to the program will remain at one full-time equivalent for 2015. With the assistance of Lawyer Counsel from the Licensing and Accreditation department, the Certified Specialist program began the process of developing a new specialty for Aboriginal Law, which will continue in 2015. Costs of development and validation of the competencies requirements for this specialty will be covered by the revenues generated annually by the program.

c) CPD Program Production and Accreditation

The CPD Department anticipates that the 21 percent decrease in registrations for full-fee (substantive law) programs experienced in the first half of 2014 compared to the same period in 2013 will continue to the end of the year. It also anticipates that revenue from professionalism programs, for which a nominal fee was introduced in 2014, will continue to be lower than anticipated. As electronic materials are included with the price of the program and members increasingly prefer this format over hard copy materials, expected revenue from publications has been reduced. As a result, the 2015 revenue projection for CPD is $800,000 lower than in 2014.

The 2015 budget has been adjusted to reflect an anticipated increase of $150,000 in revenue from sales of on demand webcasts and video replays, as the popularity of these post-program products continues to grow. In November 2014, CPD will introduce a new series of self-paced, online courses on professionalism for lawyers and paralegals in the major practice areas. These e-courses will provide an easily accessible way for members to obtain CPD Hours for learning on their own and are expected to be a popular addition to CPD programming in 2015.

Projected program-related expenses in 2015 have been decreased by $60,000 to reflect the decrease in costs associated with producing, marketing, and distributing publications. As CPD will be participating in fewer joint programs in 2015, the anticipated cost of joint program disbursements has been reduced by $60,000 in 2015.

The CPD unit will be maintaining the same level of staffing.

d) Legal Information and Library Services

The Great Library's print collection has been substantially reduced as book costs have outstripped its budget. Law reports have been discontinued and staff will be assessing e-book options in the slow moving, highly consolidated Canadian legal publishing market. Program expenses will be maintained at the same levels as 2014, despite certain print format costs increasing by 10-15 percent. The Legal Information Department's entire non-salary budget increase for 2015 will be applied to a single print format, which will also require taking resources from other library operational lines. The team will drop to 18 FTE staff (as compared to 26 FTEs in 2006, and 32 in 2002) following a staff retirement. The team will be leveraging updates to the library catalogue, building on the roll out of its reference blog, and extending services directly to members across Ontario.

e) Corporate Records and Archives

The Corporate Records team continues to support document retention, retrieval and archival functions for the entire organization. The Archives team will continue to build out its social media activity – past CLE video sessions on Youtube, photos on Flickr, and Facebook – to make their materials more accessible. They will continue to be involved in enterprise content management initiatives in 2015 and in supporting the Heritage Committee initiatives.

f) Web Content Team

The Web content management team continues to provide the entire organization with support in the use of the web site for our communications and resources provision activities for members and the public, as well as the ELF intranet which they redesigned in 2014. They have a high degree of self-reliance, upgrading the CMS and making the Law Society's Web site mobile device-friendly using available team resources. The budget for this group will see no changes. This team is accounted for in the information systems budget.

Quality Assurance*a) Spot Audit

Pursuant to the business case approved by the PD&C Committee and Convocation, the Spot Audit Department was to decrease the number of annual audits from 1,800 in 2013 down to approximately 1,400 by 2015. This reduction was based on new risk-based criteria for selecting law firms for an audit. The plan was to be phased in over two years, with 1,570 audits in 2014 and 1,400 in 2015. This would result in a reduction in the staff complement for the Spot Audit Department by 3 FTEs in 2014, and an additional 1 FTE and reduction of the use of external accounting firms in 2015. As a result, expenses for the spot program decreased by approximately $300,000 in 2014 and will see a further reduction of $200,000 in 2015 for a total budget reduction of $500,000 from 2013 to 2015, offset by standard annual merit increases.

The Spot Audit department is on track to meet the reduction targets in the number of audits, expenses and FTEs. The 2015 budget reflects a total budgetary decrease of over $500,000 since 2013, including 4 fewer FTE staff.

b) Practice Review

The Practice Review unit conducts approximately 500 reviews per year, comprised of a combination of random, focused and re-entry reviews. There will be no change to the staff complement or general expenses for the Practice Review team.

c) CPD Audits

The Practice Audits department will continue to support the CPD audits established to fulfill Convocation's approval of a formal process for monitoring the completion of mandatory CPD. The CPD Audit group randomly selects 525 licensees (500 lawyers and 25 paralegals, in proportion to the member base) and conducts desk audits (written requests) that will assess and monitor compliance with the new CPD requirements, complementing the onsite CPD audits which will occur during formal practice reviews at members' offices. There will be no changes in staff or general expenses for 2015.

Paralegal Supports

Licensing

The Paralegal Licensing Process fee for 2014 is proposed at $1400 per candidate for all fees associated with licensing for regular candidates (not including HST).

The Law Foundation of Ontario grant funding will no longer be available, however, the Paralegal Licensing Process revenues are anticipated to increase by approximately 40% overall as result of new fees associated with the college accreditation process to be introduced in the fall of 2015, as well as budgeted increases to reflect historical trends. An increase in expenditures for 2015 relates to increased costs of development and administration of the new substantive licensing examinations which will begin in August 2015. There will be no change to the staff complement for the Paralegal licensing team.

Practice Audits

Practice Audits are combined financial audit and practice management reviews conducted on paralegal practices. The Paralegal Audit group will complete approximately 175 audits in 2015 as per Convocation's approved requirements for completion of paralegal audits. There will be no change to the staff complement for the Practice Audit team.

Practice Management Supports

The Practice Management, Legal Information and CPD groups continue to provide support to paralegal practices by integrating paralegal resources into all programs and activities. This includes the provision of assistance through the Practice Management Helpline and Practice Mentoring Initiative, practice management resources designed specifically for paralegal practices, development of CPD programs for paralegals. There will be no change in staffing or expenditures for 2015.

CONVOCATION, POLICY AND OUTREACH
POLICY, EQUITY AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR'S OFFICE

In February 2014, the new Policy, Equity and Public Affairs Division was created, and the Executive Director was hired.

The Division brings together the work of Communications, Equity, Policy and Public Affairs.

Over the initial months efforts have been focused at bringing coherence to the Division, and ensuring that good advice and work products are being provided to the Treasurer, Benchers, the CEO and the Senior Management Executive.

The role of the Executive Director is to provide strategic leadership to the PEPA team and on the SME/SMT, and regarding key stakeholders. The PEPA Executive Director is focused on ensuring strong collegiality and achieving operational efficiencies to provide effective service.

The PEPA Executive Director has had primary responsibility as well for supporting the TAG initiative, with the public launch on June 3, and the formation of a stakeholder Reference Group to steer the Access to Justice initiative.

The PEPA Executive Director has also had key involvement with respect to Aboriginal issues, including the hosting on April 22 of a reception for the Iacobucci Implementation Committee at the Law Society, and the holding on June 19 of a Roundtable with Aboriginal licensees about updating the Law Society's Aboriginal Strategy.

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA
2015 BUDGET DETAIL

CONVOCATION, POLICY AND OUTREACH
POLICY, EQUITY AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS (PEPA) POLICY

Mandate

The Director, Policy is responsible for Convocation support, corporate secretarial functions and policy development.

Staffing in the Policy Secretariat remains at seven employees – a Director, an Administrator, three Policy Counsel, an Administrator to Convocation, and a Counsel to the Director, Policy.

The responsibilities of the Policy Secretariat fall into four main categories:

1. Governance

These activities include the conduct of Benchers, paralegal, Paralegal Standing Committee chair and Treasurer elections, the conduct of the Annual General Meeting, Benchers orientation, preparation of minutes of Convocation, agenda planning with the Treasurer, Chief Executive Officer and others, supporting the work of the Priority Planning Committee and other general Corporate Secretary functions.

Activities in 2014 included:

- On March 31, 2014, the second paralegal election, which for the first time elected five licensed paralegals as benchers in Convocation and as members of the Paralegal Standing Committee;
- On April 9, 2014, the election of the chair of Paralegal Standing Committee;
- On June 26, 2014, the election of the Treasurer, which included three candidates.

2. Policy Development

Staff in the Policy Secretariat support the policy work of benchers. In their role as secretaries to committees, working groups and task forces, Policy Counsel develop ideas into policy for consideration at the relevant meetings and Convocation.

Depending on the nature of the policy under development, Policy Counsel may

- research the history of the policy and related policies at the Law Society
- determine how other law societies and professional regulators deal with the issue
- research how the legal profession and its regulators in other countries deal with the issue
- consult with stakeholders, including lawyers and paralegals and other legal organizations
- consult with the operational staff who will be implementing the policy
- consult and retain experts, legal or otherwise, on the issues
- write agendas for the committee, working group or task force
- write the report to Convocation outlining the deliberations and recommendations of the committee, working group or task force.

3. Legislative Review

Draft legislation is reviewed in the Policy Secretariat and, if relevant, responded to. The Law Society is vigilant in commenting on issues that affect the governance of lawyers and paralegals. This has become increasingly necessary as external attempts to regulate aspects of the legal profession have increased. Policy Counsel regularly draft submissions to government and other bodies in response to proposals that may undermine an independent legal profession with negative implications for the public interest.

Legislation reviewed or currently being monitored by staff in the Policy Secretariat includes:

- Bill 157, Financial Advisors Act, 2014
- Bill 161, Ontario Immigration Act, 2014
- Bill 170, Employment Standards Amendment Act (Greater Protection for Interns and Vulnerable Workers), 2014
- Bill 172, Learning Through Workplace Experience Act, 2014
- Bill 176, Better Business Climate Act, 2014
- Bill 189, Roadside Assistance Protection Act, 2014
- Bill 194, Building Opportunity and Securing Our Future Act (Budget Measures), 2014
- Bill 14, Building Opportunity and Securing Our Future Act (Budget Measures), 2014 (post election)

4. Federation of Law Societies of Canada

The Policy Secretariat contributes considerable time and expertise to the work of the Federation of Law Societies of Canada.

In 2014, staff in the Policy Secretariat participated in the following work of the Federation:

- Assisting with the implementation of the National Mobility Agreement with respect to Quebec
- Participating on the Federation's Standing Committee on the Model Code of Professional Conduct
- Participating in the National Standards Project
- Providing support to the organization of the Federation's Semi-Annual Conference, April 2014

With respect to the secondments noted above, Counsel to the Director completed a half-time eight-month secondment with the Federation in June 2014 providing counsel support to the Federation during the maternity leave of a Federation staff counsel. One Policy Counsel began a quarter-time secondment in April 2014 for at least the balance of 2014 assisting primarily in the work of the Common Law Program Approval Committee.

Other Policy Secretariat Work

Throughout 2014, the resources of the Policy Secretariat have been focused on many issues and projects, including the following:

- Continuing work arising from the recommendations of the independent reviewer appointed by the Attorney General (the Morris Report) respecting the five year review of paralegal regulation (e.g. scope of paralegal practice and review of exemptions)

- Implementation of the Federation of Law Societies' Model Code of Conduct with amendments to the Law Society's lawyer and paralegal rules of conduct
- Work on other rules issues arising from the consultation on the amendments described above
- Work on the next phase of the possible rule changes related to limited scope retainers
- Supporting the work of the Alternative Business Structures working group
- Work on the national suitability to practice standards and national discipline standards (Federation of Law Societies of Canada)
- Continuing implementation of the Pathways pilot project
- Supporting the work of the Mentoring and Advisory Services Proposal Task Force
- Continuing implementation of the National Mobility Agreement 2013
- Continuing implementation of tribunal reforms, including revisions and updating of the Adjudicator Code of Conduct, amendments to the by-laws and Rules of Practice and Procedure and recruitment of new non-bencher adjudicators
- Ongoing work on projects respecting history of the legal profession and documenting historical discipline data
- Amendments to the bencher election process through the work of the Bencher Election Working Group
- Continuing the work of the governance working group of the Priority Planning Committee
- Organizing and managing the special Convocations for the Trinity Western University deliberations, including the call for submissions
- Implementing the internal aspect of the framework approved by Convocation for access to justice through the TAG initiative
- Continuing the implementation of the enhanced policy development process as directed by the CEO
- Preparing materials, including memoranda, briefing notes and presentations, for the Treasurer, benchers, Executive Director - Policy, Equity and Public Affairs and the CEO on various Law Society or related issues

2015 Budget

The budget for 2015 includes a reduction in operating expenses from the 2013 level but, because of increased program expense, a net increase of less than 1% against the target for 2015. Budget for all Convocation functions, including reporting and transcript services, is increased based on an increase in rates by the provider and experience in 2014 with a trend to an increased number of and longer Convocations. A small increase in the budget for other program expenditures anticipates funds required for consultations related to the work of the Alternative Business Structures Working Group.

Revenue relates to the recovery of salary expenses from the Federation of Law Societies for a quarter-time Policy counsel secondment.

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA
2015 BUDGET DETAIL

CONVOCATION, POLICY AND OUTREACH
POLICY, EQUITY AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS (PEPA)

EQUITY

Consistent with the Law Society's mandate to govern the profession in the public interest, the Equity Initiatives Department undertakes activities to enhance,

- the accessibility of the Law Society's services, programs and decision-making to diverse communities;
- equality and diversity within the legal profession in Ontario and at the governance level;
- access to justice for the public.

The Department's total budget for 2015 has decreased to $1,136,900 from $ 1,218,300 in 2014. This decrease is as a result of the completion of resource development activities in the Justicia Project ($25,000). A decrease was also applied to the Discrimination and Harassment Counsel Program and the Career Coaching Program budgets to reflect end of year actuals since the inception of the programs ($40,000 and $35,000 respectively).

The total employee count remains at 6. There are 5 full-time permanent employees and 1 contractual employee in the Department. The salaries and benefits are decreased by $16,900, from $746,700 in 2014 to $729,800 in 2015, to account for a change in one position classification.

The Department's activities are divided into the following main areas: Public Education and Outreach; Research, Policy Development and Initiatives; Implementation of the Retention of Women in Private Practice Project; and Access to Justice. The Department also supports the functions of the Discrimination and Harassment Counsel.

Public Education and Outreach

The Department coordinates public education events as a way of promoting equality and diversity and of improving relations between the Law Society and members of Aboriginal, Francophone and equality-seeking communities within the profession and the broader community. All events are planned in partnership with legal associations and with the participation of lawyers. Relevant educational and promotional materials are prepared for events.

Such events include: Access Awareness, Asian and South Asian Heritage Month, Black History Month, International Women's Day, la Journée des Franco-Ontariens, la Journée internationale de la Francophonie, Law Week, Louis Riel Day, National Aboriginal History Month, National Holocaust Memorial Day and Pride. In 2009, the department launched the Rule of Law Series with the coordination of two to three international human rights events each year. It is anticipated that the Equity Initiatives Department will organize, and partner with organizations to deliver at least eleven equity and rule of law related public legal education events in 2015 and at least one staff event.

These events are coordinated in partnership with various organizations and groups including the following: the Aboriginal Services Toronto, Amnesty International Canada, the Association des juristes d'expression française de l'Ontario (AJEFO), ARCH Disability Law Centre, the Barbra Schlifer Commemorative Clinic, B'nai Brith Canada, the Canadian Association of Black Lawyers, the City of Toronto, Canadian Lawyers Abroad, the Federation of Asian Canadian Lawyers, the Women Lawyers Forum of the Ontario Bar Association (OBA), Human Rights Watch, Lawyers' Rights Watch Canada, the Métis National Council, the Ontario Justice Education Network, the Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity Committee of the OBA, the South Asian Bar Association, the Women's Law Association of Ontario, the Women's Legal and Education Action Fund, and many others. It is anticipated that over 2,500 individuals will participate in events coordinated by the Equity Initiatives Department in 2015.

Budget: Budgeted expenses for this activity are increased by $5,000 from $55,000 in 2014 to $60,000 in 2015 to reflect increases in cost of events.

Research, Policy Development and Initiatives

Policy Development

Activities in this area support the Equity and Aboriginal Issues Committee/Comité sur l'équité et les affaires autochtones, the Access to Justice Committee, the Equity Advisory Group/Groupe consultatif en matière d'équité and other working groups and task forces that fall within the mandate of the department. This requires developing policy and program options on a variety of matters including the following: developing resources to retain women in private practice; developing resources to promote a barrier free profession for members of equality-seeking communities; developing policies related to the Aboriginal community; monitoring human rights violations against lawyers and judges; analyzing trends in movement of lawyers in Ontario; identifying factors that affect career choices; and promoting French language rights.

Policy development will enable the Law Society to research, prepare and disseminate resources on access to justice for the public and on equality and diversity for the profession and the Law Society. Examples of initiatives will include the following:

- dissemination of best-practices for the advancement of women and racialized licensees in practice;
- development of guides and model policies for the legal profession;
- analysis of trends related to changes of status within the profession.

Research in Demographic Analysis

Research in Demographic Analysis is undertaken each year to provide insights into the demographic profile of the profession and help formulate the rationale for various policy initiatives. Throughout 2014, the Equity Initiatives Department undertook and monitored research activities approved by the Equity and Aboriginal Issues Committee/Comité sur l'équité et les affaires autochtones. Since 2012, the change of status survey is being conducted with both the profession of lawyers and paralegals. It will continue to be conducted in 2015 and will build on the findings from 2010 to 2014, which provide a wealth of information about the profession. The Career Choice Survey will again be conducted in 2015 with recently called lawyers to build on the findings of the first two Career Choice surveys. Further research will be undertaken in 2015 to identify programs and initiatives that the Law Society could develop to assist Francophone, Aboriginal and equality-seeking licensees in entering and remaining in the legal profession.

Professional Development Initiatives

Professional development opportunities for lawyers will be provided through specific education and training programs aimed at imparting knowledge and skills on law related to equality and diversity as well as best practices of integrating equality and diversity into day-to-day business. In 2015, it is anticipated that at least ten training programs and presentations will be delivered to lawyers and students in legal organizations, including law firms and law faculties.

Equity and Diversity at the Law Society

Professional development activities are also delivered within the Law Society. In 2015, at least five sessions will be delivered to staff of the Law Society. These activities will enable the Law Society to develop a workforce that reflects and benefits from diversity. Specific activities to achieve this goal include working with the Human Resources Department to initiate awareness programs for the workforce and enhancing its current strategies to ensure the organization both reflects and benefits from diversity.

Mentoring Program

The Law Society will also continue the Law Society Mentoring Program – Equity and Diversity Initiative. In 2015, it is anticipated that the Equity Initiatives Department will continue to collaborate with associations that already have mentoring programs. It is also anticipated that the Equity Initiatives Department will coordinate between 15 and 40 mentor–mentee relationships.

National Collaboration

The Director, Equity, and Discrimination and Harassment Counsel attend national annual meetings of equity advisors and ombudspersons. The meetings provide a forum for continued dialogue and exchanges of ideas about equity and diversity initiatives. It is anticipated that such meetings will continue in 2015.

Budget: Budgeted expenses for policies and initiatives are maintained at $40,000 (2014 and 2015). Budgeted expenses for research initiatives are maintained at $40,000 (2014 and 2015). Budgeted expenses to support bench committees, working groups and advisory groups are maintained at $13,000 (2014 and 2015).

Implementation of Retention of Women in Private Practice Project

In 2009, Convocation approved recommendations to enhance the retention of women in private practice. The Equity Initiatives Department is responsible for implementing the bulk of the recommendations, including working with law firms to implement the Justicia Project, managing the Contract Lawyers' Registry and conducting a change of status survey. A budget of $50,000 for 2014 was dedicated to complete the Justicia resource development and launch the resources for the profession. This stage was completed in 2014 and the Justicia Project will now continue with the promotion of resources and the development of Continuing Professional Development programs. The required budget is reduced from $50,000 in 2014 to $25,000 in 2015.

In April 2012, the Law Society launched the Career Coaching Program, a five-year pilot for women lawyers to assist those who are in sole practice or firms of 5 lawyers or fewer to maintain their practice while taking a maternity, parental or compassionate care leave. The program is structured to allow for two hours of coaching prior to the leave, two hours during the leave and two hours following the leave, to assist with ramping down the practice, maintaining the practice and reintegrating into the practice. The 2014 budget of $50,000 is reduced by $35,000 to $19,500 in 2015 to reflect the demand.

Budget: Budgeted expenses to implement the Retention of Women in Private Practice Project are reduced from $50,000 in 2014 to $25,000 in 2015. Budgeted expenses to implement the Career Coaching Program are reduced from $50,000 in 2014 to $19,500 in 2015.

Access to Justice

In 2010, the Law Society of Upper Canada, Legal Aid Ontario and Pro Bono Law Ontario released the report of the Ontario Civil Legal Needs Project. As a result, a fund for access to justice events and initiatives was created to the amount of $15,000. With the establishment of the Treasurer's Action Group, the budget for access to justice activities is increased to $45,000 in 2015 to cover the implementation of an access to justice Aboriginal strategy.

Budget: The 2014 budget of $15,000 to organize access to justice events and initiatives is increased to $45,000 in 2015 to allow for the implementation of an access to justice Aboriginal strategy.

Aboriginal Initiatives

This program provides direct support to Aboriginal candidates in the Licensing Process (e.g., networking opportunities and advice) and assists Aboriginal lawyers within the profession. The program also provides a direct link to Aboriginal lawyers concerned about issues regarding governance of the profession and its relationship with Aboriginal peoples. To do this, the Department provides support to the Aboriginal Working Group, maintains ongoing dialogue with Aboriginal legal educators and practitioners, organizes province-wide symposia for Aboriginal students and lawyers, delivers education programs, attends career fairs and meets regularly with Aboriginal peoples enrolled in law schools and the Licensing Process. The Department also convenes educational forums and seminars that promote Aboriginal perspectives on law and discuss Canadian law and its impact on Aboriginal peoples. In 2015, the Department, with the Equity Committee, will be updating its Aboriginal strategy. This will involve outreach and engagement with the Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal community.

Budget: Budgeted expenses are maintained at $20,000 (2014 and 2015).

Discrimination and Harassment Counsel (DHC)

Convocation approved this program in June 2001 as a permanent program. Its purpose is to provide lawyers and the public with access to someone they can speak with in confidence regarding allegations of discrimination or harassment by lawyers and paralegals. The DHC operates at arm's length from the Law Society. The services include assisting individuals in clarifying their issues/concerns and enabling individuals to identify options to take action on their concerns.

In 2008, Convocation approved an increase in the hourly fee of the DHC from $175 to $250 and in 2012, an increase to $315. In 2008, Convocation also approved an increase in the annual budget for the program from $100,000 to $150,000. The DHC program consistently operates under budget and as a result, the budget for the program in 2015 is reduced by $40,000 to reflect demand.

Budget: Budgeted expenses are reduced by $40,000 from $150,000 in 2014 to $110,000 in 2015.

Staffing

The Equity Initiatives Department consists of six staff:

- Director, Equity
- Associate Counsel, Equity Initiatives
- Aboriginal Initiatives and Policy Counsel
- Outreach and Program Coordinator
- Program Administrator
- Articling Student (contract)

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA
2015 BUDGET DETAIL

CONVOCATION, POLICY AND OUTREACH
POLICY, EQUITY AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS (PEPA)

PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Mandate

The Public Affairs department develops and maintains government and stakeholder relationships that assist the Law Society in identifying and achieving its priorities and objectives. By cultivating these relationships, the department is able to facilitate effective government and stakeholder engagement in the Law Society's policy development processes and ensure timely and appropriate responses to emerging issues.

The primary activities of the department include developing and managing stakeholder and government relationships, critical and emerging issues management, supporting policy development and strategic planning, and developing and supporting outreach activities. These activities inform, and are informed by, the work of every department of the Law Society.

Issues Management

The Law Society is able to respond to and manage critical and emerging issues effectively and appropriately as a result of the leadership provided by the Public Affairs Department and the relationships it has cultivated with key stakeholders and government.

Working closely with the Office of the Treasurer, the CEO, PEPA and other Law Society departments, Public Affairs researches and provides strategic advice and support to ensure Law Society positions are clear, consistent and representative of the interests of the whole organization.

The department is also engaged in the Law Society's policy development processes generally, ensuring stakeholder and government interests and feedback are considered, as appropriate.

Over the next year, the department will continue to support these activities and bring greater focus to issues tracking and information sharing and coordination, and the development of a corporate approach to stakeholder consultation. This will enable the Law Society to take a deliberate and consistent approach to consultations that aid in policy development and decision-making.

The department will also continue to take on special projects as requested by the Treasurer and CEO, such as the leadership provided on Access to Justice throughout 2014.

Cultivating External Relationships

Strong relationships, built and maintained with stakeholders and government, enhance the Law Society's ability to identify and meet its priorities and objectives. Strong stakeholder relations are founded on transparency and information sharing, central tenets of the work of the Public Affairs department. This work enhances the reach and relevance of the Law Society and contributes to a strong reputation and brand. The department's work will continue to focus on:

- Maintaining and enhancing relationships with government, legal and paralegal organizations, law firms, judiciary, self-regulatory bodies, public forums and the Federation of Law Societies of Canada
- Ensuring Benchers and staff have the information they need to understand the public policy implications of relevant legislation and provides strategic advice and support to the Treasurer, Benchers, CEO and Law Society employees
Coordinating outreach programs to increase the visibility and profile of the Law Society
- Establishing a stronger presence in public policy development and decision-making
- Enhancing relationships with other regulatory bodies, domestically and internationally
- Aligning corporate outreach messages for stakeholder consumption
- The department maintains a strong focus in cultivating the Law Society's government relations, anticipating, monitoring and addressing government initiatives that may affect any part of the Law Society's mandate. The department will continue to: Act as a primary point of contact and liaison with all governments
- Maintain and enhance general relationships with all levels of government
- Make representations to government on issues relating to the effective regulation of the provinces lawyers and paralegals in the public interest
- Monitor the legislative agenda of all levels of government to ensure that the Law Society is aware of government initiatives that affect its mandate
- Manage the process for the Law Society's recommended appointments of individuals to various external organizations.

2015 Budget

- The 2015 budget totals $745,300 (2014: $803,900). The evolving mandate is expected to be met with existing resources. In 2014 the Liaison Counsel position was transferred to the PEPA Executive Director's office, and then the position was eliminated when the incumbent left. The Government and Stakeholder Relations position, shared with Equity in 2013-14, is being transferred to Equity to support the new Outreach and Program Coordinator.

COMMUNICATIONS

Mandate

The Communications department provides a range of professional support and services to the organization and all its divisions, designed to promote and raise awareness of the many initiatives, programs, and services of the Law Society, as well as to enhance corporate reputation among members and the public. These services include the provision of strategic communications and marketing planning, the production of content for print and digital media, graphic design and layout, French language translation, and media monitoring. The professional support includes media training, media relations, and corporate research among members and the public.

Objectives of the department:

- Foster greater awareness among members of the priority initiatives and goals of the organization and of the services the Law Society provides to its members and the public.
- Qualitative and quantitative research will be undertaken periodically to track levels of awareness.
- Pursue positive or neutral media coverage of Law Society policies, events, and initiatives, and to reduce negative coverage of difficult issues. Continue to report media coverage to SMT quarterly, using the Media Rating Program (MRP).
- Provide leadership to the organization in the use of social media, including the development and publishing of content and the tracking of Law Society mention and presence on Twitter, LinkedIn, Facebook, YouTube, and other channels.
- Deliver a regular report to senior management on social media usage related to the Law Society.
- Support an integrated website that serves the public and members with a consistent look and feel, improved navigation, and an effective content management strategy.
- Support the continuing compliance of the Law Society website with AODA regulations.
- Maintain common graphic standards for digital and printed publications and promotional and marketing purposes. Graphic standards will be published on our intranet and made available as required to outside designers, printers, and to other departments in the organization.

- Maintain high-quality production standards in all the services provided by the department. Periodic consultation with senior management members to assess their communications and marketing needs and our effectiveness in meeting those needs.
- Provide strategic communications advice and support to Convocation, senior management and other senior staff as required. Participate in SME/SMT discussions and decision making, contribute to the policy development and issue management processes of the organization.
- Support the TAG initiative as new activities are undertaken in 2015.

Products and services provided by the department

Corporate messaging:

The creation of key messages around corporate issues and initiatives, speech-writing, the production of the Annual Report and the Gazette in digital format, the creation and production of content for the website and for social media.

French language services:

The translation from English to French and French to English of material for both print and digital formats, as well as support to the Treasurer and senior management in the use of both languages, assistance with recruiting, measuring language ability, and other language services as required.

Graphic design and layout in print and digital formats: The provision of graphic design and layout services to all departments.

Graphic standards, Stylebook: The creation and publication of graphic standards for both print and digital, and the creation and maintenance of a corporate stylebook.

Communications and marketing services: Support the marketing of a corporate brand, as well as advertising, promotion, and other marketing activities to assist with initiatives, products and services from other departments, and the creation and implementation of communications plans for specific initiatives.

Web content creation: the creation and publication of content for the corporate website, as well as training and support to all departments in the managing of content.

Media relations: the managing of media inquiries on behalf of all departments, the maintenance of a media contact list and the provision to the media of subscription services with discipline information, and the maintenance of a media contact and response database to improve the consistency and efficiency of responding to media inquiries.

Media monitoring: tracking the tone and frequency of Law Society coverage in traditional and social media, and the provision of regular reports to senior management.

Media training: customized sessions for designated spokespersons.

Social media services: the creation and posting of content on corporate social media channels, the provision of strategic advice to all departments on the use and tracking of social media, and the tracking of corporate mention as well as member engagement on social media. The Communications department created a Treasurer's blog in 2013 and produced more than 100 posts in English and French for the previous Treasurer (Thomas Conway). These were written by Communications staff in many instances, and also by subject matter experts or staff from other departments. All were translated and edited by Communications, and we distributed a writer's guide and editorial schedule.

Corporate accounts on Twitter, Facebook and YouTube are also being used more frequently. PD&C are making increasing use of socialmedia as well, in support of CPD programming and other practice management activities. Given the large number of new members joining the Law Society each year, and their ready reliance on and usage of social media and other web-based applications, this is a growth area for the Law Society.

Communications is a good place to center the development of social media strategies, monitor the various channels, and coordinate with other departments. As an example, the Treasurer published a post on his blog highlighting a CPD program that drew more than 3600 participants on the issues associated with self-represented litigants <http://www.lawsocietygazette.ca/blog/self-represented/> The blog post tied together the success of a Law Society CPD program with the Treasurer's stated priority around access to justice. PD&C staff originally alerted Communications staff to the success of the program, and we in turn worked with them to produce the blog post, which we subsequently translated, posted on the blog, and tweeted about through the Treasurer's Twitter account and the corporate Twitter account. We also highlighted the blog post on the main website.

The blog and our various social media accounts offer many new opportunities to build and reinforce the Law Society's brand and to engage members on an ongoing basis. The two Convocation webcasts of the articling debate and the one on TWU are further examples of new opportunities in the digital world. The debates each drew more than a thousand comments online, and the Law Society ranked number one on Twitter in Ontario for more than an hour during the first debate.

2015 Budget

Staffing in the 2015 budget remains unchanged from 2014.

The 2015 budget contains an increase in Program Expenses of $134,000, funded by the Law Foundation of Ontario, and provided specifically to support TAG. These additional funds will be spent on an idea-sharing site, web hosting, speakers, webcasting, AODA compliance, and support services including translation, printing and mailing. A separate account line in our budget will capture the use of these funds and allow us to track and report them separately.

2015 BUDGET DETAIL

CONVOCATION, POLICY AND OUTREACH

CONVOCATION

The total budget for Convocation's expenses has remained relatively flat at $3.1 million for 2015. A reduction in projected total bencher remuneration of $200,000 along with a reduction of $100,000 in Treasurer expenses due to the election of a Toronto based Treasurer are offset by a $250,000 provision for the anticipated bencher planning session intended for after the upcoming bencher election in May of 2015.

In line with Convocation's policy, an inflationary increase is being applied to the Treasurer's Honorarium which moves from $182,000 to $185,000. The budget also provides for a 3% increase in the rates for bencher remuneration. This increase is in line with the anticipated increase in the CPI. Rates have not been increased since 2013.

SERVICES TO MEMBERS AND THE PUBLIC CATERING

The primary function of the Catering department is to provide food services for Benchers needs and Law Society meetings and events. Activities include the operation of the Osgoode Hall Restaurant (a lunch hour restaurant service), and a cafeteria that provides snacks and meals to staff and visitors. For 2015 the catering operation will add a position of host to assist with dining room operations. This department also caters a wide variety of internal functions including CPD programs, as well as events for outside organizations that contract to use Osgoode Hall facilities.

In addition, Catering provides the venue for the Toronto Lawyers Feed the Hungry program, and contributes to its operation in a number of significant ways.

At this point of 2014, revenues are $947,000 increasing by 6% over the same period in 2013. The catering operation is budgeted at a net cost of $331,500 in 2015, compared to $302,000 in 2014.

SERVICES TO MEMBERS AND THE PUBLIC LAW SOCIETY REFERRAL SERVICE (“LSRS”)

The Law Society Referral Service began operating in 2012. The LSRS was created to expand the former Lawyer Referral Service to include paralegals and to offer on-line referrals. The service was also enhanced to guide members of the public to additional resources that might assist them with their legal issues.

As part of the Law Society’s operational review undertaken in 2014, the LSRS was identified as a service that could be maintained and offered to the public in a format significantly transformed from its traditional telephone based referral model.

Throughout 2014 a web based search and referral service has been in development and will roll out in January of 2015. Members of the public will have access to a searchable data base using the web browser on a personal computing device. The service will retain its 1-800 service for members of the public without access to a computer. As a result the service will see a reduction in staff to 5 from the current 10. In total the estimated savings are projected at $400,000 annually with no reduction in the public’s ability to access a referral through the system.

COMPENSATION FUND

Mandate

This department processes claims for compensation where it is alleged that the claimant experienced a loss due to a lawyer or paralegal's dishonesty.

Staffing and Structure

The department has three staff and a manager now shared with Trustee Services. In 2015, the department's total expenses for lawyers and paralegals are budgeted at $3.2 million, substantially unchanged from 2014. Total expenses include $2,450,000 in allowances for grants claimed for lawyers and $111,000 for paralegals, also unchanged from 2014.

Investment income is projected at $1,050,000, in line with market conditions and increased from $900,000 in 2014.

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA
2015 BUDGET DETAIL

SERVICES TO MEMBERS AND THE PUBLIC SUPPORT OF EXTERNAL ORGANIZATIONS

ONTARIO JUSTICE EDUCATION NETWORK (“OJEN”)

OJEN’s objectives are to foster public understanding of the justice system, support the values of the justice system, encourage dialogue between justice system participants and deliver public legal education information.

The Law Society does not have a permanent place on OJEN’s board but Benchers are often on the board - Constance Backhouse is a current director. The OJEN Network is a collaborative forum serving as a communications and facilitation link for justice system participants, educators, community representatives and others with an interest in public legal educational activity. The Network shares information about public education programs and activities, and has an advisory role to OJEN’s Board and Executive Director. Participants include the Treasurer and sometimes other Benchers.

Historically, the Law Society has not provided OJEN with direct funding support but there is a currently a request for financial support ($75,000 for 2015 declining to nil over five years) from the Law Society as OJEN transitions to a new location, with a closer working relationship with Community Legal Education Ontario (“CLEO”).

Current other supports provided to OJEN by the Law Society includes:

- Office accommodation including furniture and equipment for the OJEN staff members for no fee. The space is at 393 University Avenue. This in-kind support is being replaced with the direct funding noted above.
- The provision of Human Resource, Information System, printing, courier services etc when required. Direct costs are recovered but overhead costs are not

THE OSGOODE SOCIETY FOR CANADIAN LEGAL HISTORY

The Osgoode Society’s purpose is to study and promote public interest in the history of the law, the legal profession and the judiciary in Ontario and elsewhere in Canada and to stimulate research and publication on these subjects.

There are Benchers on the board of the Osgoode Society. The Law Society does not provide the Osgoode Society with direct funding support. Current other support provided to the Osgoode Society by the Law Society includes:

- Inclusion in most of our insurance policies
- Office accommodation including furniture and equipment for no fee. The space is in the basement of Osgoode Hall
- The provision of Human Resource, Information System, printing, courier services etc when required. Direct costs are recovered but overhead costs are not
- Hosting Osgoode Society functions without charging rental fees
- Payroll administration

- Provision of investment services for the R. Roy McMurtry Fellowship in Legal History

THE LAW SOCIETY FOUNDATION (“LSF”)

The Law Society Foundation is a registered charity that primarily raises funds in support of the Lawyers Feed the Hungry Program, which operates in Toronto, London, Ottawa and Windsor. In addition, through a number of endowments and restricted funds, the LSF provides bursary grants in support of law students, fosters high standards and equity in legal education in Ontario and preserves objects of historic significance to Canada’s legal heritage.

There are currently four Benchers on the Board of Trustees, which consists of five Trustees, and the Law Society’s Chief Financial Officer is the LSF’s Secretary-Treasurer.

Current support provided by the Law Society to the LSF, in general, includes:

- Administrative services such as maintenance of the accounting records, financial reporting, government filings and charitable donation tax receipt issuance
- Inclusion in most of our insurance policies
- Guidance with respect to Canada Revenue Agency charity related policies, etc.
- Governance and Board support services

In addition to the support provided generally to the LSF, the Law Society predominantly administers the Lawyers Feed the Hungry Programs. The Programs operating outside Toronto are coordinated by lead volunteers in each city, but the Law Society supports them by facilitating fundraising administration and providing guidance with respect to Canada Revenue Agency charity requirements.

The Toronto Program operates in the cafeteria at Osgoode Hall and is staffed primarily with volunteers, a paid co-ordinator and three kitchen helpers. On average, the Program serves approximately 50,000 guests a year. The site and its facilities are provided to the program free of charge.

The direct costs of fundraising and operating the Toronto Program are funded by the LSF (approximately $375,000 a year), but the Law Society provides a number of in-kind services in support of fundraising efforts and the day to day operation of the Program.

These services include:

- Coordination of program operational activities, which consist of liaising with various volunteer coordinators, menu planning, food ordering and receiving, meal preparation and overall monitoring of the program
- Organization and coordination of fundraising events
- Communication services to highlight the Program, solicit donations and promote events
- Provision of facilities to serve meals including maintenance of equipment, clean up after meals and general repairs/updates to facilities

PRO BONO (“PBLO”)

PBLO is a charitable foundation which promotes opportunities for lawyers to provide pro bono legal services to persons of limited means.

Ongoing support provided to PBLO by the Law Society includes:

- Inclusion in our insurance policies
- Payroll administration for no fee
- PBLO was previously housed at the Law Society but is now off-site and the Law Society provides $50,000 to finance their rent
- $75,000 to fund operating expenses

LAW COMMISSION OF ONTARIO (“LCO”)

The LCO is an independent organization that researches issues and recommends law reform measures to make the law accessible to all Ontario communities.

Our other partners in the LCO are the Ministry of the Attorney General, Osgoode Hall Law School, the Law Deans of Ontario and the Law Foundation of Ontario. The Law Society has a seat on the LCO board.

As in 2014, $138,000 has been provided for the Law Commission of Ontario representing the fourth year of a five year commitment for their second mandate running from 2012 to 2017.

In 2010, Convocation reaffirmed the Law Society’s support in principle for the mandate of the LCO for the second mandate of five years.

COUNTY AND DISTRICT LAW PRESIDENTS’ ASSOCIATION (“CDLPA”)

CDLPA is the coordinating body for 47 county and district law associations to promote the interests of its member associations throughout the province (the Toronto Lawyers Association is not a member of CDLPA but has a close working relationship). The members of the corporation are the current Presidents of the County or District Law Associations. There are two primary sources of funding - dues from member associations and grants from the Law Society.

Under the Law Society Act, the Treasurer must meet with the presidents on an annual basis and this has developed into semi-annual plenary sessions. Under an arrangement with CDLPA, the Law Society provides an annual amount to reimburse presidents for expenses and the cost of the plenary sessions. The Law Society also hosts executive committee meetings of CDLPA, typically coinciding with Committee day, and pay the associated travel expenses. The 2015 budget to support CDLPA is $252,800, (2014: $248,000). The budget is largely related to the cost of the association presidents’ transportation and accommodation for meetings and bi-annual plenary sessions at the Law Society.

CANLII

The Canadian Legal Information Institute (“CanLII”) is a non-profit organization managed by the Federation of Law Societies of Canada. CanLII's goal is to make Canadian law accessible for free on the Internet. The website provides access to court judgments, tribunal decisions, statutes and regulations from all Canadian jurisdictions.

Similar to the funding of the Federation, funding of CanLII is membership based and the 2015 budget allocates $1,345,000 (2014: $1,290,000 million) for the operation of CanLII.

SERVICES TO MEMBERS AND THE PUBLIC
PARENTAL LEAVE ASSISTANCE PROGRAM (“PLAP”)

The Law Society introduced PLAP as a pilot project in March 2009. The purpose is to reduce the financial hardship of lawyers in small firms and sole practices by defraying some of the costs of overhead during a leave from practice. Through this program the Law Society assists lawyers, women and men, to remain in small firms and sole practices.

On January 1, 2014, PLAP was changed to place a $50,000 cap on eligibility based on net income from practice.

The Equity Committee presented an Information Report to Convocation in February 2014 that included statistical information about PLAP, a proposed assessment methodology of the means test model and timeline and options considered by the Retention of Women Working Group and the Equity Committee. In June 2014, further statistical information was provided to Convocation to assist in assessing how successful the program has been in getting people back into the profession after parental leave.

In the 2015 budget is $300,000 (2014: $400,000) to fund the program.

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA
2015 BUDGET DETAIL

CORPORATE SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION
CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER AND FINANCE

Mandate

The four main activities that come under the Chief Executive Officer (“CEO”) and Finance are the operation of the office of the CEO, the administrative, accounting and finance services for the Law Society, the provision of administrative and accounting services in support of LibraryCo Inc. (“LibraryCo”) and the provision of administrative and accounting services in support of the Law Society Foundation.

CEO’s Office

The CEO’s office oversees the implementation of policy decisions made by Convocation and leads the operations of the Law Society. In addition, the CEO represents the Law Society at the Federation of Law Societies of Canada and globally. The CEO is also a member of the Board of Directors of LAWPRO.

Finance Services

The Finance department provides services for the Law Society in the areas of financial reporting, general accounting, purchasing, cash and investment management, payroll, financial policy development, insurance, government filings/returns, central purchasing and the billing of all member and student related fees. The department is responsible for ensuring the adequacy of internal financial controls intended to safeguard the financial assets of the Law Society and for ensuring the Law Society’s books and records are in compliance with generally accepted accounting principles. The administration of the printing and mail services contract is carried out by the Finance department. From a corporate budget perspective, staff manage the Law Society’s annual process for the lawyer, paralegal and capital budgets, develop budget policy options, track expenditures to budget throughout the year and provide assistance to departments in managing their individual budgets. In support of the Audit and Finance Committee, staff research developments related to financial policy and planning, presenting information and policy options for consideration by the Committee as well as research and prepare material for review by the Committee, at their request.

Under a Management Services Agreement signed between the Law Society of Upper Canada and LAWPRO in 2009, LAWPRO provides services with respect to the management of the Law Society’s Errors and Omissions Insurance Fund. From a financial perspective, the services provided include the billing of members for premiums, cash and investment management, general accounting services, completion of some government filings/returns and the provision of information to support the Law Society’s financial reporting. The Finance department works closely with LAWPRO’s management team on financial reporting and audit matters.

LibraryCo Administration

Under the Administrative Services Agreement (ASA) signed in 2007 between the Law Society of Upper Canada and LibraryCo Inc., the Finance department provides administrative services to LibraryCo. In coordinating the annual budget process for LibraryCo, staff also liaise with the 48 county libraries in determining their budgetary needs as they relate to the funding provided by LibraryCo. In addition to salary costs, expenses are also incurred in the areas of professional membership fees, travel, office supplies, etc. These budgeted expenses are offset by revenue from LibraryCo, billed under the ASA, with the revenue recognized corporately.

Law Society Foundation Administration

The Finance department provides administrative and accounting services to the Law Society Foundation ('Foundation'). Specifically, various staff are involved in supporting the Foundation through the provision of the following services: financial reporting, Board support, general accounting, accounts payable processing, cash and investment management, financial policy development, sourcing and ensuring adequate insurance coverage, completion of government filings and the issuance of income tax receipts in compliance with Canada Revenue Agency regulations. In addition, staff in Finance play an integral role in supporting the fund raising efforts of the Toronto Lawyers Feed the Hungry Program, a fund of the Foundation. Outside of the Toronto program, staff liaise with volunteer program coordinators on financial and fund raising matters, ensuring compliance with Canada Revenue Agency requirements for charities.

Other

Other Finance department responsibilities include:

- Bencher expense reimbursement and Bencher remuneration administration
- Secretariat support to the Law Society's Audit and Finance Committee, LibraryCo's Audit and Finance Committee and the Law Society Foundation's Board of Trustees
- Financial analysis for policy decisions of Convocation and the Boards of LibraryCo and the Law Society Foundation
- Administration of the Parental Leave Assistance Program
- Coordinating the annual external audit and preparing annual audited financial statements for the Law Society, the Law Society Pension Fund, LibraryCo and the Law Society Foundation as well as quarterly financial reports for presentation to the relevant Committees and/or Boards
- Payroll, pension and/or investment management support to such organizations such as the Osgoode Society and Pro Bono Law Ontario

Finance Department Initiatives

With development of the Member Portal and related systems that facilitate on-line self-service for lawyers and paralegals, Finance will continue to work with other stakeholder departments in its continued implementation. It is anticipated that Finance staff will be involved in the Member Portal initiative in 2015, as development related to the distribution of the annual fee billing and notices through the Portal is expected this year.

Finance is working with the Human Resources team in implementing a self-service time and attendance system. It is anticipated that the time and attendance solution will automate the current manual processes related to absence management for employees and remuneration activity submissions for Benchers and adjudicators.

In recent years, the department has been working on initiatives that will bring efficiencies to current processes and improve service to members, licensing candidates and employees. Efforts on these initiatives will continue with the Finance department working closely with other Law Society departments to review current processes and controls. Particularly, in 2015, the department will:

- investigate automated distribution of pay stubs and T-slips
- investigate, and implement where appropriate, opportunities to automate cash receipt processing through increased use of PC banking, internet banking and electronic funds transfer.

The Finance department continues to assess any changes to Generally Accepted Accounting Principles for Not-for-Profit organizations. Finance managers will continue to work closely with the external auditors for the Law Society, LibraryCo and the Foundation in implementing the necessary changes to financial reporting. Similarly, the Finance department, in conjunction with the Office of General Counsel, will monitor developments with the new Ontario Not-for-Profit Corporations Act and any possible impact on the Law Society, LibraryCo or the Foundation.

BUDGET REQUIREMENT

The employee count is 30 reduced by one financial analyst from 2014. To continue to provide service to our stakeholders (Convocation, LibraryCo and Foundation Boards, Committees, departments, members, employees, the public, donors, etc.) and work on enhancing operations by improving customer service, financial reporting, internal controls and streamlining processes, the Finance department proposes a net budget, primarily of staffing costs of $3.8 million (2014 - $3.9 million).

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA
2015 BUDGET DETAIL

CORPORATE SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION

CORPORATE SERVICES

The mandate of our Corporate Services Division is to consolidate and align all of the Law Society's shared services, resulting in better coordination and increased efficiencies. The Division is led by Executive Director Terry Knott and consists of 12 departments, six of which make up the Client Service Centre.

For 2015, a primary area of focus in this Division is to continue building an organizational infrastructure that will take full advantage of the efficiencies available through current and emerging technologies. Enterprise Content Management is a multi-year, phased initiative and is a key component of this plan. The Project Management Office (PMO) is coordinating the ECM project, with the close cooperation and support of I.S. Shared Services and Support and the Corporate Resource and Training Centre.

CORPORATE SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION FACILITIES SERVICES

While the Law Society's fence and gates are integral components of our heritage property, they also require constant upkeep. There is an urgent need to accelerate our maintenance schedule in order to address general deterioration, sagging and rusting. For that reason, we are requesting $200,000 next year ($100,000 each for the fence and gate) that would normally have been included in our 2016 budget. We note that the impact of this request will be partially offset by deferring repairs to the sewage pump ($50,000) that were originally scheduled for 2015.

The other major project in this area involves the relocation of the Tribunals office and hearing rooms from Osgoode Hall to existing Law Society space on three floors at 393 University Avenue. Law Society staff who currently occupy this space (Equity Initiatives and our I.S. programmers) would return to Osgoode Hall. We estimate that the total cost for the refit and move will be approximately $1,300,000. This project will be funded by an increase in annual Capital Levy.

2015 BUDGET DETAIL

CORPORATE SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION
CLIENT SERVICE CENTRE (CSC)

Call Centre (CSC)

The Call Centre maintains three separate lines for incoming Law Society calls: a Resource Centre line, which handles general licensee-related calls; a Reception line that routes calls to the appropriate department/individual at the Law Society; and a Complaints Reception line.

No budget-related changes are contemplated for this area next year.

Membership Services (CSC)

Key roles in this area include the administration and maintenance of the Law Society's licensee database and member files, and assistance to licensees with annual fee payments, adjustments, refunds and member ID cards. Membership Services also provides support for CPD and Portal inquiries.

Budgetary requirements for this area should remain stable in 2015.

2015 BUDGET DETAIL

CORPORATE SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION
OFFICE OF THE GENERAL COUNSEL

Mandate

The Office of the General Counsel provides in house counsel services to the Law Society. Currently, the department reviews and/or drafts legal agreements to be entered into by the Law Society, provides legal advice and opinions to other departments of the Law Society, committees of Benchers and Convocation, retains and instructs (on behalf of the CEO, other senior managers, the Litigation Committee or Convocation) outside counsel in various matters (including non-regulatory litigation matters) involving the Law Society, monitors the progress of litigation involving the Law Society that is instructed by the Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company, provides legislative drafting services to committees of Benchers and Convocation (i.e., drafts by-laws, regulations, rules of practice and procedure) and responds to general requests from licensees for access to information about them in the possession of the Law Society. The senior counsel is the Law Society's designated privacy officer.

Budget

The 2015 budget for the Office of the General Counsel proposes expenses totaling $1,293,000 (2014: $993,000) with the budget for external counsel fees increasing by $250,000 to $384,000.

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA
2015 BUDGET DETAIL

CORPORATE SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION
CONTINGENCY AND CORPORATE

ERRORS & OMISSIONS INSURANCE FUND INVESTMENT INCOME

This budget is based on the Law Society receiving a transfer of $1.5 million (2014 - $1.5 million) of income surplus to the requirements of the Errors and Omissions Insurance Fund administered by LAWPRO.

INVESTMENT INCOME

The 2015 budget includes investment income of $850,000 (2014 - $700,000) from the investment of funds surplus to the Law Society's immediate operational needs, reflecting financial market conditions and capital balances.

LEXIS NEXIS ROYALTIES

2015 budgeted income from the Ontario Reports is at $1.5 million (2014 - $1.5 million), based on the agreement being updated with Lexis Nexis and current royalty rate estimates.

LIBRARYCO SERVICE FEE

The Law Society will receive $430,000 in 2015 for services provided under the renegotiated administrative services agreement with LibraryCo (2014 - $ 528,000).

CORPORATE EXPENSE

Total corporate expense levels at $3.1 million (2014 - $3 million) include:

- A contingency of $1.0 million (2014 - $1 million)
- Insurance and annual audit fees totaling $350,000, (2014 = $350,000)
- Credit card fees $929,000.
- A provision of $40,000 in consulting for an examination of operational procedures, policies and/or practices of the Society to ascertain whether any of these involve actual or perceptible systemic discrimination against members of racialized communities.

Re: Treasurer Expense Reimbursement Policy

It was moved by Mr. Bredt, seconded by Mr. Wardle, that Convocation approve the new Treasurer Expense Reimbursement Policy as set out in the Report.

Carried

TAB 2.3

FOR DECISION
TREASURER EXPENSE REIMBURSEMENT POLICY

Motion:

3. That Convocation approve the new Treasurer Expense Reimbursement Policy.

Rationale

4. An approved, transparent expense reimbursement policy is a critical internal control tool and assists in administering the reimbursement process. Currently, Treasurers are reimbursed for business related expenses under the existing Bencher Expense Reimbursement Policy. In recognition of the unique circumstances of the office of Treasurer, a policy for the reimbursement of expenses incurred by Treasurers in the course of their Law Society business is being proposed.
5. This is a new policy, based on the Bencher Expense Reimbursement Policy. It will come into effect when it is approved by Convocation.

Key Issues and Considerations

6. The policy requires the Treasurer to consult with the Chair, Audit & Finance Committee or the Chief Executive Officer for guidance if the Treasurer has any doubt as to the appropriateness of a specific expense.
7. The policy continues the Audit & Finance Committee's role in overseeing Treasurer expenses by requiring timely, accurate and complete reporting to the Committee.
8. The policy is based on the Bencher Expense Reimbursement Policy and addresses issues often unique to Treasurers such as long term accommodation and the use of business class air travel for flights over four hours.

Financial Impact

9. Expenses reimbursed to, or paid on behalf of, the Treasurer should be within the detailed budget set for Treasurer business expense purposes. In 2014 this budget totals $305,000.

TREASURER EXPENSE REIMBURSEMENT POLICY

Approved By:	Convocation	Review Date:	October, 2015
Contact:	Chief Financial Officer

1 POLICY

Under By-Law 3, the Treasurer is entitled to be reimbursed for reasonable expenses incurred in performing his or her duties on behalf of the Law Society. Expenses reimbursed to, or paid on behalf of, the Treasurer should be within the detailed budget set for Treasurer business expense purposes.

The Treasurer should consult with the Chair, Audit & Finance Committee or the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) for guidance related to any expenses which may be considered extraordinary, not within the set budget, and/or if the Treasurer has any doubt as to the appropriateness of a specific expense.

2 PURPOSE

The purpose of this Policy is to:

- set the guidelines for the Treasurer with respect to reimbursable expenses in conducting Law Society business,
- reflect the obligation of the Law Society to be accountable for the expenditure of all funds, and
- assist the Audit & Finance Committee in their role of overseeing Treasurer expenses by providing timely, accurate and complete reporting to the Committee on a regular basis.

3 SCOPE

The Treasurer Expense Reimbursement policy applies to the Treasurer while conducting Law Society business during his/her term.

4 RESPONSIBILITY

4.01 The Treasurer on Law Society business is responsible for:

- Following the guidelines for expenses, or satisfying the Chair, Audit & Finance Committee or CEO, prior to incurring an expense, that an exception is appropriate,
- Ensuring expenses incurred are within the budget approved by Convocation and in keeping with the detailed budget set for Treasurer business expense purposes,
- Retaining and submitting all original receipts along with a completed Law Society Expense Report form.

4.02 The Chair, Audit & Finance Committee is responsible for:

- Approving exceptions to the Treasurer expense reimbursement policy, where the policy guidelines are exceeded due to extenuating circumstances, and communicating decisions to the CEO and Chief Financial Officer (CFO).

4.03 The Chief Executive Officer is responsible for:

- Approving all expenses, subsequent to the CFO's review,
- In conjunction with the Chair, Audit & Finance Committee, approving exceptions to the Treasurer expense reimbursement policy, where the policy guidelines are exceeded due to extenuating circumstances, and communicating decisions to the CFO,
- Monitoring for compliance with the set policy and raising issues, where appropriate, with the Audit & Finance Committee.

4.04 The Chief Financial Officer is responsible for:

- Providing guidance to the Chair, Audit & Finance Committee and CEO regarding appropriate types and levels of expenses
- Reviewing all expense reports and conference requests submitted by the Treasurer for completeness, accuracy and budget availability
- Providing reporting on Treasurer's expenses to the Audit & Finance Committee.

5 ALLOWABLE BUSINESS EXPENSES

5.01 Travel

The Law Society recognizes the following as reimbursable travel expenses:

- Economy class airfares on commercial flights with business class airfares permitted for flights exceeding four hours
- Train or bus tickets
- Airport fees
- Public transportation costs
- Parking
- Taxi fares or limousine, including gratuity, to and from destinations within a city
- A rental car, including insurance and gasoline costs, in the destination city.
- Use of a Treasurer's personal vehicle for business travel will be reimbursed on a per kilometre basis. The Law Society will update and publish the rate per kilometre for reimbursement purposes periodically.

5.02 Accommodation

In general, the Law Society recognizes the following as reimbursable accommodation expenses:

- Within Toronto and Ottawa, reimbursement will be limited to accommodation expenses equivalent to those at the Law Society's pre-approved hotels at the negotiated rates. The list of pre-approved hotels and rates is to be updated and published by the Law Society periodically.
- When long-term accommodation arrangements are needed in Toronto as a Treasurer's primary residence is outside the Greater Toronto Area, reimbursement will be limited to accommodation expenses comparable to the cost that would be incurred by staying at the Law Society's pre-approved hotels in Toronto.
- Outside of Toronto and Ottawa, reimbursement will be limited to the comparable class of pre-approved hotels in Toronto and Ottawa.

5.03 Meals

The Law Society reimburses reasonable meal expenses incurred while travelling or conducting Law Society business. When travelling or dining independently, the Treasurer should use the Reimbursement Guidelines set for benchers in the Bencher Expense Reimbursement Policy as a guide for reasonable meal and beverage expense per day.

5.04 Other Reimbursable Expenses

The Law Society will reimburse reasonable miscellaneous expenses incurred in conducting Law Society business such as:

- Gratuities/tips
- Communication costs such as fax, long distance charges, teleconferences and cell phone usage
- Childcare and related expenses
- While traveling, internet connection expenses and telephone calls.

5.05 Non-reimbursable Expenses

The Law Society will not reimburse expenses incurred for hospitality gifts, meals, accommodation or other expenses where the Treasurer is hosted by family or friends or stay in their own secondary residence instead of a hotel.

5.06 Conferences

Attendance at a seminar, conference or similar event at Law Society expense must be approved by the CEO in advance of any commitment or reservations being booked.

On occasion, the Treasurer may attend an event which includes a guest invitation. With the prior approval of the CEO, the Law Society will reimburse reasonable travel, accommodation and meal expenses incurred for a guest to attend with the Treasurer.

5.07 Other Costs

The Law Society occasionally hosts functions to which guests are invited. Additional expenses incurred for a guest to travel to a designated event will be reimbursed in accordance with this Policy.

6 SUBMISSION OF EXPENSE CLAIMS

6.01 Submission of Expense Claims

- Original receipts and boarding passes should be retained and submitted with a completed Law Society Expense Report Form to the attention of the CFO.
- The Expense Report Form should include the purpose for incurring the expense(s) such as attending Federation of Law Societies meeting, business meeting with Committee Chairs to address a given matter, etc.
- Receipts should include the name of the service provider (e.g. restaurant, taxi company, etc.), the date the service was received and the amount paid.
- Receipts supporting a business meal should indicate the reason for the business meeting and the names of those in attendance.
- It is preferred that, at a minimum, claims for reimbursement be submitted on a monthly basis by the 15th business day in the month following the month in which the expense was incurred. Claims submitted more than six months after the date of the expense being incurred may be declined for reimbursement.

7 REPORTING

7.01 Reporting

In accordance with the Law Society's internal control and governance processes, regular reporting on Treasurer's expenses will be submitted to the Audit & Finance Committee along with exceptions to the policy.

PROFESSIONAL REGULATION COMMITTEE REPORT

Mr. Mercer presented the Report.

Re: Amendment to the Policy on Law Society Investigations of Benchers, Employees and Adjudicators

It was moved by Mr. Mercer, seconded by Ms. Richer, that Convocation amend the policy on Law Society Investigations of Benchers, Employees, and Licensee Adjudicators, as set out at Tab 3.1.1 of the Report.

FOR DECISION

AMENDMENT TO THE POLICY ON LAW SOCIETY INVESTIGATIONS OF BENCHERS, EMPLOYEES, AND ADJUDICATORS*MOTION

3. That Convocation amend the policy on Law Society Investigations of Benchers, Employees, and Licensee Adjudicators, as set out at Tab 3.1.1.

Issue for Consideration

4. Convocation is asked to approve an amendment to the 2009 Policy on Law Society Investigations of Licensee Benchers and Staff to provide for the handling of complaints against licensees who are non-bencher adjudicators.
5. Convocation approved a new policy for these investigations in January, 2009. The policy was amended in February 2009 to provide for investigations of the Treasurer, Chief Executive Officer and Director, Professional Regulation.<sup>1</sup>
6. The current policy does not explicitly apply to non-Bencher Tribunal adjudicators. It is recommended that the policy be amended to specifically refer to all licensee adjudicators.
7. Since the Law Society's regulatory authority is limited to lawyers and paralegals, the policy would only apply to adjudicators who are licensees.
8. Changes also incorporate the new title of the Executive Director, Professional Regulation, and the fact that all licensed paralegal members of the Paralegal Standing Committee are now benchers.
9. The Professional Regulation and Paralegal Standing Committees approved these changes at their October 2014 meetings. The Tribunal Committee was advised of the proposed changes on October 15, 2014.

POLICY FOR THE INVESTIGATION OF COMPLAINTS AGAINST LAWYER AND PARALEGAL BENCHERS, AND EMPLOYEES, AND PARALEGAL MEMBERS OF THE PARALEGAL STANDING COMMITTEE AND LICENSEE ADJUDICATORS

1. All complaints against benchers, ~~and~~ employees of the Law Society, ~~and~~ licensee adjudicators appointed to the ~~Hearing Division Law Society Tribunal~~ are transferred to Professional Regulation Intake for assessment.
2. Where the complaint is not serious and is unlikely to result in formal or informal sanction, with the Executive Director's investigation instruction, the complaint should be transferred to Complaints Resolution for processing in the normal course.
3. Where in the course of resolution a less serious matter changes in character and may result in a "found"<sup>1</sup> complaint, the Executive Director is to be consulted to determine whether outside counsel should be retained. The Executive Director may decide to retain outside counsel to continue the investigation in consultation with the Treasurer.
4. Where it is determined that the complaint raises more serious allegations which, if supported by the evidence would lead to a "found"<sup>2</sup> complaint requiring formal proceedings, or a referral to the Proceedings Authorization Committee, the Executive Director will retain an outside investigator in consultation with the Treasurer.
5. On completion of his or her investigation, the outside investigator is required to provide a report to the Treasurer and the Executive Director of Professional Regulation. If the recommendation is that the matter should close without referral to the Proceedings Authorization Committee, and the Treasurer and the Executive Director both agree, the case will be closed. Where any one of the investigator, the Treasurer or the Executive Director are of the view that the case should be reported to the Proceedings Authorization Committee, the investigator is required to prepare and present a report to the PAC.
6. The Executive Director will provide the Treasurer with a regular report on all ongoing bencher, staff, ~~and Tribunal member~~ investigations and their resolution.
7. In the appropriate case, the Executive Director may also refer a complaint to the Complaints Resolution Commissioner for resolution where the matter concerns a complaint of a less serious nature.

8. All persons involved in application of this policy must be mindful of conflicts of interest and shall not act in the event of a conflict.
9. If a complaint is received about the Executive Director, Professional Regulation, the Chief Executive Officer will assume the role of the Executive Director, Professional Regulation for the purpose of instructing the investigation under By-Law 11.
10. If a complaint is received about the Chief Executive Officer, the Treasurer will refer the complaint to an outside investigator for review, assessment, and or investigation as required, and provide direction to the Executive Director.
11. If a complaint is received about the Treasurer, the Chair of the Audit and Finance Committee will act as Treasurer, in accordance with the provisions of By-Law 3, for the purpose of this policy, and provide direction to the Executive Director.
12. Notwithstanding the provisions of this policy, if a complaint is received about any of the Executive Director, Professional Regulation, the Chief Executive Officer or the Treasurer, the complaint shall not be investigated by Law Society staff and shall be referred to an outside investigator for review, assessment and /or investigation as required.

Re: Reporting Criminal or Illegal Activity to Law Enforcement and Other Regulators

Mr. Mercer presented the report on Reporting Criminal or Illegal Activity to Law Enforcement and other Regulators, for information.

For Information

- Reporting to Law Enforcement and other Regulators
- Licensee Survey

TAB 3.3

FOR INFORMATION

REPORTING CRIMINAL OR ILLEGAL ACTIVITY TO LAW ENFORCEMENT AND OTHER REGULATORS

30. The Committee has reviewed and approved a document that describes current practice at the Law Society for reporting to law enforcement and other regulators, set out at Tab 3.3.1.

Background

31. As a regulator acting in the public interest, the Law Society reports criminal or other wrongful activity to the appropriate authority. There are constraints on such reports based on confidentiality provisions in the Law Society Act and the solicitor client privileged nature of some of the information obtained during investigations.
32. The Law Society occasionally obtains information about possible criminal and other illegal activity during the course of its investigations. While the Law Society will work with law enforcement and other regulatory bodies with the consent of the complainants, this information is strictly confidential unless and until discipline proceedings are commenced.
33. The Paralegal Standing Committee reviewed this statement at its October 2014 meeting.
34. Information sharing is included in the Federation of Law Societies' National Discipline Standards, which were approved by Convocation in February 2014 as aspirational principles. The relevant standards for all Canadian law societies are as follows:
- a. There is an ability to share information about a lawyer who is a member of another law society with that other law society when an investigation is underway in a manner that protects solicitor-client privilege, or there is an obligation on the lawyer to disclose to all law societies of which he/she is a member that there is an investigation underway.
  - b. There is an ability to report to police about criminal activity in a manner that protects solicitor/client privilege.

Information Disclosure

35. The Law Society is restricted by common law as well as the Law Society Act in what can be disclosed about an investigation. The relevant portions of the Law Society Act (sections 49.3 – 49.13) may be accessed at the referenced link.<sup>1</sup>
36. The legislation is structured so as to protect the privilege of clients while at the same time permitting the Society to obtain information necessary to permit regulation in the public interest.

Disclosure prior to the initiation of public proceedings

37. Section 49.12 (1) of the Act imposes a strict confidentiality requirement on any information obtained as a result of a Law Society audit, investigation, review, search, seizure or discipline proceeding. The confidentiality provisions are intended to balance the Law Society's broad authority under its investigative powers to obtain information from lawyers and paralegals, including solicitor-client privileged information.
38. Privileged information obtained in the course of an investigation is protected under section 49.8 which provides that privilege is not waived or negated by disclosure to the Law Society and is protected during discipline proceedings.
39. Section 49.12(2) provides exceptions to the general confidentiality requirement.
40. Disclosure of information about investigations can only take place under the exceptions set out in section 49.12(2) or by order of the court under section 49.13.

Disclosure of information after the initiation of public proceedings

41. Disclosure of information required for a discipline proceeding is permitted under section 49.12(2)(b).

Tab 3.3.1*REPORTING CRIMINAL OR ILLEGAL ACTIVITY TO LAW ENFORCEMENT AND OTHER REGULATORS

As part of our mandate to protect the public interest, the Law Society reports to law enforcement about criminal or illegal activity. This document describes the Law Society's process for reporting to law enforcement.

In this document, "law enforcement" refers to police and other regulatory bodies, including another Canadian law society.

1. The Law Society will report to law enforcement where there are reasonable grounds to believe that a licensee or any other person has been involved in criminal or illegal activity.
2. In addition to reports by the Law Society, the Law Society encourages complainants and witnesses to report directly to law enforcement and supports their efforts in doing so.
3. A report is not required if law enforcement is already aware of the alleged illegal activity.
4. The report cannot include information that is subject to the confidentiality provisions of section 49.12 of the Law Society Act. As a general rule the report will include a summary of the relevant allegations based on information received with the initial complaint. Consent of the complainant and/or client will ordinarily be obtained before the report is made.
5. The Law Society will disclose additional information under section 49.12(2)(f) of the Act if there are reasonable grounds to believe that there is a significant risk of harm and that making the disclosure or report will reduce the risk.
6. The harm to be prevented by disclosure under section 49.12(2)(f) of the Act may include physical, psychological or economic harm to a person.
7. On release of decisions of the Law Society Tribunal, any matter that raises issues of criminal or illegal activity will be reported to law enforcement.

FOR INFORMATION

SURVEY OF LICENSEES IN THE COMPLAINTS PROCESS

42. The Professional Regulation Division of the Law Society of Upper Canada launched a survey of licensees regarding the complaints process on October 10, 2014. A copy of the survey is provided for Convocation's information at Tab 3.4.1.
43. The purpose of the survey is to obtain capturing qualitative information regarding the professional regulation process.
44. Randomly-selected licensees will receive by email the link to the survey in Survey Monkey. This email and the survey will be available in both official languages.
45. The survey will run for nine months. The Professional Regulation Division intends to send out 800 surveys during this time.

LEGAL AID ONTARIO FUNDING ANNOUNCEMENT

Ms. McGrath briefed Convocation on the announcement made by the Attorney General of Ontario this morning on details of Legal Aid Ontario funding approved in the last provincial budget.

PRIORITY PLANNING COMMITTEE REPORT

Ms. McGrath presented the Report.

Re: Approval of Amendment to LAWPRO By-Laws

It was moved by Ms. McGrath, seconded by Mr. Silverstein, that Convocation authorize the Treasurer to sign LAWPRO's shareholder's resolution to approve By-Law #21, reproduced at Tab 4.2 of the report, which will have the effect of making the Law Society the sole shareholder of LAWPRO.

FOR DECISION

APPROVAL OF AMENDMENT TO LAWPRO BY-LAWS

Motion

1. That Convocation instruct the Treasurer to sign the LawPRO's shareholder's resolution to approve By-Law# 21, reproduced at Tab 4.2, which will have the effect of making the Law Society the sole shareholder of LawPRO.

Key Issues, Research, Analysis and Implementation Issues

2. Based on research undertaken by LawPRO management, the LawPRO Board approved By-Law #21 which implements revisions to By-Law #1 to remove all references to directors owning shares. Under By-Law #1, the qualification of a director included holding at the time of his or her election or appointment, and throughout his or her term of office, shares of the capital stock of the company.<sup>1</sup>
3. The LawPRO Board agreed that it is no longer necessary for directors to hold shares in the company. Managing these shareholdings created unnecessary work as shares were constantly being transferred on each change of board member.
4. This matter was referred to the Committee's Governance Issues Working Group, which recommended that the Law Society approve the change to LawPRO's By-Laws. The Committee agreed.
5. Attached as Tab 4.1 is the text of By-law #21 as approved by the LAWPRO Board at its meeting on September 3, 2014, implementing the necessary revisions to By-law #1.
6. Implementing this change requires Convocation instructing the Treasurer to sign the resolution attached at Tab 4.2, approving By-law #21. Once all current shareholders, including the Law Society, sign the approval document, LawPRO will implement the transfer of all director shares back to Treasury effective January 1, 2015, at which time the Law Society will be the sole shareholder of LawPRO.

5. Qualification. The qualification of a director shall be the holding at the time of his or her election or appointment, and throughout his or her term of office, in his or her own name and for his or her own use and absolutely in his or her own right shares of the capital stock of the Company upon which at least $500 has been paid in and upon which all calls and instalments due have been paid in cash, and no person is eligible to become or shall be elected or appointed a director unless all liabilities incurred by him or her to the Company are paid in full in cash. Each director shall be at least 18 or more years of age.

8. Vacation of office. The office of any director shall ipso facto be vacated (a) if he or she becomes bankrupt or suspends payment or compounds with his or her creditors or makes an authorized assignment or is declared insolvent; (b) if he or she is found to be a mentally incompetent person or becomes of unsound mind; (c) if he or she ceases to hold the number of shares necessary to qualify him or her for his or her office of director; or (d) if by notice in writing to the Company he or she resigns his or her office of director.

  5. Qualification. Each director shall be at least 18 or more years of age.
2. Section 8 of By-Law No. 1 of the Company is hereby deleted in its entirety and replaced with the following:

WHEREAS pursuant to subsection 68(1)(c) of the Ontario Corporations Act, R.S.O., 1990, c.C.38 ("Corporations Act"), the directors of Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company (the "Company") may pass by-laws that regulate the qualifications of the directors of the Company;

AND WHEREAS pursuant to subsection 68(2) of the Corporations Act a by-law passed under subsection 68(1) of the Corporations Act is effective only until the next annual meeting of the shareholders, when it may be confirmed, unless in the meantime it has been confirmed at a general meeting of the shareholders duly called for the purpose;

AND WHEREAS pursuant to subsection 298(2) of the Corporations Act any resolution signed by all the shareholders of the Company is valid and effective as if passed at a meeting of the shareholders duly called, constituted and held for that purpose;

AND WHEREAS the directors of the Company passed By-Law No. 21 (attached hereto as Exhibit "A") respecting the qualification of directors owning shares of the Company with effect on January 1, 2015, which By-Law all of the shareholders of the Company wish to confirm;

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED THAT:

The shareholders of Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company hereby approve, sanction and confirm By-Law No. 21, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit "A" effective January 1, 2015.

The undersigned, being all the shareholders of the Company, hereby sign the foregoing resolution. This resolution may be signed in counterpart.

TAB 5.1

FOR DECISION

PROPOSED APPEAL RULE 17 (SUMMARY ORDERS)*MOTION

2. That Convocation approve proposed new English and French Rule 17 and Form 17A of the Appeal Division Rules of Practice and Procedure as set out in the Motion at TAB 5.1.1: Motion Respecting Appeal Rule 17 and Form 17A.

SUMMARY*Issue for Consideration

3. An Appeal Rule and Form is proposed that would govern appeals from summary orders made pursuant to sections 46 (suspension for failure to pay a fee or levy), 47 (failure to complete or file required documents, reports or certificates with the Society or with an insurer), 47.1 (failure to comply with requirements of by-laws respecting indemnity for professional liability), 48 (revocation of license if orders under 46, 47(1)(a) or 47.1 are still in effect more than 12 months after made) and 49 (suspension for failure to comply with CPD requirements) of the Law Society Act.

Rationale

4. In the pre-2009 Rules of Practice and Procedure that governed both the Hearing and Appeal Panels there was a Rule governing appeals from summary orders. The provisions respecting summary order appeals were inadvertently omitted from both the 2012 and the recently approved 2014 Appeal Rules.
5. The reason for proposing Rule 17 is both to correct the inadvertent omission and to develop a process that is manageable and effective.
6. Summary orders are made by a summary disposition benchler. The process for appeal from these orders is different from the usual appeals, given that the original decision is made on the basis of documentation rather than after an oral hearing and there are no reasons for decision. The appeal is heard by three panelists. Typically the issues are evidentiary ones about how and when notice was given, the communications with the Law Society, etc.
7. The proposed Rule establishes a unique appeal procedure. The matter proceeds by way of affidavit material. The respondent (the Law Society) files its material first, with the appellant (the licensee) responding. The process is designed to allow for an oral hearing with evidence, but avoid unnecessary complexity and be cost effective. Given that the Law Society is in the best position to set out the basis for the original determination and provide the documentation, the proposed process under the Rule with the Law Society filling first, is sensible.

8. Approving this Appeal Rule and Forms will enhance the Tribunal process and address a gap in the current rules.

KEY ISSUES AND CONSIDERATIONS

9. The proposal is in keeping with Convocation's approval of an enhanced adjudicative model that fosters effective, fair and transparent adjudication.
10. There are no legislative implications in approving a new Rule, which would be approved in French and English.
11. Implementation will likely have an overall positive effect on the Tribunal's operation, particularly if use of the Rule succeeds in narrowing issues or enhancing processes.
12. Law Society Divisions that would be involved with the implementation of the Rule are aware of and in agreement with it.

THE LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA

LAW SOCIETY TRIBUNAL
RULES OF PRACTICE AND PROCEDUREMOTION TO BE MOVED AT THE MEETING OF CONVOCATION ON OCTOBER 30, 2014

MOVED BY

SECONDED BY

THAT the Rules of Practice and Procedure (“the Rules”) applicable to proceedings before the Appeal Division, made by Convocation on March 12, 2014 be amended as follows:

1. The English version of the Rules be amended and the following added:

RULE 17*SUMMARY ORDER APPEALS*Summary order appeals

17.1 (1) Rule 17 applies to appeals from orders under sections 46, 47, 47.1, 48, or 49 of the Act (“summary order appeals”).

(2) Rules 1, 10, 12, 13 and 15 apply with necessary modifications to summary order appeals. Rules 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 14 and 16 do not apply to summary order appeals.

Commencement of summary order appeal

17.2 (1) An appellant shall commence a summary order appeal by serving on the Society and filing with the Tribunal a notice of summary order appeal (Form 17A).

(2) The notice of summary order appeal shall be served on the Society by personal service or an alternative to personal service.

Time for commencement of summary order appeal

(3) The notice of summary order appeal shall be served on the Society and filed with the Tribunal within 30 days of the date the summary order is deemed to have been received by the appellant.

Extension of time for commencing summary order appeal

(4) A summary order appeal may be commenced beyond this time limit with consent of the Society or leave of the Tribunal. Leave may be sought by filing a motion in accordance with these Rules.

Summary order appeals on consent

17.3 Where a summary order appeal is on consent, the appeal may be heard in writing. The written consent of the parties and a draft order shall be filed with the Tribunal at the time the notice of summary order appeal is filed or as soon thereafter as possible. Despite rule 17.4, where a summary order appeal is on consent no other material need be filed by the parties.

Filing of Affidavits and Hearing

17.4 (1) The Society shall file an affidavit or affidavits that set out the factual basis for making the summary order no later than 30 days after the filing of the Notice of Summary Order Appeal.

(2) The appellant shall file an affidavit or affidavits that set out the factual basis for the appeal no later than 45 days after the filing of the Notice of Summary Order Appeal.

(3) Cross-examination on the affidavits and any reply evidence will be heard orally at the appeal hearing, unless otherwise ordered.

(4) No facts need be filed prior to the hearing, unless otherwise ordered.

Pre-hearing conference

17.5 The Tribunal Office shall schedule a pre-hearing conference in every summary order appeal after filing of the affidavits. Rule 22 of the hearing panel rules applies to the pre-hearing conference, with necessary modifications.

2. The French version of the Rules be amended and the following added:

RÈGLE 17

APPELS DES ORDONNANCES SOMMAIRES

Appels des ordonnances sommaires

17.1 (1) La Règle 17 s'applique aux appels des ordonnances en vertu des articles 46, 47, 47.1, 48 ou 49 de la Loi (« appels des ordonnances sommaires »).

(2) Les règles 1, 10, 12, 13 et 15 s'appliquent avec les adaptations nécessaires aux appels des ordonnances sommaires. Les règles 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 14 et 16 ne s'appliquent pas aux appels des ordonnances sommaires.

Introduction d'un appel d'ordonnance sommaire

17.2 (1) L'appelant introduit un appel d'ordonnance sommaire en signifiant au Barreau et en déposant auprès du Tribunal un avis d'appel d'ordonnance sommaire (formulaire 17A).

(2) L'avis d'appel d'ordonnance sommaire est signifié au Barreau à personne ou par un autre mode de signification directe.

Délai d'introduction d'un appel d'ordonnance sommaire

(3) L'avis d'appel d'ordonnance sommaire est signifié au Barreau et déposé auprès du Tribunal dans les 30 jours suivant la date à laquelle l'ordonnance sommaire est réputée avoir été reçue par l'appelant.

Prorogation du délai d'introduction d'un appel d'ordonnance sommaire

(4) Un appel d'ordonnance sommaire peut être introduit après ce délai avec le consentement du Barreau ou l'autorisation du Tribunal. L'autorisation peut être demandée en déposant une motion conformément aux présentes règles.

Appels d'ordonnances sommaires sur consentement

17.3 L'appel d'ordonnance sommaire qui est sur consentement peut être entendu sur pièce. Le consentement écrit des parties et un projet d'ordonnance sont déposés auprès du Tribunal au moment du dépôt de l'avis d'appel d'ordonnance sommaire ou le plus tôt possible par la suite. Malgré la Règle 17.4, si un appel d'ordonnance sommaire est sur consentement, les parties ne doivent déposer aucun autre document.

Dépôt d'affidavits et audience

17.4 (1) Le Barreau dépose un affidavit ou des affidavits qui énoncent le fondement factuel qui a servi de base à l'ordonnance sommaire au plus tard 30 jours après le dépôt de l'avis de l'appel d'ordonnance sommaire.

(2) L'appelant dépose un affidavit ou des affidavits qui énoncent le fondement factuel qui a servi de base à l'appel au plus tard 45 jours après le dépôt de l'avis d'appel d'ordonnance sommaire.

(3) Les contre-interrogatoires des déposants des affidavits et toute contre-preuve seront entendus oralement lors de l'audience de l'appel, à moins d'une ordonnance à l'effet contraire.

(4) Aucun mémoire ne doit être déposé avant l'audience, à moins d'une ordonnance à l'effet contraire.

Conférence préparatoire à l'audience

17.5 Le bureau du Tribunal fixe une conférence préparatoire à l'audience pour chaque appel d'ordonnance sommaire après le dépôt des affidavits. La Règle 22 des règles de la Section de première instance s'applique à la conférence préparatoire à l'audience, avec les adaptations nécessaires.

Re: Amendment to Subrule 29.07(1) of the Hearing Division Rules of Practice and Procedure

It was moved by Mr. Anand, seconded by Ms. Leiper, that Convocation approve the amendment to English subrule 29.07(1) of the Law Society Tribunal Hearing Division Rules of Practice and Procedure set out at Tab 5.2.1 of the Report.

Carried

TAB 5.2

FOR DECISION

AMENDMENT TO SUBRULE 29.07(1) OF THE HEARING DIVISION RULES OF PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE

MOTION

13. That Convocation approve the amendment to English subrule 29.07(1) of the Hearing Division Rules of Practice and Procedure set out at TAB 5.2.1: Motion Amending Subrule 29.07(1) HD Rules.

SUMMARY

Issue for Consideration

14. Due to an oversight, a word was omitted from the English version of subrule 29.07(1) of the Hearing Division Rules, approved in March 2014.

Rationale

15. The amendment must be made to correct an inadvertent error in the English Rule that affects its meaning.

KEY ISSUES AND CONSIDERATIONS

16. New Hearing Division Rules were approved by Convocation in March 2014. New subrule 29.07(1) (English) should have read as follows:

29.07 (1) Where a consent resolution conference results in the settlement of the decision and order to be made in the conduct proceeding or the settlement of the decision to be [made] and a range of orders that may be made in the conduct proceeding the Society shall...

17. Instead the word [made] in bolded square brackets was omitted. The proposed amendment corrects the inadvertent omission.

Motion

20. That Convocation approve the letters and public statements in the following cases:
- a. Lawyer Yara Sallam – Egypt – letters of intervention and public statement presented at TAB 6.2.1.
  - b. Lawyer N. Surendran – Malaysia – letters of intervention and public statement presented at TAB 6.2.2.
  - c. Lawyer Gustaf Kawer – Indonesia – letters of intervention and public statement presented at TAB 6.2.3.

Rationale

21. The request for interventions falls within the mandate of the Human Rights Monitoring Group (the “Monitoring Group”) to,
- a. review information that comes to its attention about human rights violations that target members of the profession and the judiciary, here and abroad, as a result of the discharge of their legitimate professional duties;
  - b. determine if the matter is one that requires a response from the Law Society; and,
  - c. prepare a response for review and approval by Convocation.

Key Issues and Considerations

22. The Monitoring Group considered the following factors when making a decision about the case of the arrest and detention of human rights lawyer Yara Sallam:
- a. there are no concerns about the quality of sources used for this report;
  - b. the Law Society of Upper Canada recently condemned the detention and sentencing of lawyer Mahienour El-Massry in Egypt, who has now been provisionally released pending appeal;
  - c. in 2008, the Law Society condemned a prohibition of travel imposed on both Hisham Bastawissi, vice-president of the Egyptian Court of Cassation, and Ashraf El-Baroudi, judge at the Alexandria Court of Appeal;
  - d. the arrest and continued detention of Yara Sallam falls within the mandate of the Monitoring Group.
23. The Monitoring Group considered the following factors when making a decision about the case of the arrest, and sedition charges against human rights lawyer N. Surendran:
- a. there are no concerns about the quality of sources used for this report;

- b. in 2010, the Law Society of Upper Canada called on the Malaysian government to protect lawyers and judges, reacting to reports of intimidation and harassment of the Malaysian judiciary due to a High Court decision overturning a government ban on the use of the word 'Allah';
  - c. the arrest and charges against N. Surendran fall within the mandate of the Monitoring Group.
24. The Monitoring Group considered the following factors when making a decision about the case of the investigation and intimidation of human rights lawyer Gustaf Kaver:
- a. there are no concerns about the quality of sources used for this report;
  - b. the Law Society of Upper Canada has not intervened in respect of human rights issues in Indonesia in the past;
  - c. the unlawful investigation and intimidation of Gustaf Kaver fall within the mandate of the Monitoring Group.

KEY BACKGROUND

EGYPT – THE ARREST AND DETENTION OF HUMAN RIGHTS LAWYER YARA SALLAM

Sources of Information

25. The background information for this report was taken from the following sources:
- a. Amnesty International;<sup>1</sup>
  - b. International Federation for Human Rights (FIDH);<sup>2</sup>
  - c. The Huffington Post;<sup>3</sup> and,
  - d. The Washington Post.<sup>4</sup>

1 Amnesty International is a non-governmental organization focused on human rights with over 3 million members and supporters around the world. It seeks to uncover the truths about human rights abuses, and mobilizes individuals to take action so that human rights abuses are stopped, individuals and communities are protected, and perpetrators of human rights violations are brought to justice. It is an independent and democratically-run organization. The movement's mission and policies, and its long-term directions, are all set by Amnesty members. Amnesty International's work is always being assessed by its members and staff in the light of changing world circumstances. When major changes in policy and approach are needed, Amnesty members make the final decision.

2 FIDH is an international non-partisan, non-religious, and apolitical non-profit organization based in France, where it has public interest status. It is composed of 178 member organizations from across the globe. FIDH defends the civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights guaranteed by the United Nations' Universal Declaration of Human Rights. It acts in both legal and political fields encouraging and advocating for the creation and reinforcement of international instruments for the protection of human rights and for their implementation.

3 The Huffington Post is an international online news publication, founded in 2005. In 2012, The Huffington Post became the first commercially run U.S. digital media organization to be awarded a Pulitzer Prize.

4 The Washington Post, founded in 1877, is an internationally respected news source based in Washington D.C. The Washington Post has won 47 Pulitzer Prizes, including six separate Pulitzer Prizes in 2008 alone.

Background

26. The following information has been reported about Yara Sallam.
27. Yara Sallam is a prominent human rights lawyer in Egypt and the head of the Egyptian Initiative for Personal Rights, a human rights organization that strengthens and protects basic rights and freedoms in Egypt through research, advocacy and litigation support.<sup>5</sup> In 2013, Yara Sallam received the North African Shield human rights defender award for her work in Egypt with another leading NGO.<sup>6</sup>
28. Reports indicate that on 21 June 2014, police in Cairo dispersed, by means of tear gas, a peaceful protest demanding the repeal of Law 107 of 2013, which concerns demonstrations and public rallies (the “Anti-Protest Law”).<sup>7</sup> Although Yara Sallam was reportedly not participating in the protest, she was in the vicinity, and was arrested along with over twenty activists.<sup>8</sup>
29. Several days after Yara Sallam’s arrest, she appeared in court, during which time the judge adjourned the misdemeanor trial until September 13, 2014.<sup>9</sup> Legal experts expected that Yara Sallam and the other detainees would be released on bail; the judge, however, did not grant their release.<sup>10</sup>
30. The charges consist of “taking part in an unauthorised demonstration that endangered public order and security; vandalising property; making a show of force in order to terrify and threaten the lives of passers-by; and participating in a gathering of over five people in order to disturb the public order and commit crimes.”<sup>11</sup>
31. Yara Sallam was eventually moved to Qanater Prison, which has been criticized by human rights groups for violence and abuse towards female prisoners.<sup>12</sup> There is concern for her physical and psychological wellbeing.

32. On September 13, 2014, the trial was postponed to October 11, 2014 at a private hearing held in deliberation chambers.<sup>13</sup> Yara Sallam and the other defendants were not permitted to attend,<sup>14</sup> despite requests for their release. Yara Sallam's case has been adjourned again to October 26, 2014 and Yara Sallam remains in custody.<sup>15</sup>
33. The Monitoring Group is concerned about reports that indicate a lack of evidence and inconsistencies in police reports relating to the charges filed against Yara Sallam.<sup>16</sup> There is also concern that judicial authorities have been mishandling the case by drawing out the unwarranted detention of those involved, and conducting private hearings, infringing upon their right to a fair trial.<sup>17</sup>
34. The Monitoring Group is also concerned about the Anti-Protest Law under which Yara Sallam and the others have been charged. Since the law was given effect in November 2013, thousands of people have suffered from arrest and detention.<sup>18</sup> Both the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights and the UN Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and association have condemned the law.<sup>19</sup>
35. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights prohibits arbitrary arrests and detentions under Article 9, and ensures the right of everyone to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal under Article 10.<sup>20</sup>
36. In addition, Articles 1, 5 and 6 of the Declaration on human rights defenders<sup>21</sup> grant individuals and groups the right of peaceful assembly to promote the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms.
37. Yara Sallam's ongoing arbitrary detention also contravenes Principles 16 and 23 of the United Nations Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers.<sup>22</sup> Yara Sallam's unlawful detention prohibits her from meaningful human rights work, in violation of Principle 16:

Governments shall ensure that lawyers (a) are able to perform all of their professional functions without intimidation, hindrance, harassment or improper interference; (b) are able to travel and to consult with their clients freely both

38. FIDH and Amnesty International believe that Egyptian authorities continue to detain Yara Sallam and the other human rights defenders to prevent them from carrying out their peaceful human rights activities. These groups are calling for the immediate release of Yara Sallam and her co-defendants.<sup>23</sup>

Background

40. The following information has been reported about N. Surendran. N. Surendran is a Malaysian lawyer and a representative for the Padang Serai riding in the People's Justice Party, which is a member of the three-party opposition in the Malaysian Parliament.<sup>29</sup> He is also the lawyer for the official leader of the opposition, Anwar Ibrahim.<sup>30</sup>
41. N. Surendran is currently defending Mr. Ibrahim against charges of sodomy.<sup>31</sup> Even if consensual, sodomy is a crime in Malaysia and a conviction is punishable by up to twenty years in prison.<sup>32</sup> Mr. Ibrahim was imprisoned from 1999 to 2004 on sodomy and corruption charges, which allegations he maintains were untrue and politically motivated.<sup>33</sup>
42. Although Mr. Ibrahim was originally acquitted of the current charges, the ruling was overturned by an appellate court in March 2014, resulting in his conviction and a sentence of five years in prison.<sup>34</sup>
43. The March 2014 conviction was subsequently appealed and Mr. Ibrahim is out on bail awaiting another trial on October 28, 2014.<sup>35</sup> However, that conviction prohibited Mr. Ibrahim from running in his local election.<sup>36</sup>
44. As a result of these events, N. Surendran made multiple statements relating to the case, alleging that the overturning of Mr. Ibrahim's acquittal and his consequent conviction by the appellate court was part of a political conspiracy.<sup>37</sup> N. Surendran asserted that "the appellate court had given insufficient consideration to defense claims that the sodomy charges stemmed from a plot by Prime Minister Najib Razak's governing coalition to sideline Mr. Anwar [politically]" .<sup>38</sup>

45. In response N. Surendran's statements, authorities charged him with multiple counts of sedition under Malaysia's Sedition Act.<sup>39</sup> The Sedition Act criminalizes acts or statements that bring hatred or contempt upon, or "excite disaffection against the administration of justice in Malaysia."<sup>40</sup> If N. Surendran is found guilty, he faces a fine and/or imprisonment up to three years for a first offence.<sup>41</sup>
46. According to reports, Barisan Nasional, the ruling party in the Malaysian government since 1957, has a history of using the sedition law regularly against its critics.<sup>42</sup>
47. Reports indicate that the allegedly seditious comments made by N. Surendran were in fact the crux of Mr. Ibrahim's legal defence at the court of appeal.<sup>43</sup>
48. The Monitoring Group is concerned that the sedition charges against N. Surendran, as Mr. Ibrahim's lawyer, will compromise Mr. Ibrahim's right to a fair appeal<sup>44</sup> violating his Article 10 right under the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.<sup>45</sup>
49. Moreover, it is likely that the charges against N. Surendran contravene Principles 16 and 23 of the United Nations' Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers, reproduced above.<sup>46</sup>
50. N. Surendran has the right to express freely his thoughts and concerns as a lawyer, and as a member of the political opposition, without fear of unlawful prosecution. Lawyers for Lawyers and Lawyers Rights Watch Canada are calling upon the Malaysian Attorney-General to urgently review, and drop the charges against N. Surendran.

Background

- 52. The following information has been reported about Gustaf Kawer.
- 53. Gustaf Kawer is a prominent human rights lawyer in the Indonesian province of Papua. He began working for the Papuan Legal Aid Foundation in 2000, and has worked on many cases dealing with workers’ rights, land ownership and socio-political rights.<sup>51</sup>
- 54. In 2013, he defended five accused individuals in a high-profile treason trial involving the issue of freedom to express political opinion, during which he was threatened with prosecution.<sup>52</sup>
- 55. It should be noted that Gustaf Kawer and his colleague were third on the Jury’s shortlist for the Lawyers for Lawyers Award in 2013.<sup>53</sup>
- 56. Reports indicate that Gustaf Kawer was representing a client in a land dispute against the government and had applied to the court to postpone a hearing scheduled for June 12,

47 The CCBE, founded in 1960, represents the bars and law societies of 32 European member States and 13 additional associate and observer countries. It acts as the liaison between the European Union and Europe’s national bars, and law societies, representing more than 1 million European lawyers. The CCBE has been at the forefront of advancing the views of European lawyers and defending the legal principles upon which democracy and the rule of law are based.

48 Front Line Defenders is an international charitable organization, founded in Dublin in 2001, with the aim of protecting human rights defenders. The group promotes respect for the UN Declaration on human rights defenders and maintains a special consultative status with the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations. Front Line Defenders also maintains partnership status with the Council of Europe and observer status with the African Commission on Human and Peoples’ Rights.

49 L4L is an independent and non-political Dutch foundation seeking to promote the proper functioning of the rule of law. L4L provides financial, moral and/or legal support to oppressed lawyers and lawyers’ organizations. The organization maintains contact and co-operates with the United Nations, the European Union, governments, embassies, universities, human rights organizations, as well as individual lawyers worldwide. L4L was granted Special Consultative status with the UN Economic and Social Council in July 2013.

50 TAPOL was established in 1973 in the UK by Carmel Budiardjo, a former political prisoner in Indonesia. Ms Budiardjo founded TAPOL (which means ‘political prisoner’ in Indonesian) to campaign for release of the tens of thousands of political prisoners that remained in Indonesia following the massacres of 1965. TAPOL continues to advocate for the victims of one of the twentieth century’s worst massacres, but its campaign has broadened. TAPOL also promotes democracy in Indonesia by monitoring major national elections and supporting local campaigns for the right to free expression and the release of political prisoners. The group also supports local peace-building initiatives through diplomacy at the international level.

- 2014.<sup>54</sup> The court denied Gustaf Kawer's request for a postponement, following which he protested on the basis of partiality, since the judge had previously granted three postponements requested by the government.<sup>55</sup> The court asked Gustaf Kawer to leave the courtroom if he disagreed, which he did.<sup>56</sup> The court reportedly proceeded in the absence of Gustaf Kawer and his client.<sup>57</sup>
57. On August 22, 2014 Gustaf Kawer received a witness summons relating to a case of coercion and rebelliousness under Articles 211 and 212 of the Indonesian Penal Code; the summons contained no information about the suspect.<sup>58</sup>
58. Gustaf Kawer learned several days later that he was the suspect of the investigation. This was confirmed through communications with the officer in charge, as well as second summons, sent to the Indonesian Bar Association (PERADI), dated August 25, 2014.<sup>59</sup> The summons demanded Gustaf Kawer's presence for an interrogation at Papua Regional Police headquarters on September 1, 2014.<sup>60</sup>
59. On August 27, 2014, the Chairperson of PERADI communicated to authorities that, in accordance with protocol, Gustaf Kawer would not appear until PERADI carried out its own investigation of the case.<sup>61</sup> A summons related to the work of a lawyer must be directed to PERADI. The results of PERADI's investigation would be communicated to the authorities.<sup>62</sup>
60. On September 17, 2014, a police person attempted to serve a third summons upon Gustaf Kawer, even though PERADI had not contacted authorities with results of their investigation into his case.<sup>63</sup> The officer who attempted to serve the third summons tried to do so upon Gustaf Kawer's wife. Gustaf Kawer was not present at his address at that time.<sup>64</sup>
61. Gustaf Kawer reportedly left his home for an undetermined period of time due to the fear of possible arrest.<sup>65</sup> If Gustaf Kawer is prosecuted and found guilty, he could face up to four years in prison.<sup>66</sup>

62. The Monitoring Group is concerned that Papua Regional Police are failing to adhere to established Indonesian law in respect to investigating the conduct of advocates, and that the charges under which Gustaf Kawer is being investigated are unsubstantiated.
63. TAPOL indicates that “Indonesian Law on Advocates No. 18 / 2003 establishes that a legal advocate shall not be subject to criminal or civil action in relation to the performance in good faith of his or her professional duties in defending a client in court.”<sup>67</sup> TAPOL adds that “[t]his provision was recently reaffirmed by the Constitutional Court in its judgement No. 26/PUU-XI/2013.”<sup>68</sup>
64. TAPOL also highlights Article 12(2) of the UN Declaration on human rights defenders which calls for states to “take all necessary measures to ensure the protection by the competent authorities of everyone, individually and in association with others, against any violence, threats, retaliation, de facto or de jure adverse discrimination, pressure or any other arbitrary action as a consequence of his or her legitimate exercise of the rights referred to in the present Declaration”.<sup>69</sup>
65. The CCBE notes that the conduct of Indonesian authorities violates Principles 16 (reproduced above), 20 and 28 of the UN Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers.<sup>70</sup>
66. Principle 20 states:
- Lawyers shall enjoy civil and penal immunity for relevant statements made in good faith or oral pleadings or in their professional appearances before a court, tribunal or other legal or administrative authority.
- Principle 28 states:
- Disciplinary proceedings against lawyers shall be brought before an impartial disciplinary committee established by the legal profession, before an independent statutory authority, or before a court, and shall be subject to an independent judicial review.
67. TAPOL, Front Line Defenders, Lawyers for Lawyers, as well as the CCBE are calling on Indonesian authorities to cease immediately the police investigations into Gustaf Kawer's conduct, and to take the necessary measures to ensure his physical and psychological well-being.

FOR INFORMATION

UPDATE ON COMMUNICATIONS FROM INTERESTED ORGANIZATIONS REGARDING PAST CASES

Update – Case of Pu Zhiqiang, China

68. The Monitoring Group received a letter from Andrew Caplen, President of The Law Society of England and Wales, dated September 24, 2014. Mr. Caplen's letter confirmed his receipt of the Law Society's letter of September 11, regarding Pu Zhiqiang's detention in China. Mr. Caplen indicates that their organization was unaware of new information or developments in respect of the Pu Zhiqiang case and welcomed the communication of relevant information received by the Law Society.
69. Mr. Caplen also expressed enthusiasm for future exchange of information with the Law Society of Upper Canada concerning lawyers at risk.
70. The Law Society also received a letter dated October 6, 2014 from Front Line Defenders indicating that they intervened in the cases of Chinese human rights lawyers Mr. Pu Zhiqiang and Tang Jingling. Front Line Defenders issued an Urgent Appeal related to the case of Pu Zhiqiang and other human rights defenders on May 6, 2014 following their detention in connection with their participation in a commemoration of the crackdown on the Tiananmen Square protests in 1989. On June 16, 2014 Front Line Defenders published an update following the arrest and formal pressing of charges against Pu Zhiqiang. Both documents can be found online at <http://www.frontlinedefenders.org/node/25850> (Urgent Appeal) and <http://www.frontlinedefenders.org/node/26215> (Update).

Update – Case of Mahienour El-Massry, Egypt

73. Reports indicate that on September 21, 2014, the Egyptian Court of Appeal in Alexandria accepted prominent human rights lawyer Mahienour El-Massry's appeal of her prison sentence, and immediately released her from detention.<sup>71</sup>

74. The Law Society had intervened in this matter in June 2014. Mahienour El-Massry and seven others were originally charged after organizing a protest on December 2, 2013. On May 20, 2014, the Misdemeanour Court in Alexandria rejected the objection filed by Ms. El-Massry, regarding the sentence issued against her in absentia on January 2, 2014. The court convicted her to two years' imprisonment and a fine of EGP 50,000. She was sentenced for "protest without a permit" and "assaulting security forces". Afterwards, Mahienour El-Massry was immediately detained.
75. The Law Society had released a public statement<sup>72</sup>, and sent a letter to the President of the Arab Republic of Egypt Abdel Fattah El-Sisi<sup>73</sup>, expressing its grave concern over the detention and sentencing of Ms. El-Massry. The statement and letter urged the Egyptian government to:
- a. guarantee all the procedural rights that should be accorded to Mahienour El-Massry and other human rights defenders in Egypt;
  - b. guarantee in all circumstances the physical and psychological integrity of Mahienour El-Massry;
  - c. put an end to all acts of harassment against Mahienour El-Massry and other human rights defenders in Egypt;
  - d. ensure that all lawyers can carry out their peaceful and legitimate activities without fear of physical violence or other human rights violations; and
  - e. ensure in all circumstances respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms in accordance with international human rights standards and international instruments.

PROPOSED LETTERS OF INTERVENTION AND PUBLIC STATEMENT*YARA SALLAM

His Excellency Abdel Fattah el-Sisi
President of the Arab Republic of Egypt
Abedine Palace
Cairo, Egypt

Your Excellency:

Re: arrest and continued detention of human rights lawyer Yara Sallam

I write on behalf of The Law Society of Upper Canada* to voice our grave concern over the case of Yara Sallam. When serious issues of apparent injustice to lawyers and the judiciary come to our attention, we speak out.

Yara Sallam is a prominent human rights lawyer in Egypt and the head of the Egyptian Initiative for Personal Rights, a human rights organization that strengthens and protects basic rights and freedoms in Egypt through research, advocacy and litigation support. In 2013, Yara Sallam received the North African Shield Human Rights Defender Award for her work in Egypt.

Reports indicate that on June 21, 2014, police in Cairo dispersed, by means of tear gas, a peaceful protest demanding the repeal of Law 107 of 2013, which concerns demonstrations and public rallies (the "Anti-Protest Law"). It is reported that, although Yara Sallam was not participating in the protest, she was in the vicinity, and was arrested along with over 20 activists.

Several days after Yara Sallam's arrest, she appeared in court. Reports indicate that, at that time, the judge adjourned the misdemeanor trial until September 13, 2014. Legal experts expected that Yara Sallam and the other detainees would be released on bail. The judge, however, did not grant their release, and Yara Sallam was moved to Qanater Prison. The Law Society is concerned for her physical and psychological well-being, since human rights groups have brought attention to problems of violence and abuse towards female prisoners in that detention facility.

On September 13, 2014, the trial was postponed to October 11, 2014 at a private hearing held in deliberation chambers. Yara Sallam and the other defendants were not permitted to attend the hearing, despite requests for their release. The Egyptian misdemeanor court has again adjourned the case to October 26, 2014. Yara Sallam remains in custody.

The Law Society of Upper Canada is alarmed about reports indicating a lack of evidence and inconsistencies in police reports relating to the charges filed against Yara Sallam. There is also concern that judicial authorities have been mishandling the case by drawing out the unwarranted detention of Yara Sallam, and conducting private hearings, infringing upon her right to a fair trial.

The Law Society also expresses deep concerns over the Anti-Protest Law. Since the law was given effect in November 2013, thousands of people have suffered from arrest and detention. Both the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights and the UN Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and association, have condemned the law.

The Law Society of Upper Canada urges your Excellency to consider Articles 16 and 23 of the United Nations' Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers.

Principle 16 states:

Governments shall ensure that lawyers (a) are able to perform all of their professional functions without intimidation, hindrance, harassment or improper interference; (b) are able to travel and to consult with their clients freely both within their own country and abroad; and (c) shall not suffer, or be threatened with, prosecution or administrative, economic or other sanctions for any action taken in accordance with recognized professional duties, standards and ethics.

Principle 23 states:

Lawyers like other citizens are entitled to freedom of expression, belief, association and assembly. In particular, they shall have the rights to take part in public discussion of matters concerning the law, the administration of justice and the promotion and protection of human rights and to join or form local, national or international organisations and attend their meetings, without suffering professional restrictions by reason of their lawful action or their membership in a lawful organisation.

Moreover, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights prohibits arbitrary arrests and detentions under Article 9, and ensures the right of everyone to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal under Article 10. The Law Society would also like to highlight Articles 1, 5 and 6 of the Declaration on human rights defenders. These provisions grant individuals and groups the right of peaceful assembly to promote the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

The Law Society urges the government of the Arab Republic of Egypt to:

- a. release Yara Sallam immediately, as she is a prisoner of conscience;
- b. guarantee in all circumstances the physical and psychological integrity of Yara Sallam;
- c. provide Yara Sallam with regular access to her lawyer and family;
- d. guarantee all the procedural rights that should be accorded to Yara Sallam;
- e. conduct a fair, impartial and independent investigation into any allegations of misconduct in the arrest and trial of Yara Sallam and in order to identify all those responsible, bring them to trial and apply to them civil, penal and/or administrative sanctions provided by law;

- f. guarantee that adequate reparation be provided to Yara Sallam if she is found to be a victim of abuses;
- g. put an end to all acts of harassment against Yara Sallam;
- h. ensure in all circumstances respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms in accordance with international human rights standards and international instruments.

Yours very truly,

Janet E. Minor

PROPOSED LETTERS OF INTERVENTION AND PUBLIC STATEMENT*N. SURENDRAN

The Honourable Dato' Sri Mohammad Najib Tun Razak, Prime Minister
Prime Minister's Office Malaysia
Main Block, Perdana Putra Building
Federal Government Administrative Centre
62502 Putrajaya Selangor
Malaysia

Your Excellency,

Re: Arrest and charges against human rights lawyer N. Surendran

I write on behalf of The Law Society of Upper Canada* to voice our grave concern over the case of N. Surendran. When serious issues of apparent injustice to lawyers and the judiciary come to our attention, we speak out.

N. Surendran is a Malaysian lawyer and a representative for the Padang Serai riding in the People's Justice Party, which is a member of the three-party opposition in the Malaysian Parliament. He is also the lawyer for the official leader of the opposition, Anwar Ibrahim.

N. Surendran is currently defending Mr. Ibrahim against charges of sodomy. Mr. Ibrahim was imprisoned from 1999 to 2004 on sodomy and corruption charges, which allegations he maintains were untrue and were politically motivated.

Although Mr. Ibrahim was originally acquitted of the current charges, the ruling was overturned by an appellate court in March 2014, resulting in his conviction and a sentence of five years in prison. This conviction was subsequently appealed and Mr. Ibrahim is out on bail awaiting another trial in October. The conviction prohibited Mr. Ibrahim from running in his local election.

We understand that N. Surendran made multiple statements relating to the case, alleging that the overturning of Mr. Ibrahim's acquittal and his consequent conviction by the appellate court was part of a political conspiracy. N. Surendran asserted that the appellate court had given insufficient consideration to defense claims that the charges stemmed from a political plot to sideline Mr. Ibrahim politically.

The reports indicated that the local authorities reacted to N. Surendran's statements by charging him with multiple counts of sedition under Malaysia's Sedition Act. According to credible sources, the Malaysian government has used the sedition law regularly against its critics. We understand that if N. Surendran is found guilty, he may face a fine and/or imprisonment for up to three years.

The Law Society expresses concern that the sedition charges against N. Surendran are unjustified because the charges stemmed from arguments presented in N. Surendran's legal defence of Mr. Ibrahim. Moreover, the Law Society anticipates that the prosecution of N. Surendran, as Mr. Ibrahim's lawyer, may compromise Mr. Ibrahim's right to a fair appeal, violating his Article 10 right under the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

The Law Society asks your Excellency to consider Principles 16 and 23 of the United Nations' Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers. Principle 16 states:

Governments shall ensure that lawyers (a) are able to perform all of their professional functions without intimidation, hindrance, harassment or improper interference; (b) are able to travel and to consult with their clients freely both within their own country and abroad; and (c) shall not suffer, or be threatened with, prosecution or administrative, economics or other sanctions for any action taken in accordance with recognized professional duties, standards and ethics.

Principle 23 states:

Lawyers like other citizens are entitled to freedom of expression, belief, association and assembly. In particular, they shall have the rights to take part in public discussion of matters concerning the law, the administration of justice and the promotion and protection of human rights and to join or form local, national or international organisations and attend their meetings, without suffering professional restrictions by reason of their lawful action or their membership in a lawful organisation.

N. Surendran has the right to express freely his thoughts and concerns acting as a lawyer, and as a member of the political opposition in Malaysia, without fear of unlawful prosecution.

The Law Society urges the government of Malaysia to:

- a. drop the charges of sedition against N. Surendran immediately;
- b. guarantee in all circumstances the physical and psychological integrity of N. Surendran;
- c. guarantee all the procedural rights that should be accorded to N. Surendran, and other human rights defenders in Malaysia;
- d. conduct a fair, impartial and independent investigation into any allegations of misconduct or ill-treatment in the arrest and charging of N. Surendran, in order to identify all those responsible, bring them to trial and apply to them civil, penal and/or administrative sanctions provided by law;
- e. guarantee that adequate reparation would be provided to N. Surendran if he is found to be a victim of abuses;
- f. put an end to all acts of harassment against N. Surendran, as well as other human rights defenders in Malaysia;
- g. ensure in all circumstances respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms in accordance with international human rights standards and international instruments.

Dear President Yudhoyono,

Re: investigation and intimidation of human rights lawyer Gustaf Kawer

I write on behalf of The Law Society of Upper Canada* to voice our grave concern over the case of Gustaf Kawer. When serious issues of apparent injustice to lawyers and the judiciary come to our attention, we speak out.

Gustaf Kawer is a prominent human rights lawyer in the Indonesian province of Papua. He has worked on many cases dealing with workers' rights, land ownership, and socio-political rights. For example, in 2013, he defended five persons facing treason charges in a case involving the issue of freedom to express political opinion, during which he was threatened with prosecution.

It should be noted that Gustaf Kawer and his colleague were third on the Jury's shortlist for the international Lawyers for Lawyers Award in 2013.

Reports indicate that Gustaf Kawer was representing a client in a land dispute against the government and had applied to the court to postpone a hearing scheduled for 12 June 2014. The court denied Gustaf Kawer's request for a postponement, following which he protested on the basis of partiality, since the judge had previously granted three postponements requested by the government. The court asked Gustaf Kawer to leave the courtroom if he disagreed, which he did. The court reportedly proceeded in the absence of Gustaf Kawer and his client.

It is reported that on August 22, 2014, Gustaf Kawer received a witness summons relating to a case of coercion and rebelliousness under Articles 211 and 212 of the Indonesian Penal Code. The summons contained no information about the suspect. Several days later, Gustaf Kawer learned that he was the suspect of the investigation. This was confirmed through communications with the officer in charge, as well as a second summons, dated 25 August 2014, sent to the Indonesian Bar Association (PERADI). The summons demanded Gustaf Kawer's presence for an interrogation at Papua Regional Police headquarters on 1 Sept 2014.

On August 27, 2014, the chairperson of PERADI reportedly communicated to authorities that, in accordance with protocol, Gustaf Kawer would not appear until PERADI carried out its own investigation of the case. A summons related to the work of a lawyer must be directed to PERADI. The results of PERADI's investigation would be communicated to the authorities.

On September 17, 2014, a police person attempted to serve a third summons upon Gustaf Kawer, even though PERADI had not contacted authorities with results of their investigation into his case.

The officer who attempted to serve the third summons tried to do so upon Gustaf Kawer's wife. Gustaf Kawer was not present at his address at that time. Reports indicate that he stayed away from home for an undetermined period of time due to the fear of possible arrest. If Gustaf Kawer is prosecuted and found guilty, he could face up to four years in prison.

The Law Society is concerned that Papua Regional Police are failing to adhere to established Indonesian law in respect to investigating the conduct of lawyers, and that the charges under which Gustaf Kawer is being investigated are unsubstantiated.

The Indonesian Law on Advocates No. 18/2003 establishes that a lawyer shall not be subject to criminal or civil action in relation to the performance in good faith of his or her professional duties in defending a client in court. The Law Society understands that this provision was recently reaffirmed by the Constitutional Court of Indonesia in its Judgement No. 26/PUU-XI/2013.

In addition, Article 12(2) of the UN Declaration on human rights defenders calls upon states to “take all necessary measures to ensure the protection by the competent authorities of everyone, individually and in association with others, against any violence, threats, retaliation, de facto or de jure adverse discrimination, pressure or any other arbitrary action as a consequence of his or her legitimate exercise of the rights referred to in the present Declaration.”

The Law Society asks that you also consider Principles 16, 20 and 28 of the United Nations' Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers. Principle 16 states:

Governments shall ensure that lawyers (a) are able to perform all of their professional functions without intimidation, hindrance, harassment or improper interference; (b) are able to travel and to consult with their clients freely both within their own country and abroad; and (c) shall not suffer, or be threatened with, prosecution or administrative, economic or other sanctions for any action taken in accordance with recognized professional duties, standards and ethics.

Principle 20 states:

Lawyers shall enjoy civil and penal immunity for relevant statements made in good faith or oral pleadings or in their professional appearances before a court, tribunal or other legal or administrative authority.

Principle 28 states:

Disciplinary proceedings against lawyers shall be brought before an impartial disciplinary committee established by the legal profession, before an independent statutory authority, or before a court, and shall be subject to an independent judicial review.

The Law Society urges the government of Indonesia to:

- a. cease the unlawful investigation of Gustaf Kawer immediately;
- b. guarantee in all circumstances the physical and psychological integrity of Gustaf Kawer;
- c. guarantee all the procedural rights that should be accorded to Gustaf Kawer, and other human rights defenders in Indonesia;
- d. conduct a fair, impartial and independent investigation into any allegations of misconduct in the investigation of Gustaf Kawer, in order to identify all those responsible, bring them to trial and apply to them civil, penal and/or administrative sanctions provided by law;
- e. guarantee that adequate reparation would be provided to Gustaf Kawer if he is found to be a victim of abuses;
- f. put an end to all acts of harassment against Gustaf Kawer, as well as other human rights defenders in Indonesia;
- g. ensure in all circumstances respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms in accordance with international human rights standards and international instruments.

Yours very truly,

Janet E. Minor

Proposed Public Statement

The Law Society of Upper Canada expresses grave concern about the investigation and intimidation of Gustaf Kawer in Indonesia

The Law Society of Upper Canada is gravely concerned about the investigation and intimidation of lawyer Gustaf Kawer in Indonesia.

Proposed Letter to Associations

Dear [Name],

Re: Investigation and intimidation of human rights lawyer Gustaf Kawer

I write to inform you that on the advice of the Human Rights Monitoring Group*, the Law Society of Upper Canada sent the attached letter to Dr. H. Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono, President of the Republic of Indonesia, expressing our deep concerns about the unlawful investigation and intimidation of Gustaf Kawer.

We would be very interested in hearing from you concerning the situation noted in the attached letter, whether your organization has intervened in this matter and whether we have any of the facts in the case wrong. Any further information you may have about the case would also be welcome.

Please forward any further correspondence to the attention of Josée Bouchard, Director, Equity, The Law Society of Upper Canada, 130 Queen St. West, Toronto, Ontario, Canada, M5H 2N6 or to jbouchar@lsuc.on.ca.

I thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Paul Schabas
Chair, Human Rights Monitoring Group

“In my experience dealing with Aboriginal issues as a lawyer ... and a judge, too often I have seen evidence or examples of mistrust and disrespect between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal Canadians, whether the latter are government or private institutions or individuals. Although the evils of racism and discrimination have diminished over time, much more is needed to foster a relationship of harmony and enlightened co-existence between Aboriginals and non-Aboriginals... Re: Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Request to Consult

It was moved by Ms. Leiper, seconded by Mr. Anand, that Convocation approve the consultation proposed by the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group set out in the Report.

Carried

TAB 6.1

FOR DECISION

CHALLENGES FACED BY RACIALIZED LICENSEES WORKING GROUP CONSULTATION RECOMMENDATION

MOTION

2. That Convocation approve the consultation proposed by the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group outlined in this report.

Rationale

3. From October 2012 to date, the Law Society conducted a formal and informal engagement process and a survey with the profession to identify the challenges faced by racialized licensees. The Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group ("RWG") considered the results of the engagement process and developed a Consultation Paper, based on the identified challenges and barriers faced by racialized licensees. The Consultation Paper includes questions to the profession about how best to address the barriers. The Consultation Paper appears at TABS 6.1.1 and 6.1.2 in English and French.
4. On October 1, 2014, the Chair and Vice-Chairs of the RWG met with members of the Equity Advisory Group, community liaisons involved in this project and the boards of the Canadian Association of Black Lawyers ("CABL"), the Canadian Association of South Asian Lawyers ("CASAL"), the Federation of Asian Canadian Lawyers ("FACL") and the South Asian Bar Association ("SABA"). They received very helpful and important feedback on the Consultation Paper and consultation methodology.
5. It is recommended that the Law Society consult broadly with the profession, including legal clinics, and members of the judiciary, the academy and the public to identify practical initiatives and solutions to address the challenges outlined in the Consultation Paper. Convocation is asked to approve the proposed consultation.

Key Issues and Considerations

6. This project is of considerable importance to the legal profession. Key equity partners have been consulted in the development of the Consultation Paper. It will be important to fully engage the profession, the judiciary, academics, legal clinics and the public in the consideration of solutions to the barriers faced by racialized licensees. As a result, the proposed consultation methodology aims at ensuring that there are multiple ways to participate in the consultation process. Also, webcasting the Toronto open house sessions will allow those who are unable to attend the meetings in person, to participate online. The RWG will also invite the participation of regional benchers, as leaders in their communities, when conducting focus groups and meetings.

Budgetary Considerations

7. It is anticipated that the consultation will be completed without the requirement for additional funds. The budget for this consultation will be covered by the Equity Initiatives Department and bencher expense budgets.

Stakeholder Management

8. As mentioned above, equity partners have been instrumental in the development of the Consultation Paper, and the Law Society surveyed the profession as a whole about the barriers faced by racialized licensees and potential solutions.
9. To ensure that the policy recommendations effectively address the challenges faced by racialized licensees, it will be important to engage the profession in the policy development process. It is anticipated that the Law Society will receive thoughtful submissions related to this project.

Key Background Information

10. In August 2012, Convocation created the RWG with a mandate to,
  - a. identify challenges faced by racialized licensees in different practice environments, including entry into practice and advancement;
  - b. identify factors and practice challenges faced by racialized licensees that could increase the risk of regulatory complaints and discipline;
  - c. consider best practices for preventive, remedial and/or support strategies;
  - d. if appropriate, design and develop preventative, remedial, enforcement, regulatory and/or support strategies, for consideration by the Equity Committee and other Committees as appropriate, to address the challenges described above.
11. From October 2012 on, the RWG met informally with a number of individuals and organizations to obtain viewpoints on challenges and best practices for racialized licensees and reviewed the literature available on this topic.

12. In early 2013, the RWG retained the services of Strategic Communications Inc. (Stratcom) and Michael Charles of Change DeZign© to formally engage the profession on this matter. This formal engagement process included key informant interviews, focus groups and a survey. Stratcom and Change DeZign© provided their final report to the Law Society in March 2014.
13. The RWG also engaged in a parallel process, the Community Liaison Process, to garner information from racialized licensees who may not have come forward during the formal engagement process.

The Consultation Paper and the Consultation Methodology

14. Based on the findings of the informal and formal engagement process, the RWG drafted a Consultation Paper for the profession's feedback. In October 2014, the RWG also consulted with members of the Equity Advisory Group, the Community Liaisons, CABL, CASAL, FACL and SABA and received very helpful and important feedback on the Consultation Paper and consultation methodology.
15. Based on the advice received, the RWG proposes to consult lawyers, paralegals, academics, members of the judiciary and the public by using the following methodology:
  - a. Posting the Consultation Paper online and inviting written submissions from the profession, the judiciary, academia and the public;
  - b. Holding meetings where there is a strong representation of racialized licensees. It is anticipated that the meetings would be held in Toronto and surrounding areas such as Hamilton, Brampton, Mississauga, Scarborough, Markham and Oshawa. Some RWG members would also travel to Ottawa, Windsor, London and to Northern regions such as Thunder Bay and Sudbury.
  - c. Holding open house meetings in Toronto. Such meetings would be held at the Law Society and webcast. It is anticipated that two open house meetings will be held.
  - d. Meeting with associations such as the County and District Law Presidents' Association, the Ontario Bar Association, CABL, SABA, CASAL, FACL and the Arab Canadian Lawyers Association. Members of the judiciary and academia would also be included along with associations representing members of the public.
16. The Consultation Paper will be posted in French and English online on October 30, 2014 with a deadline for written submissions of March 1, 2015. Meetings with the profession will be scheduled from November to the end of February 2015.
17. The Equity and Aboriginal Issues Committee approved the consultation methodology and Consultation Paper by consensus.
18. The Committee recommends that Convocation approve the proposed consultation as outlined in this report.

19. A power point presentation prepared by the RWG is also presented at TAB 6.1.3.

REQUEST FOR INPUT FROM THE PROFESSION

CHALLENGES FACED BY RACIALIZED LICENSEES CONSULTATION PAPER

As part of its commitment to promoting equity and diversity in the profession, the Law Society created in 2012 the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group.

The Working Group has studied the challenges faced by racialized licensees (lawyers and paralegals) in Ontario and is consulting on strategies for enhanced inclusion at all career stages.

All interested parties are encouraged to review this consultation paper and to comment on the paper as a whole and on any question raised. We invite suggestions and practical solutions to the issues. We welcome proposals for solutions not identified in this paper.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

"We all should know that diversity makes for a rich tapestry, and we must understand that all the threads of the tapestry are equal in value no matter what their color."

Maya Angelou

The Law Society is committed to promoting a profession that is reflective of all peoples of Ontario and that is inclusive and free from discrimination and harassment. The Law Society is also dedicated to facilitating access to justice, as evidenced by the Law Society's recent adoption of a new comprehensive access to justice framework.<sup>1</sup>

This consultation paper is designed to engage the profession in the consideration of strategies to address the challenges faced by racialized licensees.<sup>2</sup> The profession, legal organizations, firms, law schools and any others interested in the issues discussed in this consultation paper are encouraged to provide written comments. The Working Group will consider all of the submissions and prepare a final report with recommendations for Convocation's consideration. The final report will be accompanied by a detailed implementation plan.

Background

Ontario's legal profession has witnessed a steady increase in the number of racialized lawyers over the last 20 years. Despite this increase, evidence based on statistical data, research results and anecdotal evidence suggests that racialized lawyers continue to

<sup>2</sup> The Ontario Human Rights Commission notes that using the terminology "racialized person" or "racialized group" is more accurate than "racial minority", "visible minority", "person of colour" or "non-White". Race is the socially constructed differences among people based on characteristics such as accent or manner of speech, name, clothing, diet, beliefs and practices, leisure preferences, places of origin and so forth. Racialization is the "process by which societies construct races as real, different and unequal in ways that matter to economic, political and social life". face challenges in the practice of law. Very little is known about the challenges faced by racialized paralegals. The public benefits from a strong and diverse bar; this study suggests there are some continued barriers to realizing the fullest capacity for excellence among our bar.

To explore and address this issue, Convocation created The Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group (the Working Group) in August 2012, with a mandate to,

- a. identify challenges faced by racialized licensees in different practice environments, including entry into practice and advancement;
- b. identify factors and practice challenges faced by racialized licensees that could increase the risk of regulatory complaints and discipline;
- c. consider best practices for preventive, remedial and/or support strategies;
- d. if appropriate, design and develop preventative, remedial, enforcement, regulatory and/or support strategies, for consideration by the Equity Committee and other Committees, to address the challenges described above.

Beginning in October 2012, the Working Group undertook a broad-based study which included reviewing available data and literature, meeting with individuals and organizations, and co-ordinating focus groups led by prominent legal professionals.

In 2013, the group launched a formal engagement process which included key informant interviews, focus groups and a survey of the profession as a whole.

Information obtained to date suggests that racialization is a constant and persistent factor affecting licensees during entry into practice and opportunities for career advancement. Racialization intersects with a wide variety of other factors, including language or accent, differences of professional status between lawyers and paralegals and whether licensees are internationally trained.

The intersection of these and other factors such as gender, gender identity, gender expression age, sexual orientation, disability and geographic location, provide a complex pattern of experiences and impacts associated with the challenges of racialization.

Summary of Engagement Results

The Working Group used several methodologies to gather information and found that common themes related to participants' experiences emerged. The engagement process revealed that overt discrimination and bias are a feature of daily life for many racialized licensees.

Participants offered examples of discriminatory behaviours, interactions, language and assumptions that are common features of their everyday professional experiences.

Some participants felt that racialized licensees are often not offered the same opportunities for advancement. They also described feeling alienated from the dominant culture of the legal profession.

Some also noted that racialized licensees have much to gain from mentoring but are often unaware of available programs or do not have access to them. They also said that many racialized licensees lack a strong network of legal professionals, mentors or sponsors who can provide guidance and advocate for them in the workplace.

A number of participants also said they felt they had been forced to enter sole practice because of barriers they faced in advancing in other practice environments — and some felt ill-equipped and unprepared for the realities of sole practice.

In addition to the aforementioned barriers, participants stated that internationally trained lawyers often face a combination of disadvantages, such as few professional network opportunities; language challenges; a different culture from that of their colleagues; lack of critical transition from law school to a first professional position in Ontario; and lack of mentors and contacts.

According to participants, racialized paralegals also face additional challenges, particularly in the job market. As a group, paralegals reported lower success rates in finding suitable employment, compared to racialized lawyers.

Questions for the Profession

The Working Group has considered the results and has identified a number of detailed questions for the profession to consider. These questions focus on the following issues:

- Enhancing the internal capacity of organizations – establishing diversity within firms, collecting demographic data, and developing model contract compliance programs
- Mentoring and Networking – identifying preferred models and best practices
- Enhancing cultural competence of the profession – providing accredited CPD programs
- Discrimination and the role of the complaints process – effectively addressing complaints of discrimination
- The operations of the Law Society of Upper Canada – enhancing the equity compliance program, conducting an internal equity audit and developing a more diverse public face/image for the Law Society

For the complete set of questions, see Appendix 2.

THE CONSULTATION PAPER

BACKGROUND

In the last two decades, the Ontario legal profession has seen a steady increase of racialized lawyers<sup>3</sup>, representing 9.2% of the legal profession in 2001 and 11.5% in 2006.<sup>4</sup> The Law Society's Statistical Snapshots of Lawyers and Paralegals showed that by 2010, 17% of lawyers and 28% of paralegals were racialized.<sup>5</sup> This compares to 23% of the Ontario population who indicated in the 2006 Canada Census that they are racialized and the 25.9% of the Ontario population who indicated in the 2011 National Household Survey that they are racialized.<sup>6</sup>

Research results and anecdotal evidence gathered prior to the creation of the Challenges Faced by Racialized Working Group suggested that despite this increase, racialized lawyers still face challenges in the practice of law. Also, very little was known about the challenges faced, if any, by racialized paralegals in the profession.

As a result, in August 2012, Convocation created the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group (the Working Group) to,

- a. identify challenges faced by racialized licensees in different practice environments, including entry into practice and advancement;
- b. identify factors and practice challenges faced by racialized licensees that could increase the risk of regulatory complaints and discipline;
- c. consider best practices for preventive, remedial and/or support strategies;

From October 2012 on, the Working Group undertook the following activities and developed the following reports available online:

- a. Conducted a review of the data and literature available on this topic – report entitled Law Society Scan and Best-Practices.
- b. Met informally with a number of individuals and organizations to obtain viewpoints on challenges and best-practices for racialized licensees – report entitled Results from Informal Engagement (“Informal Engagement Report”).
- c. Received valuable input from a working group of the Law Society’s Equity Advisory Group (EAG Working Group).<sup>7</sup> The EAG Working Group identified challenges faced by racialized licensees and suggested options to address these challenges – report entitled Submissions of the Equity Advisory Group.
- d. Retained the services of Strategic Communications Inc. (Stratcom) and Michael Charles of Change DeZign© to formally engage with the profession. This engagement included 20 key informant interviews, 14 focus groups with racialized licensees, two focus groups with non-racialized licensees and a 35-question survey conducted with the profession (lawyers and paralegals) as a whole. The consultants provided their report to the Law Society in March 2014 – report entitled Challenges Facing Racialized Licensees Final Report (The “Stratcom report”).
- e. Created a parallel engagement process — the community liaison process — to gather information from racialized licensees who may not have come forward during the formal Stratcom engagement process. Prominent and experienced legal professionals from various racialized communities acted as liaisons and held focus groups with the community – report entitled Community Liaison Report to the Challenges Faced by Racialized Working Group (“Community Liaison Report”).
- f. Compiled self-identification data based on firm size and other characteristics, presented at Appendix 1.
- g. Began an analysis of available Law Society data related to the regulatory process. Included in that analysis will be consideration of whether additional or better data or information should be obtained.

Information obtained to date suggests that racialization is a constant and persistent factor affecting licensees during entry into practice and opportunities for career advancement. A majority of participants in the Stratcom engagement process — both racialized and non-racialized — agreed that the challenges faced by racialized licensees have an impact on the reputation of the legal professions, access to justice, and the quality of services provided.<sup>8</sup>

This consultation paper is designed to engage the profession and the public in the consideration of options to address the challenges faced by racialized licensees. The profession, legal organizations, firms, law schools and any others interested in the issues discussed in this paper are encouraged to provide written comments. The Working Group will consider all of the submissions and prepare a final report with recommendations that will be brought to Convocation.

THE ENGAGEMENT PROCESS RESULTS

Although the Working Group used multiple methodologies to gather information about the challenges faced by racialized licensees, the experiences of participants in the informal engagement with licensees and legal associations (“the informal engagement”) and of participants in the community liaison process echoed the experiences of participants in Stratcom’s formal engagement.

Numerous participants depicted a landscape in which racialization is a “consistent and persistent factor” affecting racialized licensees across their careers.<sup>9</sup>

The following challenges emerged:

- a. Discrimination and stereotypes;
- b. Cultural differences and fit;
- c. Lack of mentoring, sponsors, role models and networking opportunities;
- d. Intersecting factors and increased vulnerability;
- e. Race as a factor in entering sole practice;
- f. Barriers to entry into the profession;
- g. Barriers faced in advancing in the profession;
- h. Risk factors in entering the regulatory process;
- i. Additional barriers faced by internationally trained lawyers; and
- j. Additional barriers faced by paralegals.

Discrimination and Stereotypes

You work harder to prove yourself. You cannot necessarily do things that your White colleagues can do as there is a different connotation. Generally I have always been told that I have to work harder than my White counterparts, which in some respects is sadly still true in this day and age. I feel that certain lawyers do not give me certain files because of a preconceived notion about my skill set due to the colour of my skin.

Community Liaison Meeting

The engagement process allowed participants to share their experiences and a number of participants described discriminatory experiences that had serious impacts on their careers, including career opportunities and earnings. Some described experiences of overt discrimination, such as situations of being on the receiving end of racist jokes or racist comments and assumptions.<sup>10</sup>

---

<sup>9</sup> Ibid. at x. See also the Community Liaison Report and the Informal Engagement Report.

A number of participants spoke of having to work against assumptions by legal professionals, clients, opposing counsel and members of the bench that racialized licensees are less competent, skilled and effective. They recounted incidents in which they were subjected to negative stereotypes, and made to work harder or suffer greater consequences for errors than their non-racialized colleagues.

Some also felt that they were not offered the same opportunities for advancement. For example, they spoke of not being brought in on certain files, not being asked to attend client meetings, not being invited to social gatherings with colleagues where files and assignments are discussed, and receiving lower quality of work. Some wondered if race was a factor in the more rapid advancement of non-racialized colleagues of comparable or less merit.<sup>11</sup>

Participants often felt they had to prove themselves to a greater extent than their non-racialized colleagues. They noted that they were often not perceived as credible and felt a lack of respect. A number of participants reported being mistaken for a student, an assistant, a social worker, or a client, instead of a lawyer or paralegal.

Almost half of racialized respondents<sup>12</sup> to the survey reported they had been expected to perform to a higher standard than others, due to racial stereotyping. Ethno-racial groups that named this factor more frequently than average included Black, Chinese, South East Asian, Arab, and South Asian respondents.<sup>13</sup>

Socioeconomic Cultural Differences and Fit

Firm culture is a huge factor on who gets interviewed and hired; both during on campus interviews and as first year associates. The analogy I always use is that you can't fit a square peg in a round hole. Bay Street is a particular culture and if you don't know how to pour your wine, it will be picked up, and as a result, the weaning process serves to exclude a disproportionate number of minority candidates.

Community Liaison Meeting

The concept of “fit” was also mentioned as a barrier for racialized licensees in hiring processes and within their practice. Participants were of the view that the concept of “fit” translated to being “non-racialized” and, consequently, racialized licensees were more likely to face challenges in finding positions and in career advancement.

Many participants described feeling alienated from the dominant culture. For example, some noted that social events centered on alcohol consumption made non-drinkers feel excluded. Other events such as playing golf, going to the cottage, and watching hockey were also identified as points of contact, interaction and social solidarity for non-racialized colleagues, while reinforcing feelings of isolation and “otherness” for racialized licensees.<sup>14</sup>

The Stratcom survey also addressed this issue by asking about the impact of lifestyle and personal beliefs on entry and advancement in the profession. A higher proportion of racialized licensees, compared to non-racialized licensees, considered that their preferences in social activities<sup>15</sup> and their social or political views were barriers to entry into the profession<sup>16</sup> — and even more importantly, barriers to advancement.<sup>17</sup>

Survey respondents who most frequently identified the types of social activities that they prefer as a barrier to advancement were from the following communities: Chinese, Arab, South Asian and South East Asian.<sup>18</sup>

If we can't get good articles and the mentorship and guidance that goes with it, this impacts the quality of service we can provide as well as opportunities – not giving people the chance to be the best they can impacts our whole society.

Community Liaison Meeting

Many participants noted that racialized licensees have much to gain from mentoring but all too often are unaware of available programs or do not have access to them. They were also of the view that many racialized licensees lack a strong network of legal professionals, mentors or sponsors who can provide guidance and advocate for them in the workplace.

Some key informants noted that this lack of social connections can remain a barrier throughout a career if, for example, licensees begin their practice by building their client base within their own ethnic community where such networks are still sparse.<sup>19</sup>

The Stratcom survey results showed that a majority of racialized respondents believe that not having access to a network of professional contacts contributes to a career disadvantage.<sup>20</sup> A majority of racialized respondents said that not having the same cultural background as one's colleagues had disadvantaged their careers.<sup>21</sup>

The survey results also showed that a higher proportion of non-racialized<sup>22</sup> respondents, compared to racialized respondents<sup>23</sup>, find it relatively easy to get legal advice on client files from professional colleagues and mentors. Differences between the two groups were not as high on other statements. For example, a slightly higher percentage of non-racialized respondents agreed that mentors had played an important role in their career development.<sup>24</sup> A slightly higher percentage of racialized respondents indicated that social networks had played an important role in their career.<sup>25</sup>

The absence of professional networks, divergent cultural backgrounds and prejudice based on race were identified as the most important sources of career disadvantage for a majority of racialized survey respondents.

Among licensees more likely than average to name these factors as probable or definite sources of career disadvantage are women, sole practitioners, licensees whose first language is not French/English and those who are born outside Canada. Racialized groups more likely than average to name all three factors as probable or definite sources of career disadvantage are Black, South Asian, Chinese and Arab respondents.

Intersecting Factors and Increased Vulnerability

When you have an accent, you signal that you are not in this place. You won't understand the culture as everyone else. Those who succeed are very good at adapting to other clients. So that's where an accent automatically sets you apart as not from this place.

Community Liaison Meeting

Many participants noted that racialization intersects with a wide variety of other factors including language or accent, differences of professional status between lawyers and paralegals and whether licensees are internationally-trained.<sup>26</sup> The intersection of these and other factors such as gender, gender identity, gender expression, age, sexual orientation, disability, and geographic location yields a complex and highly individuated pattern of experiences and impacts associated with the challenges of racialization.

Race and Gender

Being female and racialized can be complicated. Women are already struggling in this profession with issues of work/life balance, family commitments, maternity leave, etc. Women are still working to be taken seriously in this profession and being a racialized woman means that you often have even more to prove. It can cause stress, anxiety and may make racialized women work harder, push more and delay some of their personal goals for their work.

Community Liaison Process

The intersection of race and gender was particularly seen as multiplying the challenges for women. In an environment, described by some participants as a “boys’ club”, where extracurricular social activities are often also avenues to new work opportunities and advancement, many racialized women perceived themselves as doubly disadvantaged.<sup>27</sup>

The Stratcom survey addressed harassment and expectations due to gender stereotypes as factors contributing to career disadvantage. Although survey results indicated that racialized male licensees are not free from harassment or from gender-based stereotyping, a larger proportion of racialized women<sup>28</sup> viewed gender stereotyping as a factor contributing to their having been disadvantaged in hiring, advancement or pursuit of an area of practice.

Further gender differences were noted in the Stratcom survey as barriers to entry. For example, racialized and non-racialized women were both more likely than men to identify the following factors as barriers to their entry into the profession: physical appearance, age (too young) and gender.<sup>29</sup>

<sup>29</sup> On the issue of physique/appearance, 29% racialized and 12% non-racialized women respondents identified it as a barrier to entry, compared to 19 % racialized and 4% non-racialized men. On gender, 17% of racialized women respondents and 12% of non-racialized women identified it as a barrier to entry, compared to 5% of racialized men and just 1% of non-racialized men. Finally, on the issue of age (too young), 23% of racialized women respondents and 11% of

The results reinforce the focus group conclusion that, for many racialized women, the experience of gender bias is compounded as a consequence of their racial status. Racialization and gender intersect to amplify barriers associated with each factor.

Race as a Factor in Entering Sole Practice

Most of us are sole practitioners because we could not get into large firms because of racial barriers; the ones I know who got into firms ended up leaving because of feelings of discrimination, and ostracizing and alienation – [i.e.] not being invited to firm dinners and outings. Some Black lawyers feel suicidal because of repeatedly running into racial barriers (not academic performance) trying to enter large firms; there are firms that believe if they hire Black lawyers they will lose their clients.

Community Liaison Meeting

A number of participants stated that they felt they had been forced to enter sole practice because of barriers they had faced in obtaining employment or advancing in other practice environments. Some participants also believed that a number of racialized lawyers become sole practitioners by default and are ill-equipped and unprepared for the realities of sole practice.

Several participants believed that racialized lawyers are more likely to be in sole practice and they highlighted the vulnerability of sole practitioners in the legal profession in the context of professional regulation and discipline.

Entry into the Profession

The barriers noted above have an impact on racialized licensees' experiences in entering the legal profession. The Stratcom survey results also shed some light on other barriers that impact upon entry into the profession. Racialized and non-racialized survey participants were presented with a list of factors and asked to indicate in each case if they had experienced any of the factors as a barrier or challenge at any time during or after their entry into practice.<sup>30</sup>

Forty percent (40%) of racialized licensees identified their ethnic/racial identity as a barrier to entry into practice, while only 3% of non-racialized licensees identified

non-racialized women identified it as a barrier to entry, compared to 9% of racialized men and 5% of racialized men.

ethnic/racial identity as a barrier. Racialized licensees who were most likely to cite race/ethnicity as a barrier to entry included South East Asian, Black, Arab and South Asian respondents, those having a first language other than French/English, women, and those born outside Canada.<sup>31</sup>

Whereas ethnic/racial identity was selected as a barrier to entry by a substantially higher proportion of racialized respondents than any of the other barriers tested, it ranked among the least important challenge for non-racialized respondents.

The following barriers were also identified by racialized lawyers and to a much lesser extent by non-racialized lawyers:

- a. physical appearance;<sup>32</sup>
- b. socio-economic status;<sup>33</sup>
- c. place of birth and where one is raised;<sup>34</sup>
- d. age (too young);<sup>35</sup>
- e. the way one speaks English/ French;<sup>36</sup>
- f. gender identity.<sup>37</sup>

The survey revealed that a significantly smaller percentage of racialized respondents, compared to non-racialized respondents,

- a. found a suitable first job after being licensed;<sup>38</sup>
- b. reported having been offered employment at the firm where they had articulated or had a training placement;<sup>39</sup>
- c. found employment in a suitable practice environment;<sup>40</sup> and
- d. were able to work in their preferred area of practice.<sup>41</sup>

There were wide differences of experience at entry into the profession, and in overall career trajectory. Almost half of racialized licensees "strongly or somewhat agreed" that they had struggled to find an articling position or training placement<sup>42</sup> and a majority

---

“strongly or somewhat agreed” that they had not advanced as rapidly as colleagues with similar qualifications.<sup>43</sup>

Advancement

I was well liked in my Bay Street firm and was a golden boy. Race [was] not a factor getting in the door as a lawyer but was a factor in partnership. I was never offered partnership though I was at the firm longer than those who were offered partnership. It was common knowledge that I was a favourite at the firm.

Community Liaison Meeting

The Stratcom survey results also identified barriers to advancement in the profession. Both racialized and non-racialized respondents were asked to identify which factors represented barriers at any time after entry into practice.

The greatest difference between the two groups is in the importance of ethnic/racial identity, which is perceived as a barrier/challenge to advancement by 43% of racialized licensees, compared to 3% of the non-racialized licensees.

Intersecting with ethnic/racial identity are physical appearance, family socio-economic status, where you were born/raised and how you speak English/French — all of which have been identified as barriers after entry by at least 15% of racialized licensees.

By contrast, for non-racialized licensees, these issues represent barriers after entry to practice that are comparable or possibly of lesser importance than those associated with sexual orientation, gender, age, lifestyle, and personal beliefs.

Racialized and non-racialized respondents identified time away from work to care for children and other family members as a barrier to advancement after entry.<sup>44</sup> However, the barrier was more significant for racialized and non-racialized women than for men.<sup>45</sup>

The survey found narrower gaps between racialized and non-racialized respondents in the area of career setbacks, as shown below:

- a. agreed they had left one or more positions because they felt they did not belong there – 42% of racialized and 35% of non-racialized respondents;

---

- b. reported having left one or more positions because they did not feel they would advance commensurate with their performance and ability – 40% of racialized and 31% of non-racialized respondents;
- c. they had been refused a promotion to a management position – 13% of racialized and 9% of non-racialized respondents;
- d. their admission to partnership had been delayed – 9% of both racialized and non-racialized respondents; and
- e. they were not made partner, despite meeting known criteria for advancement – 6% of both racialized and non-racialized respondents.

Regulatory Process

Participants were asked to comment on their perception of the regulatory process. For some, there were concerns about the lack of racial diversity at Convocation and on discipline panels. Others were of the view that, because of their higher likelihood to become sole practitioners, and/or to come from backgrounds where professional life is the exception rather than the rule, racialized licensees often practise with fewer connections to a large or affluent client base and without sufficient education in the business of a legal practice.

Key informants provided anecdotal evidence that many racialized licensees take a community-specific approach when starting their career, appealing to their own local ethnic/cultural community for business, which may (in some instances) expose them to unreasonable expectations about the scope and efficacy of their practice and, ultimately, complaints from clients.

Participants noted factors that could contribute to making racialized licensees more vulnerable to complaints, most frequently citing a comparative lack of resources, training and mentoring opportunities. Both racialized and non-racialized survey respondents placed lack of mentors and professional networks<sup>46</sup> and racial stereotyping by clients<sup>47</sup> at the top of the list of factors that may increase the risk of complaints against racialized licensees.

A majority of racialized and almost half of non-racialized respondents<sup>48</sup> indicated in the survey that miscommunication was “definitely or probably” a factor increasing the risk of complaints. This dovetails with the results of the focus groups, which identified factors of cultural miscommunication often overlapping with miscommunications based in language differences, as factors contributing to the risk of increased complaints.

Racialized and non-racialized licensees had different views on whether issues such as lower quality articling positions and inadequate training<sup>49</sup> and racial stereotyping by other members of the profession or the judiciary<sup>50</sup> increase the risk of complaints and discipline for racialized licensees.

In this regard, the Working Group considered available information regarding the racialized experience in the regulatory process and determined that there is more work to be done. The preliminary work thus far will be continued.

The Working Group also suggests remedial measures, considered below, that are not specifically tied to particular racial groups, but can assist licensees more generally — such as mentoring and networking.

Additional Barriers Faced by Internationally Trained Lawyers

Some participants stated that internationally trained lawyers often face additional challenges because of language barriers, socialization, job readiness and work experience. They believed that the advantages that internationally trained lawyers bring to the profession as a result of the experience of practising in another country, are often discounted or not understood.

Participants identified being born and/or educated outside Canada as potential obstacles for racialized licensees. It was believed that internationally trained lawyers could face a combination of disadvantages, such as few professional network opportunities, language challenges, a different culture than their colleagues, the lack of critical transition from law school to a first professional position in Ontario, and the lack of mentors and contacts.<sup>51</sup>

Additional Barriers Faced by Paralegals

In addition to the barriers identified above that apply to all racialized licensees, some focus group participants noted that racialized paralegals seem to face greater challenges in the job market than racialized lawyers.

Data from the survey reinforced this hypothesis. Overall, paralegals as a group reported lower success rates in finding suitable employment than lawyers.

On the key measure of finding a suitable first job, just 26% of racialized paralegals had found such job, compared to 36% of non-racialized paralegals. On finding employment in their preferred practice environment, 37% of racialized paralegal respondents had found such employment, compared to 57% of their non-racialized counterparts. Similarly, 41% of racialized paralegal respondents said they found employment in their preferred area of practice, compared to 67% of non-racialized paralegals.

QUESTIONS FOR THE PROFESSION

Introduction

Based on the results described above<sup>52</sup>, the Working Group identified questions for the profession's consideration and invites input on the questions posed below. The questions are organized under the following themes:

- A. Enhancing the internal capacity of organizations;
- B. Mentoring, advisory services and networking;
- C. Enhancing cultural competence in the profession;
- D. Discrimination and the role of the complaints process;
- E. The operations of the Law Society of Upper Canada.

The Working Group also welcomes additional ideas, initiatives or practices that may assist in addressing the challenges faced by racialized licensees.

---

A. Enhancing the Internal Capacity of Organizations

The engagement with the profession indicates that some of the barriers faced by racialized licensees exist in recruitment processes and in advancement in their careers. The Working Group proposes that organizations, including firms, enhance their internal capacity to address such barriers by considering approaches under the following three categories:

- a. Establishing diversity programs within firms;
- b. Collecting demographic data;
- c. Establishing contract compliance programs.

Establishing Diversity Programs within Firms

Question 1: How should the Law Society act as a catalyst for the establishment of diversity programs within firms and why? Proposed models are presented below, and other proposed models are welcome.

- Diversity project: A project in which firms and organizations with in-house counsel services commit to working with the Law Society to develop and adopt standards and resources for the recruitment, retention and career progression of racialized licensees.
- Self-assessment: A project in which firms and organizations with in-house counsel services complete a self-assessment about their diversity performance and use the results to identify and adopt practices and policies to be more equitable and inclusive.
- Requiring standards: A project in which firms and organizations with in-house counsel services would be required by the Law Society to adopt standards and resources for the recruitment, retention and career advancement of racialized licensees.

Diversity Project

The first approach described above is based on the Law Society's Justicia project model adopted in 2008. The Justicia project is a gender diversity project in which more than 55 firms signed commitment agreements with the Law Society to work together to develop resources that would assist in retaining and advancing women in private practice.

Participating firms, in partnership with the Law Society, developed templates to track gender demographics and to identify and adopt principles and best practices regarding flexible work arrangements, networking and business development, mentoring programs and leadership skills development for women. The Justicia resources are now available online to the profession as a whole at: www.lsuc.on.ca/justicia\_project/.

Other examples of similar initiatives are the Law Firm Diversity and Inclusion Network (LFDIN) and the Legal Leaders for Diversity (LLD). These are firm and legal organization-based initiatives that try to address challenges related to the retention and advancement of equity-seeking groups by working together and promoting the adoption of best-practices.<sup>53</sup>

The Law Society could, just as it did in the Justicia Project, act as a catalyst and work with firms and organizations to develop resources to create the infrastructure for inclusiveness and standards to measure progress. Recently, following a consultation with racialized licensees, the Barreau du Québec developed a three-year action plan that includes using the Justicia model to address issues related to the recruitment, retention and advancement of racialized licensees.<sup>54</sup>

Self-Assessment

The second approach, asking or requiring firms to complete a self-assessment about diversity performance, is based on the Canadian Bar Association's guide Assessing Ethical Infrastructure in Your Law Firm: A Practical Guide. The document was drafted to "assist lawyers and firms by providing practical guidance on law firm structures, policies

<sup>53</sup> Similar initiatives have been successful in the U.S. such as the Boston Lawyers Group and the Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity (LCD).

The Boston Lawyers Group is comprised of prominent firms, corporate legal departments and government agencies in Boston that are committed to identifying, recruiting, advancing and retaining attorneys of colour. The group has grown from 13 members at its creation to over 45 members. The Boston Lawyers Group acts as a resource to members by hosting forums, roundtable discussions, educational programs and job fairs, in an effort to promote diversity in Boston's legal community. The Boston Lawyers Group also develops initiatives within law schools, student affinity organizations, city and state governments, bar associations and other professional and business organizations. Members are ultimately responsible for meeting their own diversity and inclusion goals. See The Boston Lawyers Group, About the BLG, online: <http://www.thebostonlawyersgroup.com/about/who.htm>.

The LCD operates in a similar manner to the Boston Lawyers Group. The LCD is comprised of firms, corporate law offices, government agencies and state bar/law associations in Connecticut. The current challenge of the LCD is "to increase the recruitment, retention and advancement of lawyers of color, not only as good social policy, but also as exemplary business practice." See Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity, Who We Are, online: <http://www.lcdiversity.com/about/who.htm>

and procedures to ensure that ethical duties to clients, third parties and the public are fulfilled.”<sup>55</sup>

The document contains a self-evaluation tool for firms, the CBA Ethical Practices Self-Evaluation Tool, which outlines 10 key areas of ethical infrastructure and provides questions related to firm policies and procedures under each identified area.<sup>56</sup>

The self-evaluation tool is modelled on the approach used in New South Wales for regulation of incorporated legal practices. Rather than being required to follow specific rules, the firms are required to self-assess whether their practices and policies are effective in ensuring professional conduct and to establish practices and policies that are thought effective in their specific context. The result has been a two-third reduction in client complaints for firms regulated in this way.<sup>57</sup> This approach could be adopted for diversity practices on a voluntary or mandatory basis.

The Law Society of England and Wales has adopted a similar, successful voluntary approach to diversity practices. In 2009, it adopted the Diversity and Inclusion Charter to, “help practices turn their commitment to diversity and inclusion into positive, practical action for their businesses, staff and clients.”<sup>58</sup>

To date, over 300 practices have signed the Charter, representing more than a third of all solicitors in private practice. Practices that sign the Diversity and Inclusion Charter are required to report annually to show how well they are meeting their commitments and where more work needs to be done. The Charter is accompanied by a set of resources to help practices fulfil their commitments in key areas. The standards help to show how well a legal practice is complying with equality legislation, regulation and equality and diversity standards.

Requiring Standards

The third approach would require firms and organizations with legal counsel to adopt standards and resources for the recruitment, retention and career advancement of racialized licensees. The Law Society would develop such standards.

Collecting Demographic Data

In addition to implementing diversity programs, the Working Group proposes that firms collect demographic data of their lawyers and paralegals.

There are a number of advantages to collecting demographics, as listed below. It is suggested that such data would be particularly helpful in identifying the types of diversity programming that would best meet the needs of each firm.

Question 2: What is the preferred model for the collection of firm demographic data and why? Other proposed models are welcome.

- Using Law Society data: The Law Society collects demographic data of licensees through the Lawyer and Paralegal Annual Reports, publicly reports the demographic data based on firm size and discloses to firms their own demographic data.
- Providing templates: The Law Society works with firms to develop consistent templates for demographic data collection and encourages firms to collect such data on a regular basis.<sup>59</sup>
- Requiring firms to report: The Law Society sets parameters for the voluntary collection of demographic data by firms and requires firms to report either that they are collecting this information or the rationale for not collecting such data.
- Mandatory collection: The Law Society sets parameters for the mandatory collection of demographic data by firms.

Background Discussion

Some participants in the engagement process and studies have noted the value of organizational collection of demographic data. For example, some Stratcom key informants indicated that more detailed statistics on racialization within firms would be valuable, similar to approaches in the United States where transparency about firm representation assists in increasing representation within firms.<sup>60</sup> The Stratcom survey results indicated that a majority of racialized licensees favoured measures related to collecting and sharing data. However, some concerns were expressed about measures that might be construed as setting diversity targets.<sup>61</sup>

<sup>59</sup> In this document, the term “small firms” refers to firms with 5-25 licensees, the term “medium firm” refers to firms with 25-100 licensees, and the term “large firms” refers to firms with 100 or more licensees.

The Advantages of Data Collection

The Working Group believes that gathering and maintaining demographic data is a best practice. There are numerous reasons to gather demographic information, including the following:

- a. Such data can be a tool to increase a firm's competitiveness. Numerous large clients in the U.S., and now in Canada, issue requests for proposals (RFPs) to select their legal counsel, requiring firms to produce demographic data of their workforce. For example, the Bank of Montreal's Legal, Corporate & Compliance Group (LCCG) requires disclosure of a firm's diversity statistics as part of its RFP process for legal suppliers.<sup>62</sup>
- b. Diversity, and data on diversity, assists firms to attract a strong talent base. As the pool of law school students is increasingly diverse, so is the pool of legal talent.
- c. Maintaining demographic data allows firms to monitor diversity in recruitment and advancement and to adjust policies and practices accordingly.
- d. Demographic data assist firms to enhance their client services and professional reputation, and to become role models by ensuring representation at all levels.
- e. Demographic data provide background for firms to develop programs that enhance inclusiveness.
- f. The information may assist in developing initiatives to enhance access to justice.

Dean Lorne Sossin and Sabrina Lyon, in their article Data & Diversity in the Canadian Legal Community, also underline the importance of data collection, noting that while "collecting and publishing data on diversity will not in and of themselves make the justice community more inclusive, it is difficult if not impossible to see how the justice community could become more inclusive without meaningful and reliable data."<sup>63</sup>

Despite the importance of quantitative demographic data, many employers assess their progress in diversity and inclusion by considering more qualitative measures. Sossin and

Lyon believe that “when an organization is comprised of very few diverse members, a firm-wide survey on inclusion will likely lead to misleading results. Qualified and supplemented by quantitative data, the picture becomes much clearer.”<sup>64</sup> Most individuals consulted in the Sossin and Lyon project indicated that, as regulator of the profession, the Law Society is the most appropriate body to lead the effort in calling for the collection and dissemination of demographic data.

Data Collection Practices

The American Experience

Data collection has been an ongoing practice in the U.S. with organizations such as the National Association of Legal Career Professionals (NALP)<sup>65</sup> and Vault<sup>66</sup> collecting and reporting both qualitative and quantitative diversity and inclusion information about U.S. firms or legal organizations. Although not mandatory, the publication of data is an effective recruitment tool for firms and legal organizations, and hundreds participate in the NALP and Vault initiatives. Currently, NALP’s Canadian branch publishes only gender demographic data for firms.

Despite the willingness of many U.S. firms to collect demographic data, there is some dispute as to whether data collection has been effective in increasing the numbers of racialized licensees in U.S. firms<sup>67</sup>. Veronica Root, in her article Retaining Color, notes the following:

The available data demonstrates that (i) large numbers of persons of color are attending the top twenty-five law schools, (ii) a much smaller percentage join large firms, and (iii) an even smaller percentage are made partner. This is despite the fact that the American Bar Association and the National Association for Law Placement began questioning and tracking demographic

<sup>65</sup> NALP is a North American non-profit educational association of over 2,500 legal career professionals that was established to meet the needs of participants in the legal employment process. NALP collects and publishes legal employment data.

<sup>66</sup> Vault provides company rankings, ratings and reviews that are sourced from employees and students. In partnership with the Minority Corporate Counsel Association, Vault conducts an annual diversity survey of firms, and publishes a Law Firm Diversity Profile for each firm, which includes a demographic breakdown of a law firm’s lawyers by level, race, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and disability status. The profiles also include an overview of a firm’s diversity programs, initiatives and strategic plans. In addition, all survey responses are published in the Law Firm Diversity Database, which includes five years of diversity data on over 250 firms.

<sup>67</sup> The racial issues in Canada and the United States are different both in terms of their magnitude and history, which may limit the assessment and applicability of U.S. measures in the Canadian context.

diversity within firms in 1993. Twenty years later, only small gains have been made in efforts to increase large law firm demographic diversity.<sup>68</sup>

Obviously, the lack of demographic diversity is the product of practices and systems other than the collection of data. However, as noted above, the Working Group has identified significant advantages to data collection.

The Experience in the U.K.

The Law Society of England and Wales' Solicitors Regulation Authority (SRA) has taken a proactive approach to gathering demographic data. Practices regulated by the SRA are now required to collect, report and publish data annually on the diversity of their workforce. The SRA produces aggregate data annually. The SRA will develop a benchmark to allow firms to assess their progress.<sup>69</sup>

The Canadian Experience

In Canada, at least three large firms in Ontario collect, but do not report publicly, self-identification data based on race and ethnicity of their employees and members.<sup>70</sup> A number of other firms are working on developing processes to collect demographic data and numerous Justicia firms already collect gender-based data of their members.<sup>71</sup>

The requirement for members to report on diversity-related matters has also been considered by other regulatory bodies in Ontario. Recently, the Ontario Securities Commission (OSC) began the final implementation of rule amendments that will, amongst other things, require companies regulated by the OSC to disclose the following gender related information on an annual basis: policies regarding the representation of

<sup>69</sup> Also noteworthy of mention is the initiative of the United Kingdom's Judicial Appointments Commission (JAC), an independent commission that selects candidates for judicial office in courts and tribunals in England and Wales and for some tribunals that also have jurisdiction in Scotland or Northern Ireland, engages in diversity monitoring. As part of its diversity strategy, the JAC records information about gender, ethnicity, professional background, disability and age at three stages of the judicial appointments process: application, shortlisting and recommendation for appointment. This information is gathered through the JAC's voluntary Application Monitoring Form. The JAC publishes an Official Statistics bulletin, which includes demographic information, twice a year: Judicial Selection and Recommendations for Appointment Statistics, October 2012 to March 2013 – Judicial Appointments Commission Statistics Bulletin (London: Judicial Appointments Commission, 2013).

<sup>70</sup> Also, large banks and the federal government are mandated by law to collect workforce self-identification data, and the Ontario government collects and publishes the OPS Inclusion Strategic Plan that includes self-identification data.

<sup>71</sup> For example, the Canadian Institute of Diversity and Inclusion (CIDI), a national non-profit organization that advises workplaces on diversity, inclusion, equity and human rights, is working with a group of large- and medium-sized firms to develop a process to assist them in collecting demographic data.

women on the board; the board's consideration of the representation of women in the director identification and selection process; consideration of the representation of women in executive officer positions when making such appointments; targets and number of women on the board and in executive officer positions.<sup>72</sup>

The OSC will implement a “comply or explain” approach, which requires companies to either report on their implementation or consideration of items listed above, or explain their reasons for not doing so.<sup>73</sup>

In 2012, the Canadian Bar Association produced a guide to assist firms in refining their approach to diversity and inclusion and to measure their diversity performance.<sup>74</sup> In 2009, the Ontario Human Rights Commission also produced Count me In! Collecting human rights-based data, a guide to assist organizations in collecting demographic data.<sup>75</sup>

Voluntary vs. Mandatory Data Collection

There are advantages and disadvantages to voluntary and mandatory demographic data collection. Although mandatory reporting would potentially provide more reliable data, currently the Law Society does not directly regulate firms or legal organizations. In addition, Sossin and Lyon note the “resistance and backlash to mandatory reporting requirements” and indicate that voluntary and/or incentivized disclosure of demographic statistics is an important avenue to consider.

Voluntary data collection would allow the Law Society to work with firms and legal organizations in collecting the data, hence increasing the buy-in of the firms to conduct such an exercise. The Justicia project<sup>76</sup> mentioned above is an example of an initiative in which participating firms agreed to maintain gender-based data and worked with the Law

Society in developing a guide and template to gather such data. Since the inception of Justicia, a number of medium and large firms are now collecting gender demographic data.

Using Law Society Data

As the Law Society already collects demographic data based on race and data on, for example, size of firms, status in a firm, environment, practice area and year of call, it may be advisable for the Law Society to enhance the quality of its data collection and to be the common source of demographic data. This would have the advantage of providing comparable demographic data and likely more efficient data collection. On the other hand, there may be some advantage in firms being involved in collecting and reporting on their own information.

Diversity and Contract Compliance

Question 3: How could the Law Society work with in-house legal departments to develop model contract compliance programs for in-house legal departments that retain firms?

Background Discussion

As noted above, a number of U.S. and Canadian businesses, governments and other institutions now require the disclosure of workforce demographic data for consideration during RFP evaluation processes. Some members of the Legal Leaders for Diversity (LLD), which comprises over 70 signatories across Canada, are considering diversity in their hiring and purchasing practices by requiring potential legal suppliers to disclose demographic data. Others require that at least one member of a diverse community is working on their file.<sup>77</sup>

Some participants in the engagement process saw a role for the Law Society in encouraging corporate procurement policies. To promote diversity in the profession and ensure that racialized licensees have the opportunity to work on important files, the Law Society could work with organizations such as members of LLD to develop model contract compliance programs that would require potential suppliers to provide diversity statistics during the RFP process.

B. Mentoring, Advisory Services and Networking

Throughout the engagement process, mentoring and networking were identified as crucial elements in promoting inclusivity in the profession. The profession is asked to comment on mentoring, advisory services and networking models.

Mentoring and Advisory Services

Question 4: What are the preferred mentoring and/or advisory services models for racialized licensees? Other models than those listed below are welcome.

In November 2013, Convocation approved the creation of the Mentoring and Advisory Services Proposal Task Force (the Mentoring Task Force). The terms of reference of the Mentoring Task Force are as follows:

- a. inform itself about the mandatory and optional mentoring and advisory services that are provided to lawyers and other professions by their regulatory bodies and trade or professional associations in Canada and abroad;
- b. develop a set of criteria to assess the effectiveness of these services in addressing the practice needs of the legal profession in Ontario;
- c. determine the range of mentoring and advisory service models, including technology-assisted, virtual advisory and mentoring services, partnering with other organizations, centralizing or establishing mentoring and other resources that could be explored and considered;
- d. consult with external stakeholders on the objectives and best practices for such services;
- e. examine and determine, to the extent possible, the immediate and long-term financial implications to the Law Society.

Mentoring refers to a formal or informal program or relationship in which the mentor provides career and personal advice to the mentee. In a mentoring relationship, there are no specific performance objectives. Alternatively, advisory services are job-focused and performance oriented. The advisor/coach provides advice and assesses and monitors progress. Advisors/coaches assist the advisee with developing specific skills for a defined task or challenge.

The Working Group encourages feedback on what mentoring and advisory services models would be most helpful for racialized licensees. Such feedback may be considered by the Working Group and the Mentoring Task Force. Some proposed models are listed below, but the list is not exhaustive and other proposed models are also welcome.

Volunteer Mentor or Advisory Services

- a. One-on-one mentoring or advisory services: One mentor and one mentee would meet regularly. The mentoring relationship would be individualized and personal. Mentors would not be compensated.
- b. Group mentoring: One mentor would form a mentoring relationship with a small group of licensees. The mentor and mentees would meet regularly as a group. Mentors would not be compensated.
- c. Distance mentoring: Mentoring would be provided by one mentor to one mentee primarily via email and other forms of electronic communication. E-communication could be supplemented by occasional telephone calls and in-person meetings. Mentors would not be compensated.
- d. Team mentoring: Several mentors would work with a group of several mentees. The mentors and the mentees would meet together regularly as a team. Mentors would not be compensated.
- e. Peer mentoring: Colleagues who are at a similar stage in their careers would be paired to provide advice and guidance to each other.
- f. Limited-scope advisor services: An advisor with expertise in a specific area would provide an advisee with guidance on a substantive or procedural legal issue. This relationship would likely be short-term. Advisors would not be compensated.

Remunerated Mentor or Advisor Services

- a. Professional one-on-one mentoring: This model would operate similarly to voluntary one-on-one mentoring, however mentees would be able to access a mentor drawn from a pool of compensated mentors.
- b. Panel of advisors: A diverse group of trained lawyer and paralegal advisors would be paid to provide specific, targeted support services to those at increased risk of failing to fulfil their professional obligations.

It is important to note that associations such as the Canadian Association of Black Lawyers (CABL), the South Asian Bar Association (SABA) and the Federation of Asian Canadian Lawyers (FACL) provide valuable networking opportunities, mentoring and continuing professional development programs. The Law Society could consider whether there are additional support programs that could be implemented through associations such as those to assist lawyers and paralegals who are in small firms, who are sole practitioners and/or are internationally trained. Proposals to that effect are welcome.

Networking*Question 5: What are the preferred networking models for racialized licensees? Other models than those listed below are welcome.

The engagement process indicated that racialized licensees are often more isolated from professional support networks. The majority of both racialized and non-racialized licensees in the Stratcom survey identified the need for racialized licensees to have more access to professional networks.

The Law Society could work with legal organizations and affinity associations to develop more planned and structured networking opportunities, for example, through continuing professional development. These networking opportunities would provide racialized licensees with a forum to interact with racialized and non-racialized licensees from other firms and legal organizations.

It is important to note that some participants have mentioned that associations do not exist for their community. For example, paralegals have noted that they do not have access to an association of racialized paralegals. There is also no association of internationally trained lawyers, notwithstanding the comments that internationally trained lawyers are often isolated and lack the networks that are so important to small firms and sole practitioners.

The University of Toronto's Internationally Trained Lawyers Program has been a valuable program to prepare internationally-trained lawyers to enter the legal profession; however, continuous networks while in practice would be valuable.

C. Enhancing Cultural Competence in the Profession

The Stratcom survey results support the importance of Law Society sponsored professional development seminars on equity, diversity and cultural competence that would be counted toward accreditation.

There are many definitions of cultural competence but Robert Wright<sup>78</sup> has developed the following: “an ability to interact effectively with people of different cultures. Cultural competence comprises four essential capacities:

- a. We must understand our own cultural positions and how they differ from and are similar to others (critical cultural self-analysis).
- b. We must understand the social and cultural reality in which we live and work and in which our clients live and work.
- c. We must cultivate appropriate attitudes towards cultural difference
- d. We must be able to generate and interpret a wide variety of verbal and non-verbal responses (client centred interviewing).<sup>79</sup>

Question 6: How could the Law Society enhance the profession’s cultural competence through its CPD Programs? Other proposed models are welcome.

- Include the topics of cultural competence, diversity and inclusion in the Professional Responsibility and Practice (PRP) Course.
- Provide annual voluntary accredited CPD Programs on cultural competence.
- Require that licensees complete annually, or less frequently, one hour of cultural competence CPD that would count as part of the three required hours of professionalism.

The suggested options above are proposed to ensure that licensees are introduced to the concept of cultural competence early in their careers, through the PRP course, and throughout their careers.

The PRP Course is designed to, “expand the candidates’ knowledge of lawyers’ duties, tasks, and challenges and to provide a suggested approach for analyzing common ethical and practice dilemmas.”<sup>80</sup> Successful completion of the PRP Course is required for admission to the Bar.

It is suggested that professional development programs on cultural competence would be beneficial to the profession as a whole. Rules 2.1-1 and 6.3.1-1 of the Rules of Professional Conduct<sup>81</sup> speak to the responsibility of lawyers to recognize the diversity of the Ontario community. Both the Rules of Professional Conduct and the Paralegal Rules of Conduct<sup>82</sup> require that lawyers and paralegals protect the dignity of individuals and respect human rights laws in force in Ontario. Cultural competence training could be useful to assist lawyers and paralegals to understand and comply with this rule.<sup>83</sup>

As such, it is proposed that annual CPD programs be made available to the profession and/or that the profession be required to complete one hour of accredited CPD professionalism hours annually or on a less frequent basis.

D. Discrimination and the Role of the Complaints Process

Question 7: How should the Law Society best ensure that complaints of discrimination are brought to its attention and effectively addressed? Additional proposals are welcome.

- By updating the Rules of Professional Conduct and the Paralegal Rules of Conduct to specifically define and address systemic discrimination and by developing a communication plan for the profession.
- By working with associations of racialized licensees to enhance their ability to bring forward complaints.
- By assigning an expert group of professional regulation staff members to handle complaints of racial discrimination.
- By working with associations of racialized licensees to enhance their capacity to offer duty counsel type support to their members who have been the subject of complaints.

Understanding Discrimination

The Ontario Human Rights Commission defines systemic discrimination based on race as “patterns of behaviour, policies or practices that are part of the structures of an organization, and which create or perpetuate disadvantage for racialized persons.”<sup>84</sup> The engagement process revealed that those who are impacted by racial discrimination often do not believe that they have an avenue to complain because the discrimination is systemic, or they do not wish to complain for fear that the complaint will impact on their careers.

The Rules of Professional Conduct and Paralegal Rules of Conduct speak to the special responsibility of lawyers and paralegals to respect the requirements of human rights laws in force in Ontario and, specifically, to honour the obligation not to discriminate. The mandate of the Law Society to investigate complaints of systemic discrimination is not widely known and it is suggested that the Rules be clarified and a communication plan be developed to inform licensees that complaints of systemic discrimination can be made to the Law Society.

Providing Resources for the Profession

In addition to receiving complaints related to systemic discrimination, the Law Society could develop proactive institutional methods to address systemic discrimination, such as providing firms and legal organizations with best-practices, guides and model policies.

The Law Society could also require that firms have policies and procedures in place to address discrimination and harassment and could hold firms accountable for failure to establish and adhere to such policies and procedures.

The Law Society does not now directly regulate firms or legal organizations. In February 2014, however, Convocation approved the development of a proposed framework for the regulation of firms (also known as “entity regulation”) for Convocation’s consideration. This framework could be designed similar to the self-evaluation based approach that has proven successful in New South Wales. This potential change to the Law Society’s regulatory approach could allow the Law Society to require firms to create and adhere to discrimination and harassment policies and procedures.

Addressing the Fear of Filing a Complaint

The fear of filing a complaint has been raised in the engagement process and currently, the right to complain to the Law Society through professional associations is not widely known. The Law Society may wish to work with affinity associations to enhance their capacity to file complaints of racial and/or ethnic discrimination. The ability to file a complaint through an association may reduce the risk of the complaint having a negative impact on a complainant’s career. The Working Group would welcome additional suggestions on how to enhance policies and practices so that individuals may feel more comfortable coming to the Law Society with complaints of racial discrimination.

Because cases of racial and/or ethnic discrimination are often quite complex, it is suggested that a group of expert Professional Regulation staff members be appointed to handle such cases. This group of experts would attend extensive training programs on cultural competence and racial discrimination to make them sensitive to the nature of these cases and of the parties involved.

Providing Support through the Process

Focus group participants agreed that there may be factors contributing to making racialized licensees more vulnerable to complaints, most frequently citing a comparative lack of resources and training, and problems associated with poor communication and cultural misunderstanding. Those factors, such as the lack of resources, would likely be relevant once a licensee is in the regulatory process. As a result, the Working Group suggests that the Law Society could work with legal associations to strengthen their capacity to offer duty counsel type support to those who are the subject of complaints.

E. The Operations of the Law Society of Upper Canada

The Working Group discussed initiatives that could be implemented internally to address the engagement process results. The Working Group is considering recommending to Convocation the adoption of the following programs. The Working Group would welcome comments about these programs and other internal initiatives that could be considered by the Working Group.

Initiative 1: Enhance the Equity Compliance Program

The Law Society would enhance its Equity Compliance Program to include a request for demographic data when retaining vendors, firms or legal counsel to provide services.

Initiative 2: Conduct an Internal Equity Audit

The Law Society would strengthen its policies and programs by conducting an operational equity audit of its services offered to the profession.

Initiative 3: Internal Collection of Data

The Law Society would consider the internal collection of further data on issues relating to racialization in the regulatory process

Initiative 4: Develop a More Diverse Public Face/Image for the Law Society of Upper Canada

The Law Society would consider strategies to develop a more diverse and inclusive public image/face of the Law Society.

Background Discussion

Currently, as part of its RFP process, the Law Society requires vendors with more than 50 employees and firms with more than 50 lawyers to indicate that they comply with the Human Rights Code, the Occupational Health and Safety Act (OHSA), as applicable, and the Law Society of Upper Canada's Harassment and Discrimination Prevention Policy.

The Law Society could strengthen the Equity Compliance Program requirements to include a request for demographic data to be considered during the selection process.

The Law Society of Upper Canada is also committed to ensuring that its policies, programs and practices are inclusive and accessible. In order to make certain that this is the case, the Law Society could arrange for an outside party to conduct an operational equity audit of the services it provides to the profession. This audit would focus on the Law Society's direct services to the profession or the public. An equity audit would identify any challenges with, or progress in, integrating equity principles and practices into the Law Society's operations.

The Law Society could also examine whether additional or better data or other information should be collected internally relating to regulatory matters, including complaints and investigations, in terms of the incidence and impact of racialization.

A significant number of both racialized and non-racialized participants in the engagement process endorsed the suggestion that the Law Society develop a more diverse and inclusive public image/face. The Law Society could consider initiatives that would make its public image/face more diverse and inclusive. Input could be sought from the Equity Advisory Group, which is comprised of partner associations and individual members with expertise in matters related to equity and diversity. The Governance Issues Working Group could receive staff support and additional input from the Law Society's Equity Initiatives Department, Public Affairs Department and Communications Department.

CONCLUSION

The Law Society is committed to promoting a profession that is reflective of all peoples of Ontario and that is inclusive and free from discrimination and harassment. The engagement process identified a number of barriers that affect racialized licensees, across their careers.

The Working Group considered those barriers and the challenges faced as a result of discrimination, overt racism, cultural differences, lack of mentoring, sponsors, role models and networking opportunities and other systemic factors. As a result, it has identified a number of potential initiatives that could address some of those challenges.

The proposed initiatives are presented to the profession and your input is invited and most welcome.

Appendix 1 - Racialization and Firm Size Based on Law Society Lawyer and Paralegal Data as of April 2014

Chart 1 - Sole Practitioners – In percentages

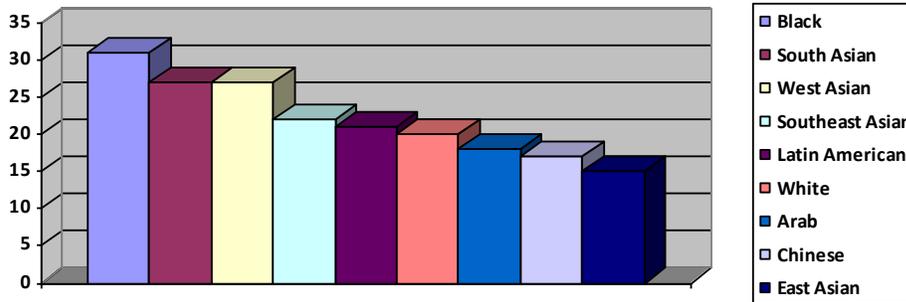

Chart 2 - By Firm Size – In percentages

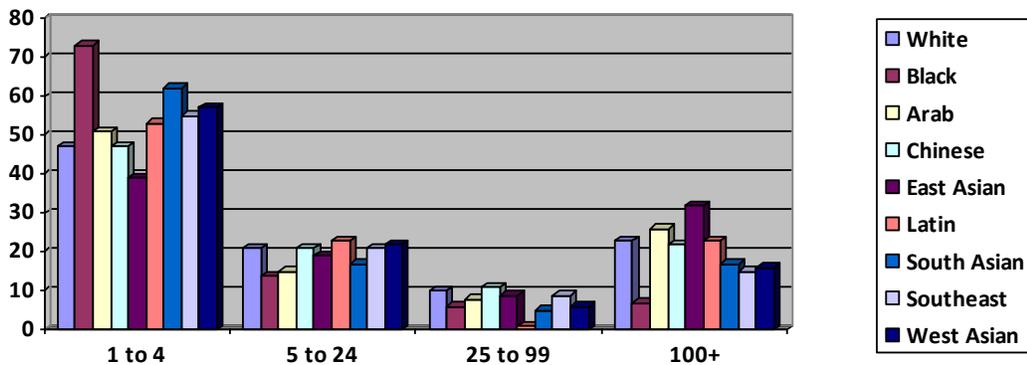

Chart 1 shows that Black, South Asian and West Asian lawyers are proportionately more likely to be in sole practice.

Chart 2 shows that Black and South Asian lawyers are proportionately more likely to be in small and sole practices while they are proportionately much less likely to be in medium and large firms.

Chart 2 is difficult to interpret because a number of different groups are compared. In order to assist, Chart 3 below shows the size of firms in which Black, White and South Asian lawyers practice.

Chart 3 - By Firm Size – In percentages

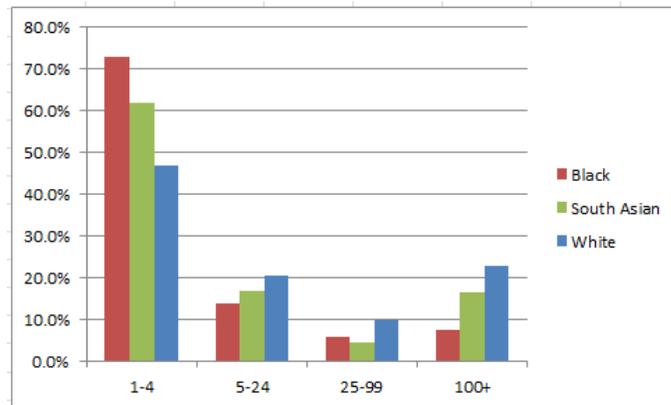

Chart 3 shows more clearly the differential practice patterns of Black, South Asia and White lawyers. Black lawyers, and to a lesser extent South Asian lawyers, disproportionately practise in the smallest firms. Relatively few Black lawyers practice in the largest firms, while the proportions of South Asian and White lawyers in the largest firms are not so different.

Appendix 2 – Questions for the Profession

Establishing Diversity Programs within Firms

Question 1: How should the Law Society act as a catalyst for the establishment of diversity programs within firms and why?

Question 2: What is the preferred model for the collection of firm demographic data and why?

Question 3: How could the Law Society work with in-house legal departments to develop model contract compliance programs for in-house legal departments that retain firms?

Mentoring and Advisory Services

Question 4: What are the preferred mentoring and/or advisory services models for racialized licensees?

Networking

Question 5: What are the preferred networking models for racialized licensees? Other models than those listed below are welcome.

Enhancing Cultural Competence in the Profession

Question 6: How could the Law Society enhance the profession's cultural competence through its CPD Programs?

Discrimination and the Role of the Complaints Process

Question 7: How should the Law Society best ensure that complaints of discrimination are brought to its attention and effectively addressed?

DOCUMENT DE CONSULTATION SUR LES DÉFIS DES TITULAIRES DE PERMIS RACIALISÉS

Dans le cadre de son engagement à promouvoir l'équité et la diversité dans la profession, le Barreau du Haut-Canada a créé le Groupe de travail sur les défis des titulaires de permis racialisés en 2012.

Le Groupe de travail a étudié les défis auxquels font face les avocates et avocats et parajuristes (titulaires de permis) racialisés en Ontario et mène présentement une consultation sur les stratégies visant l'amélioration de l'inclusion à toutes les étapes de leur carrière.

Nous encourageons toutes les parties intéressées à examiner ce document de consultation et à commenter le document global ou toute question qu'il soulève. Nous vous invitons à présenter des suggestions et des solutions pratiques aux problèmes. Toute proposition de solutions non présentées dans ce document serait appréciée.

SOMMAIRE

[Traduction] « Nous devrions toutes et tous savoir que la diversité contribue à la richesse du tissu social et nous devons comprendre que tous les fils de ce tissu sont de valeur égale, peu importe leur couleur ».

Maya Angelou

Le Barreau s'est engagé à maintenir une profession qui tienne compte de toute la population de l'Ontario de manière inclusive et libre de discrimination et de harcèlement. Le Barreau est également déterminé à faciliter l'accès à la justice, tel que démontré dans la récente adoption par le Barreau d'un nouveau cadre d'accès à la justice exhaustif<sup>1</sup>.

Contexte

Nous avons observé une augmentation constante du nombre des avocates et avocats racialisés dans la profession juridique en Ontario au cours des 20 dernières années. Malgré cette augmentation, les preuves fondées sur les données statistiques, les résultats des recherches et les preuves anecdotiques suggèrent que les avocates et avocats racialisés continuent à faire face à des défis dans la pratique du droit. Nous en savons très peu sur les défis auxquels les parajuristes racialisés font face.

Pour explorer cette question et répondre aux préoccupations, le Conseil a créé en août 2012 le Groupe de travail sur les défis des titulaires de permis racialisés (le Groupe de travail), avec le mandat suivant :

- a) reconnaître les défis des titulaires de permis racialisés dans différents milieux de pratique, y compris l'entrée dans la pratique et l'avancement,

<sup>2</sup> La Commission ontarienne des droits de la personne indique que les termes « personnes racialisées » ou « groupes racialisés » sont plus précis que « minorités raciales », « minorités visibles », « personnes de couleur » ou « non-Blancs ». La race est un construit social à partir duquel on établit des différences entre les gens d'après l'accent ou la façon de parler, le nom, les vêtements et l'apparence, le régime alimentaire, les croyances et pratiques, les préférences en matière de loisirs, le lieu d'origine, etc. La racialisation est le « processus par lequel les sociétés assoient la notion que les races sont bien réelles, différentes et inégales, de façons qui importent pour la vie sociale, économique et politique. ». Voir Discrimination raciale, race et racisme, en ligne à www.ohrc.on.ca/fr/discrimination-raciale-race-et-racisme-fiche.

- b) reconnaître les facteurs et les difficultés de la pratique des titulaires de permis racialisés qui pourraient augmenter le risque de plaintes liées à la réglementation et les mesures disciplinaires;
- c) tenir compte des pratiques exemplaires pour élaborer des stratégies préventives, de recours et d'appui;
- d) au besoin, concevoir et élaborer des stratégies préventives, de recours, de mise en application, de réglementation ou d'appui, aux fins d'étude pas le comité d'équité et d'autres comités, pour traiter les défis décrits ci-dessus.

En octobre 2012, le Groupe de travail a entrepris une étude globale qui comprenait l'examen des données et documents disponibles, des rencontres avec des particuliers et des organismes ainsi que la coordination de groupes de discussion menés par des professionnels juridiques reconnus.

En 2013, le groupe a lancé un processus officiel de mobilisation qui comprenait des entrevues avec des informateurs clés, des groupes de discussion et un sondage sur la profession dans son ensemble.

Les renseignements obtenus à ce jour suggèrent que la racialisation est un facteur constant et persistant qui touche les titulaires de permis à leur début dans la profession et lors des possibilités d'avancement professionnel. La racialisation se croise avec une grande variété d'autres facteurs, dont la langue ou l'accent, les différences de statut professionnel entre les avocat(e)s et les parajuristes ainsi que la formation à l'étranger.

Le croisement de ces facteurs avec d'autres, comme le sexe, l'identité sexuelle, l'expression de l'identité sexuelle, l'âge, l'orientation sexuelle, un handicap et la région géographique, donne lieu à un profil complexe d'expériences et d'impacts associés aux défis de la racialisation.

Sommaire des résultats de la mobilisation

Le Groupe de travail a utilisé plusieurs méthodologies pour recueillir des renseignements et a établi l'apparition de thèmes communs dans les expériences des participants. Le processus de mobilisation a révélé que la discrimination et les préjugés manifestes font partie de la vie quotidienne de nombreux titulaires de permis racialisés.

Les participants ont fourni des exemples de comportements, d'interactions, de langages et de suppositions discriminatoires qui sont des caractéristiques courantes de leurs expériences professionnelles de tous les jours.

Certains participants estiment que, souvent, on n'offre pas aux titulaires de permis racialisés les mêmes possibilités d'avancement. Ils ont aussi indiqué qu'ils se sentent exclus de la culture dominante de la profession juridique.

Certains ont aussi indiqué que les titulaires de permis racialisés auraient beaucoup à gagner des programmes de mentorat, mais que souvent ils ne connaissent pas les programmes disponibles ou n'y ont pas accès. Ils ont aussi indiqué que de nombreux titulaires de permis racialisés ont besoin d'un solide réseau de professionnels juridiques, de mentors ou de parraineurs qui puissent leur fournir des conseils et un soutien dans leur lieu de travail.

Un certain nombre de participants ont aussi indiqué qu'ils ont été obligés de choisir d'exercer seuls en raison des obstacles aux possibilités d'avancement auxquels ils ont fait face dans les autres milieux de la profession. Par ailleurs, certains estiment qu'ils étaient mal équipés ou préparés pour les réalités de l'exercice de leur profession à titre individuel.

En plus des obstacles mentionnés ci-dessus, les participants ont déclaré que les avocates et avocats formés à l'étranger font souvent face à une combinaison d'inconvénients, comme le manque de possibilités de réseautage professionnel, les difficultés linguistiques, les différences culturelles par rapport à leurs collègues, un manque de possibilités lors de la transition entre l'école de droit et un premier emploi professionnel en Ontario ainsi que le manque de mentors et de personnes-ressources.

Questions pour la profession

Le Groupe de travail a examiné les résultats et a cerné pour les professionnels un certain nombre de questions détaillées à étudier. Ces questions portent sur les sujets suivants :

- Améliorer les capacités internes des organismes – intégrer la diversité dans les cabinets, recueillir des données démographiques sur la diversité et élaborer des programmes de conformité des contrats types
- Mentorat et réseautage – déterminer les meilleures pratiques et modèles privilégiés
- Améliorer le savoir-faire culturel dans la profession – fournir des programmes de formation professionnelle continue (FPC) agréés
- La discrimination et le rôle du processus des plaintes – traiter efficacement les plaintes de discrimination
- Les activités du Barreau du Haut-Canada – améliorer le programme de conformité en matière d'équité, mener une vérification interne en matière d'équité et développer une image publique plus diversifiée du Barreau.

Pour obtenir la série complète des questions, veuillez consulter l'annexe 2.

DOCUMENT DE CONSULTATION

CONTEXTE

Au cours des deux dernières décennies, il y a eu en Ontario une augmentation constante du pourcentage des avocates et avocats racialisés<sup>3</sup> dans la profession juridique, qui est passé de 9,2 % en 2001 à 11,5 % en 2006<sup>4</sup>. Les aperçus statistiques du Barreau sur les avocats et les parajuristes démontrent qu'en 2010, 17 % des avocats et 28 % des parajuristes étaient racialisés<sup>5</sup>. Ces données se comparent au pourcentage de 23 % de la population de l'Ontario qui s'est identifiée dans le Recensement du Canada comme étant racialisée, ainsi qu'au pourcentage de 25,9 % de la population de l'Ontario qui s'est identifiée dans l'Enquête nationale auprès des ménages comme étant racialisée<sup>6</sup>.

Les résultats des recherches et les preuves anecdotiques recueillis avant la création du Groupe de travail sur les défis des titulaires de permis racialisés suggéraient que malgré l'augmentation du nombre des avocats racialisés, ces derniers faisaient toujours face à des défis dans la pratique du droit. De plus, les défis auxquels les parajuristes racialisés faisaient face dans la profession, le cas échéant, étaient très peu connus.

Par conséquent, en août 2012, les membres du conseil ont créé le Groupe de travail sur les défis des titulaires de permis racialisés (Groupe de travail) afin de :

- a. reconnaître les défis auxquels font face les titulaires racialisés dans différents milieux de la pratique, notamment à leur début dans la profession et lors des possibilités d'avancement;
- b. reconnaître les facteurs et les difficultés de la pratique auxquels les titulaires de permis racialisés sont exposés qui pourraient augmenter le risque de plaintes liées à la réglementation et de mesures disciplinaires;
- c. tenir compte des pratiques exemplaires pour élaborer des stratégies préventives, de recours et d'appui;
- d. s'il y a lieu, concevoir et élaborer des stratégies préventives, de recours, de mise en application, de réglementation ou d'appui à l'intention du Comité sur l'équité et d'autres comités au besoin, afin de relever les défis décrits ci-dessus.

- a. Il a mené un examen des données et de la documentation disponible à ce sujet – Rapport intitulé Law Society Scan and Best-Practices.
- b. Il a rencontré de façon informelle un certain nombre de particuliers et d'organismes pour obtenir des commentaires sur les défis et les pratiques exemplaires pour les titulaires de permis racialisés – Rapport intitulé Results from Informal Engagement (Informal Engagement Report).
- c. Il a obtenu de précieux commentaires d'un groupe de travail du groupe consultatif en matière d'équité du Barreau du Haut-Canada<sup>7</sup>. Le groupe consultatif en matière d'équité a cerné les défis auxquels les titulaires de permis racialisés font face et a suggéré des options pour répondre aux préoccupations — Rapport intitulé Submissions of the Equity Advisory Group.
- d. Il a retenu les services de Strategic Communications Inc. (Stratcom) et de Michael Charles de Change DeZign© pour qu'ils s'engagent officiellement auprès de la profession. Cet engagement comprenait des entrevues avec 20 informateurs clés, 14 groupes de discussion formés de titulaires de permis racialisés, 2 groupes de discussion formés de titulaires de permis non racialisés et un sondage de 35 questions mené auprès de la profession globale (avocats et parajuristes). Les consultants ont fourni leur rapport au Barreau du Haut-Canada en mars 2014 – Rapport intitulé Rapport final sur les barrières des titulaires de permis racialisés (le rapport Stratcom).
- e. Il a créé un processus de mobilisation parallèle, le processus de liaison communautaire, pour recueillir des renseignements de titulaires de permis racialisés qui n'auraient pas participé au processus de mobilisation officiel de Stratcom. Des professionnels juridiques reconnus et expérimentés de diverses collectivités racialisées ont agi à titre d'agents de liaison et ont mené des groupes de discussion dans la collectivité – Rapport intitulé Community Liaison Report to the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group (Community Liaison Report).
- f. Il a également rassemblé des données d'auto-identification concernant la taille des cabinets et d'autres caractéristiques, présentées à l'annexe 1.
- g. Il a entrepris une analyse des données disponibles du Barreau concernant le processus de réglementation. Au cours de cette analyse, on déterminera s'il convient d'obtenir d'autres données ou de meilleures données.

Les renseignements obtenus jusqu'à maintenant suggèrent que la racialisation est un facteur constant et omniprésent affectant les titulaires de permis au moment de leur entrée en pratique et de leurs chances d'avancement professionnel. La majorité des participants au processus de mobilisation de Stratcom et les deux groupes racialisés et non racialisés ont convenu que les défis à relever par les titulaires racialisés ont un impact sur la réputation des professions juridiques, l'accès à la justice et la qualité des services fournis<sup>8</sup>.

racialisés font face. Les membres de la profession, les organismes juridiques, les cabinets, les écoles de droit et toute personne intéressée aux questions analysées dans ce document sont encouragés à fournir des commentaires écrits. Le Groupe de travail examinera toutes les observations présentées et rédigera un rapport final proposant des recommandations à l'intention du Conseil.

Veillez noter que le terme « cabinets » dans le présent rapport désigne les cabinets d'avocats et les cabinets de parajuristes.

LES RÉSULTATS DU PROCESSUS DE MOBILISATION

Même si le Groupe de travail a utilisé plusieurs méthodes pour recueillir les renseignements sur les défis auxquels font face les titulaires racialisés, l'expérience des participants au cours de leurs interactions informelles avec des titulaires et associations juridiques (participation informelle) et celle des participants au processus de liaison communautaire faisaient écho aux expériences des participants du processus de mobilisation officiel de Stratcom.

De nombreux participants ont décrit une situation dans laquelle la racialisation est un « facteur constant et persistant » qui touche les titulaires racialisés tout au long de leur carrière<sup>9</sup>.

Les défis suivants sont apparus :

- a. discrimination et stéréotypes;
- b. différences culturelles et aptitude à s'adapter;
- c. manque de mentors, de parraineurs, de modèles et d'occasions de réseautage;
- d. croisement de facteurs et vulnérabilité accrue;
- e. la race en tant que facteur contribuant au choix d'exercer seul;
- f. obstacles à l'entrée dans la profession;
- g. obstacles aux possibilités d'avancement dans la profession;
- h. facteurs de risque liés à l'entrée dans le processus de réglementation;
- i. obstacles supplémentaires pour les avocates et avocats formés à l'étranger; et
- j. obstacles supplémentaires pour les parajuristes.

Discrimination et stéréotypes

[Traduction] Vous travaillez plus fort pour faire vos preuves. Vous ne pouvez pas nécessairement faire les choses que vos collègues blancs peuvent faire à cause de la différence de connotation. En général, on m'a toujours dit que je devais travailler plus fort que mes homologues blancs, ce qui à certains égards est encore tristement vrai à notre époque. J'ai l'impression que certains avocats ne me donnent pas certains dossiers en se basant sur une notion préconçue concernant mes compétences à cause de la couleur de ma peau.

Community Liaison Meeting

<sup>9</sup> Ibid. à la p x. Voir également le Community Liaison Report et le Informal Engagement Report.

Le processus de mobilisation a permis aux participants de partager leurs expériences. Un certain nombre de participants ont décrit des expériences de discrimination qui ont eu de graves répercussions sur leur carrière, notamment sur leurs possibilités de carrière et leur rémunération. Certains ont décrit des expériences manifestes de discrimination, comme des situations où ils ont été la cible de blagues, de propos ou de suppositions racistes<sup>10</sup>.

Un certain nombre de participants ont indiqué qu'ils ont dû se défendre contre des suppositions présentées par des professionnels juridiques, des clients, des avocats de la partie adverse et des membres de la magistrature selon lesquelles les titulaires racialisés sont moins compétents, qualifiés et efficaces. Ils ont évoqué des incidents au cours desquels ils ont été la cible de préjugés négatifs et où ils ont dû travailler plus dur ou subir des conséquences plus graves à la suite d'erreurs, que leurs collègues non racialisés.

Certains ont aussi indiqué qu'on ne leur a pas offert les mêmes possibilités d'avancement. Par exemple, ils ont indiqué qu'on les a laissés à l'écart dans certains dossiers, qu'ils n'ont pas été invités à participer aux réunions avec des clients, ni à des rencontres à caractère social avec des collègues où l'on discutait des dossiers et des affectations, et qu'on leur confiait des travaux de moindre importance. Certains se sont demandé si la race a joué un rôle dans l'avancement plus rapide de collègues non racialisés de niveau comparable ou inférieur<sup>11</sup>.

Les participants ont souvent ressenti qu'ils devaient faire leurs preuves dans une plus grande mesure que leurs collègues non racialisés. Ils ont indiqué qu'ils ont souvent été perçus comme non crédibles et ont ressenti un manque de respect. Un certain nombre de participants ont déclaré qu'on les a pris pour un étudiant, un travailleur social ou un client, au lieu d'un avocat ou un parajuriste.

Près de la moitié des répondants racialisés<sup>12</sup> au sondage ont déclaré que l'on avait des attentes plus grandes à leur endroit en raison de stéréotypes raciaux. Les groupes ethnoraciaux qui ont mentionné ce facteur plus souvent que la moyenne comprenaient les répondants Noirs, Chinois, Asiatiques du Sud-Est, Arabes et Sud Asiatiques<sup>13</sup>.

Différences culturelles socioéconomiques et aptitude à s'adapter

La notion de « l'aptitude à s'adapter » a aussi été mentionnée comme étant un obstacle pour les titulaires racialisés en processus d'embauche et dans le cadre de leurs fonctions. Les participants étaient d'avis que la notion « d'aptitude à s'adapter » se traduit par « non racialisé » et que, par conséquent, les titulaires racialisés sont plus susceptibles de faire face à des défis lorsqu'ils sont à la recherche d'un emploi ou de possibilités d'avancement.

De nombreux participants ont indiqué qu'ils se sentent exclus de la culture dominante. Par exemple, certains ont mentionné que lors des activités sociales centrées sur la consommation d'alcool, les personnes qui n'en boivent pas se sentent exclues. D'autres activités, comme jouer golf, aller au chalet et regarder le hockey étaient considérées comme des occasions de rencontre, d'interactions et de solidarité sociale pour les collègues non racialisés, et renforçaient les sentiments d'isolation et d'aliénation chez les titulaires de permis racialisés<sup>14</sup>.

Le sondage de Stratcom a également abordé ce sujet en posant des questions sur l'impact du mode de vie et des croyances personnelles sur l'entrée dans la profession et les possibilités d'avancement. Une plus forte proportion de titulaires racialisés, par rapport aux titulaires non racialisés, considéraient que leurs préférences en matière d'activités sociales<sup>15</sup> et que leurs opinions politiques ou sociales étaient des obstacles à l'entrée dans la profession<sup>16</sup> et, davantage encore, à leurs possibilités d'avancement<sup>17</sup>.

Manque de mentors, de parraineurs, de modèles et d'occasions de réseautage

[Traduction] Si nous ne pouvons pas trouver de bons stages et le mentorat ainsi que l'encadrement connexe, la qualité des services que nous pouvons offrir est affectée, tout comme les possibilités – ne pas donner aux gens la chance de réaliser leur potentiel affecte toute notre société.

Community Liaison Meeting

De nombreux participants ont indiqué que les titulaires de permis racialisés auraient beaucoup à gagner des programmes de mentorat, mais que souvent ils ne connaissent pas les programmes disponibles ou n'y ont pas accès. Ils ont aussi mentionné que de nombreux titulaires de permis racialisés ont besoin d'un solide réseau de professionnels juridiques, de mentors ou de parraineurs qui peuvent leur fournir des conseils et un soutien dans leur lieu de travail.

Certains informateurs clés ont indiqué que ce manque de relations peut représenter un obstacle tout au long d'une carrière si, par exemple, le titulaire de permis commence à établir sa clientèle au sein de sa propre communauté ethnique, où de tels réseaux sont encore faibles<sup>19</sup>.

Les résultats du sondage de Stratcom ont révélé que la majorité des répondants racialisés croient que le fait de ne pas avoir accès à un réseau de relations professionnelles nuit à la carrière<sup>20</sup>. La majorité des répondants racialisés ont indiqué que le fait de ne pas avoir les mêmes antécédents culturels que leurs collègues avait nui à leur carrière<sup>21</sup>.

Les résultats du sondage démontrent également qu'une plus grande proportion de répondants non racialisés<sup>22</sup>, comparativement aux répondants racialisés<sup>23</sup>, trouvent relativement facile d'obtenir de collègues professionnels et de mentors des conseils juridiques concernant des dossiers de clients. Les différences entre les deux groupes n'étaient pas aussi importantes concernant d'autres déclarations. Par exemple, un pourcentage légèrement plus élevé de répondants non racialisés ont convenu que les mentors ont joué un rôle important dans l'avancement de leur carrière<sup>24</sup>. Un pourcentage légèrement plus élevé de répondants racialisés ont indiqué que les réseaux sociaux ont joué un rôle important dans leur carrière<sup>25</sup>.

Parmi les titulaires de permis qui sont plus susceptibles que la moyenne de mentionner ces facteurs comme étant des sources d'inconvénients probables ou incontestables pour la carrière se trouvent les femmes, les praticiens exerçant seuls, les titulaires de permis qui ont une langue maternelle autre que le français ou l'anglais ou ceux et celles qui sont nés à l'extérieur du Canada. Les groupes racialisés plus susceptibles que la moyenne de mentionner ces trois facteurs comme étant des sources d'inconvénients probables ou incontestables pour la carrière sont : les répondants noirs, sud-asiatiques, chinois et arabes.

Croisement de facteurs et vulnérabilité accrue

[Traduction] Quand vous avez un accent, vous signalez que n'êtes pas d'ici. Vous ne comprendrez pas la culture comme tous les autres. Ceux qui réussissent savent très bien s'adapter aux autres clients. Et c'est là qu'un accent vous catégorise automatiquement comme étranger.

Community Liaison Meeting

La racialisation se croise avec une grande variété d'autres facteurs, dont la langue ou l'accent, les différences de statut professionnel entre les avocat(e)s et les parajuristes ainsi que la formation à l'étranger<sup>26</sup>. Le croisement de ces facteurs avec d'autres, comme le sexe, l'identité sexuelle, l'expression de l'identité sexuelle, l'âge, l'orientation sexuelle, une invalidité et la région géographique, donne lieu à un profil d'expériences complexe et très individuel et à des impacts associés aux défis de la racialisation.

La race et le sexe

[Traduction] Être femme et racialisée peut être compliqué. Les femmes se débattent déjà dans cette profession avec des questions d'équilibre entre la vie professionnelle et la vie personnelle, les responsabilités familiales, les congés de maternité, etc. Les femmes travaillent encore pour se faire prendre au sérieux dans cette profession et être une femme racialisée signifie que vous devez faire vos preuves plus souvent. Cela peut causer du stress, de l'angoisse et peut faire travailler les femmes racialisées plus fort, les pousser davantage et reporter certains de leurs objectifs personnels à cause de leur travail.

Community Liaison Process

Le croisement de la race et du sexe, en particulier, était considéré comme un facteur de multiplication des défis pour les femmes. Dans un milieu, décrit par certains participants comme un « boys club », où les activités paraprofessionnelles sociales sont souvent des avenues vers de nouvelles possibilités de travail et d'avancement, de nombreuses femmes racialisées se considèrent comme doublement désavantagées<sup>27</sup>.

Le sondage de Stratcom a tenu compte du harcèlement et des attentes liées aux stéréotypes sexuels à titre de facteurs aggravant les inconvénients pour la carrière. Bien que les résultats du sondage aient indiqué que les hommes titulaires racialisés ne sont pas exempts de harcèlement ni de stéréotypes sexistes, une plus grande proportion de femmes racialisées<sup>28</sup> considèrent les stéréotypes sexistes comme un facteur contribuant à leurs désavantages en matière d'embauche, d'avancement ou de poursuite d'un domaine de pratique.

Le sondage de Stratcom fait état d'autres différences entre les sexes en ce qui concerne les obstacles à l'entrée dans la profession. Par exemple, les femmes racialisées et non racialisées étaient plus susceptibles que les hommes à souligner les facteurs suivants comme étant des obstacles à leur entrée dans la profession : l'apparence physique, l'âge (trop jeune), et le sexe<sup>29</sup>.

<sup>29</sup> Chez les répondantes, 29 % des racialisées et 12 % des non racialisées ont souligné l'apparence physique, comparativement à 19 % de racialisés et 4 % de non racialisés chez les répondants. En ce qui concerne le sexe, 17 % des répondantes racialisées et 12 % des répondantes non racialisées ont souligné qu'il s'agit d'un obstacle à l'entrée dans la profession, comparativement à 5 % chez les répondants racialisés et à seulement 1 % chez les répondants non racialisés. Enfin, en ce qui concerne l'âge (trop jeune), 23 % des répondantes racialisées et 11 % des répondantes non racialisées ont souligné qu'il s'agit d'un obstacle à l'entrée dans la profession, comparativement à 9 % chez les répondants racialisés et à 5 % chez les répondants non racialisés.

Les résultats renforcent la conclusion du groupe de discussion selon laquelle, pour de nombreuses femmes racialisées, l'expérience des préjugés sexistes est aggravée par leur statut racial. Le croisement de la racialisation et du sexe amplifie les obstacles associés à chacun des facteurs.

La race en tant que facteur contribuant au choix d'exercer seul

[Traduction] La plupart d'entre nous exercent seuls parce que nous ne pouvions pas entrer dans un grand cabinet à cause de notre race; les seuls que je connais qui ont pu travailler dans un cabinet ont fini par partir parce qu'ils ressentaient de la discrimination, de l'ostracisme et de l'aliénation – comme de ne pas être invités aux diners et aux sorties du cabinet. Certains avocats noirs ont eu des idées suicidaires à force de rencontrer des obstacles raciaux (et non en raison du rendement scolaire) pour essayer d'entrer dans un grand cabinet; certains cabinets croient que s'ils embauchent des avocats noirs, ils perdront des clients.

Community Liaison Meeting

Un certain nombre de participants ont déclaré qu'ils estimaient avoir été obligés de choisir d'exercer seuls en raison des obstacles qu'ils avaient rencontrés dans la recherche d'emplois ou dans les possibilités d'avancement dans d'autres milieux de la pratique. Certains participants estiment également qu'un certain nombre d'avocates et avocats racialisés exercent seuls par défaut et sont mal équipés et mal préparés aux réalités de la pratique à titre individuel.

Plusieurs participants estiment que les avocats racialisés sont plus susceptibles d'exercer seuls et ont mis en évidence la vulnérabilité des personnes qui exercent en cabinet privé dans la profession juridique dans le contexte des plaintes liées à la réglementation professionnelle et les mesures disciplinaires.

Entrée dans la profession

Les obstacles mentionnés ci-dessus ont un impact sur les expériences des titulaires racialisés qui entrent dans la profession juridique. Les résultats du sondage de Stratcom ont également mis en évidence d'autres obstacles qui ont des répercussions sur l'entrée dans la profession. Dans le cadre du sondage, une liste de facteurs a été présentée aux participants racialisés et non racialisés, et on leur a demandé d'indiquer si chacun des facteurs avait constitué un obstacle ou un défi à tout moment avant ou après avoir commencé à exercer<sup>30</sup>.

Quarante pour cent (40 %) des titulaires racialisés ont déclaré que leur appartenance ethnique/identité raciale était un obstacle à l'exercice de leur profession, alors que seulement 3 % des titulaires non racialisés ont mentionné que leur appartenance ethnique/identité raciale représentait un obstacle. Les titulaires de permis racialisés les plus susceptibles de mentionner la race ou l'ethnicité comme obstacle à l'entrée dans la profession étaient les suivants : les Asiatiques du Sud-Est, les Noirs, les Arabes, les Sud-Asiatiques, les personnes ayant une langue maternelle autre que le français ou l'anglais, les femmes et les personnes nées à l'extérieur du Canada<sup>31</sup>.

Alors que les répondants racialisés ont sélectionné l'appartenance ethnique/identité raciale à titre d'obstacle à l'entrée dans la profession dans une proportion nettement plus élevée que tous les autres obstacles évalués, ce facteur a été classé parmi les défis les moins importants chez les répondants non racialisés.

Les obstacles suivants ont également été mentionnés par les avocats racialisés et, dans une bien moindre mesure, par les avocats non racialisés :

- a. apparence physique<sup>32</sup>;
- b. situation socio-économique<sup>33</sup>;
- c. lieu de naissance et lieu où l'on a grandi<sup>34</sup>;
- d. âge (trop jeune)<sup>35</sup>;
- e. la façon de parler anglais ou français<sup>36</sup>;
- f. identité sexuelle<sup>37</sup>.

Le sondage a révélé qu'un pourcentage bien inférieur des répondants racialisés, comparativement aux répondants non racialisés :

- a. ont trouvé un emploi approprié après avoir obtenu leur permis<sup>38</sup>;
- b. ont déclaré qu'on leur a offert un emploi au cabinet où ils ont fait un stage ou un stage de formation professionnelle<sup>39</sup>;
- c. ont trouvé un emploi dans un cabinet approprié<sup>40</sup>; et
- d. été en mesure de travailler dans leur domaine de pratique préféré<sup>41</sup>.

Il y a de grandes différences entre les expériences vécues lors de l'entrée dans la profession et dans l'évolution globale de la carrière. Près de la moitié des titulaires racialisés ont été « fortement ou plutôt d'accord » pour dire qu'ils ont eu de la difficulté à trouver un stage ou un stage de formation professionnelle<sup>42</sup>, et la majorité ont été « fortement ou plutôt d'accord » pour dire qu'ils n'avaient pas avancé aussi rapidement que leurs collègues ayant des qualifications semblables<sup>43</sup>.

Community Liaison Meeting

Les résultats du sondage de Stratcom ont aussi permis de cerner des obstacles à l'avancement dans la profession. On a demandé aux répondants racialisés et non racialisés d'identifier quels facteurs ont représenté des obstacles à tout moment après avoir commencé à exercer.

La plus grande différence entre les deux groupes était l'importance de l'appartenance ethnique/identité raciale, qui est perçue comme un obstacle ou un défi pour l'avancement chez 43 % des titulaires racialisés, comparativement à 3 % chez les titulaires non racialisés.

Les facteurs de croisement avec l'appartenance ethnique/identité raciale sont l'apparence physique, la situation socio-économique de la famille, le lieu de naissance ou celui où l'on a grandi, et dans quelle mesure on parle bien l'anglais ou le français. Ces facteurs ont tous été identifiés comme des obstacles après l'entrée dans la profession par au moins 15 % des licenciés racialisés.

En revanche, chez les titulaires non racialisés, ces facteurs représentent des obstacles après l'entrée dans la profession qui sont comparables ou éventuellement de moindre importance que ceux qui sont associés à l'orientation sexuelle, le sexe, l'âge, le mode de vie et les croyances personnelles.

Les répondants racialisés et non racialisés ont indiqué que les absences du travail pour s'occuper des enfants et d'autres membres de la famille représentaient un obstacle à l'avancement après l'entrée dans la profession<sup>44</sup>. Cet obstacle était toutefois plus important pour les femmes racialisées et non racialisées que pour les hommes<sup>45</sup>.

Le sondage a révélé des différences moindres entre les répondants racialisés et non racialisés en ce qui concerne les difficultés de carrière, comme le démontrent les renseignements ci-dessous :

- a. ils ont convenu qu'ils avaient quitté un ou plusieurs postes parce qu'ils ne se sentaient pas à leur place (42 % des répondants racialisés, et 35 % des répondants non racialisés);
- b. ils ont déclaré avoir quitté un ou plusieurs postes parce qu'ils estimaient que leurs possibilités d'avancement n'étaient pas proportionnelles à leurs compétences et à leurs capacités (40 % des répondants racialisés, et 31 % des répondants non racialisés);
- c. ils se sont vu refuser une promotion à un poste de gestion (13 % des répondants racialisés, et 9 % des répondants non racialisés);
- d. leur admission à un partenariat a été retardée (9 % des répondants racialisés et non racialisés); et
- e. ils n'ont pas été acceptés comme partenaires, même s'ils remplissaient les critères de promotion (6 % des répondants racialisés et non racialisés).

Processus de réglementation

Les participants ont été priés de faire des commentaires sur leur perception du processus de réglementation. Certains se sont dits préoccupés par l'absence de diversité raciale chez les membres du conseil et des comités de discipline. D'autres étaient d'avis que, en raison de leur plus grande probabilité d'exercer seuls, ou de provenir de milieux où une carrière professionnelle est l'exception plutôt que la règle, les titulaires racialisés ont souvent moins de relations parmi les clientèles riches et fortunées et n'ont pas une formation suffisante en affaires pour gérer un cabinet.

Les participants ont indiqué que des facteurs peuvent contribuer à rendre les titulaires racialisés plus vulnérables aux plaintes, la plupart citant fréquemment un manque de ressources, de formation et de possibilités de mentorat. Les répondants racialisés et non racialisés au sondage ont classé le manque de mentors et de réseaux professionnels<sup>46</sup> ainsi que les stéréotypes raciaux des clients au<sup>47</sup> sommet de la liste des facteurs qui peuvent augmenter les risques de plaintes envers les titulaires racialisés.

Les titulaires racialisés et non racialisés avaient des opinions différentes à l'effet que les postes de stagiaire de mauvaise qualité et la formation insuffisante<sup>49</sup> ainsi que les stéréotypes raciaux par d'autres membres de la profession ou de la magistrature<sup>50</sup> augmentent les risques de plaintes et de mesures disciplinaires pour les titulaires de permis racialisés.

À cet égard, le Groupe de travail a examiné les renseignements disponibles concernant les expériences des titulaires racialisés dans le processus de réglementation et a déterminé qu'il y a encore du travail à faire. Les travaux préliminaires effectués jusqu'à présent seront poursuivis.

Le Groupe de travail a aussi suggéré les mesures correctives mentionnées ci-dessous, qui ne sont pas liées à certains groupes raciaux, mais qui peuvent aider les titulaires en général, comme le mentorat et le réseautage.

Certains participants ont déclaré que les avocates et avocats formés à l'étranger font souvent face à des difficultés supplémentaires en raison des obstacles linguistiques, de la socialisation, de la préparation à l'emploi et de l'expérience de travail. Ils estiment que les avantages que les avocats formés à l'étranger amènent dans la profession, grâce à l'expérience de la pratique dans un autre pays, sont souvent sous-estimés ou mal compris.

Les participants ont indiqué que le fait d'être né ou d'avoir fait ses études hors du Canada présente des obstacles potentiels pour les titulaires de permis racialisés. Ils estiment que les avocats formés à l'étranger peuvent faire face à une combinaison d'inconvénients, comme de faibles possibilités de réseautage professionnel, des difficultés linguistiques, une culture différente de celle de leurs collègues, un manque de possibilités lors de la transition entre l'école de droit et un premier emploi professionnel en Ontario, et le manque de mentors et de relations<sup>51</sup>.

Obstacles supplémentaires pour les parajuristes

En plus des obstacles mentionnés ci-dessus qui s'appliquent à tous les titulaires de permis racialisés, certains participants aux groupes de discussion ont indiqué que les parajuristes racialisés semblent faire face à plus de difficultés sur le marché du travail que les avocats racialisés.

Les données du sondage renforcent cette hypothèse. Globalement, les parajuristes en tant que groupe ont obtenu des taux de réussite inférieurs que les avocats pour trouver un emploi approprié.

En ce qui concerne l'indicateur-clé que constitue l'obtention d'un premier emploi approprié, seulement 26 % des parajuristes racialisés ont trouvé un tel emploi, comparativement à 36 % des parajuristes non racialisés. En ce qui concerne l'obtention d'un emploi dans leur milieu de pratique préféré, 37 % des parajuristes racialisés ont trouvé un tel emploi, par rapport à 57 % de leurs homologues non racialisés. De la même façon, 41 % ont déclaré avoir trouvé un emploi dans leur domaine de pratique préféré, par rapport à 67 % des parajuristes non racialisés.

QUESTIONS POUR LES MEMBRES DE LA PROFESSION

Introduction

À partir des résultats ci-dessus<sup>52</sup>, le Groupe de travail a établi des questions en vue de les soumettre à l'examen des membres de la profession et d'obtenir leurs commentaires. Les questions ci-dessous sont présentées selon les thèmes suivants :

- A. L'amélioration des capacités internes des entreprises
- B. Le mentorat, les services consultatifs et le réseautage
- C. L'amélioration des compétences culturelles dans la profession
- D. La discrimination et le rôle du processus des plaintes
- E. Les activités du Barreau du Haut-Canada

Le Groupe de travail désire obtenir des idées, initiatives ou pratiques supplémentaires qui peuvent contribuer à éliminer les difficultés auxquelles les titulaires de permis racialisés font face.

---

A. L'amélioration des capacités internes des entreprises

Selon l'examen de l'embauche dans la profession, certains des obstacles auxquels font face les titulaires de permis racialisés existent dans les processus de recrutement et dans les possibilités d'avancement dans leur carrière. Le Groupe de travail propose que les organismes, y compris les cabinets, améliorent leurs capacités internes d'éliminer les obstacles en envisageant d'adopter les méthodes présentées dans les trois catégories suivantes :

- a. établir des programmes de diversité au sein des cabinets;
- b. recueillir des données démographiques;
- c. établir des programmes de conformité des contrats.

Établir des programmes de diversité au sein des cabinets

Question n° 1 : Comment le Barreau du Haut-Canada devrait-il agir à titre de catalyseur dans l'établissement de programmes de diversité dans les cabinets et pourquoi devrait-il le faire? Des modèles proposés sont présentés ci-dessous, et la proposition d'autres modèles serait appréciée.

- Projet de diversité : Un projet dans le cadre duquel les cabinets et organismes qui offrent des services de conseils internes s'engagent à collaborer avec le Barreau pour élaborer et adopter des normes et des ressources pour le recrutement, le maintien en fonction et la progression professionnelle des titulaires de permis racialisés.
- Auto-évaluation : Un projet dans le cadre duquel les cabinets et organismes qui offrent des services de conseils internes effectuent une auto-évaluation de leurs résultats en matière de diversité et utilisent ces résultats pour identifier et adopter des pratiques et politiques afin de devenir plus équitables et inclusifs.
- Normes sur les exigences : Un projet dans le cadre duquel le Barreau exige des cabinets et organismes qui offrent des services de conseils internes qu'ils adoptent des normes et des ressources pour le recrutement, le maintien en fonction et l'avancement professionnel des titulaires de permis racialisés.

Projet de diversité

La première approche décrite ci-dessus est fondée sur le modèle de projet du Barreau Justicia adopté en 2008. Le projet Justicia est un projet de mixité des sexes dans le cadre duquel plus de 55 cabinets ont signé une entente d'engagement de collaboration avec le Barreau visant à élaborer des ressources pour maintenir les femmes dans la pratique privée et favoriser leur avancement.

Les cabinets participants, en partenariat avec le Barreau, ont mis au point des modèles pour suivre les données démographiques selon le sexe et pour identifier et adopter des principes et des pratiques exemplaires concernant les horaires de travail souples, le réseautage et le développement des activités professionnelles ainsi que le mentorat et le développement des compétences en leadership

pour les femmes. Les ressources de Justicia sont désormais disponibles en ligne pour les membres de la profession dans l'ensemble à www.lsuc.on.ca/projet\_Justicia.

Il y a d'autres exemples d'initiatives semblables : le Réseau des cabinets d'avocats pour la diversité et l'inclusion ainsi que les Leaders juridiques pour la diversité. Il s'agit d'initiatives de cabinets et d'organismes juridiques qui tentent d'éliminer les difficultés associées au maintien en fonction et à l'avancement chez les groupes qui font la promotion de l'équité en collaborant et en favorisant l'adoption de pratiques exemplaires<sup>53</sup>.

Le Barreau pourrait, de la même façon qu'il l'a fait dans le projet Justicia, agir en tant que catalyseur et collaborer avec les entreprises et organismes à développer des ressources pour créer l'infrastructure nécessaire à l'inclusion et élaborer des normes pour mesurer les progrès. Récemment, à la suite d'une consultation auprès des titulaires de permis racialisés, le Barreau du Québec a mis au point un plan d'action de trois ans qui inclut l'utilisation du modèle de Justicia pour remédier aux problèmes liés au recrutement, au maintien en fonction et à l'avancement des titulaires de permis racialisés<sup>54</sup>.

Auto-évaluation

La seconde approche, qui consiste à demander aux entreprises d'effectuer une auto-évaluation de leurs résultats en matière de diversité, ou à les y obliger, est fondée sur le guide de l'Association du Barreau canadien, intitulé Évaluer l'infrastructure déontologique de votre cabinet juridique : Un guide pratique. Ce document a été conçu pour « aider les avocats et les cabinets d'avocats en fournissant des conseils pratiques sur la structure, les politiques et les méthodes des cabinets d'avocats de sorte qu'ils remplissent leurs obligations envers leurs clients, les tiers et le public »<sup>55</sup>.

Le Boston Lawyers Group est composé de grands cabinets, de services juridiques d'entreprises et d'organismes gouvernementaux de Boston qui se sont engagés à trouver et recruter des avocat(e)s de couleur et à favoriser leur maintien en fonction et leur avancement. Ce groupe est passé de 13 membres à sa création à plus de 45 membres. Le Boston Lawyers Group offre des sources d'information aux membres en organisant des forums, des discussions en table ronde, des programmes éducatifs et des salons d'emploi dans le but de promouvoir la diversité dans la communauté juridique de Boston. Le Boston Lawyers Group conçoit également des initiatives pour les écoles de droit, les organismes desservant les étudiants, la Ville et les gouvernements des États, les associations d'avocats et d'autres organismes professionnels et commerciaux. Les membres ont la responsabilité ultime de répondre à leurs propres objectifs de diversité et d'inclusion. Voir The Boston Lawyers Group, About the BLG, en ligne : www.thebostonlawyersgroup.com/about/who.htm

Le Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity fonctionne de la même façon que le Boston Lawyers Group. Le Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity est composé d'entreprises, de cabinets d'avocats, d'organismes gouvernementaux et d'associations juridiques ou d'avocats au Connecticut. Le défi actuel de Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity consiste à augmenter le recrutement, le maintien en fonction et l'avancement des juristes de couleur, non seulement à titre de bonne politique sociale, mais également de pratique commerciale exemplaire. Lawyers Collaborative for Diversity, « Who We Are » <http://www.lcdiversity.com/about/who.htm>.

L'outil d'auto-évaluation est calqué sur l'approche utilisée en Nouvelle-Galles-du-Sud pour la réglementation des cabinets d'avocats constitués en personne morale. Plutôt que d'être tenus de suivre des règles précises, les cabinets sont tenus de s'autoévaluer pour déterminer si leurs pratiques et politiques permettent efficacement d'assurer une bonne conduite professionnelle et d'établir des pratiques et des politiques considérées comme efficaces dans leur contexte précis. Les cabinets qui ont adopté cette réglementation ont obtenu une réduction des deux tiers des plaintes de leur clientèle<sup>57</sup>. Cette approche pourrait être appliquée aux pratiques en matière de diversité, sur une base volontaire ou obligatoire.

Le Law Society of England and Wales a appliqué aux pratiques en matière de diversité une approche volontaire semblable, avec succès. En 2009, il a adopté la Charte de diversité et d'inclusion afin d'aider les cabinets à orienter leur engagement envers la diversité et l'inclusion vers des gestes concrets et positifs pour leurs entreprises, leur personnel et leurs clients<sup>58</sup>.

À ce jour, plus de 300 cabinets ont signé la Charte, ce qui représente plus d'un tiers de tous les avocats de pratique privée. Les cabinets qui signent la Charte de diversité et d'inclusion sont tenus de présenter chaque année un rapport pour montrer dans quelle mesure ils respectent leurs engagements ainsi que les améliorations nécessaires. La Charte est accompagnée d'un ensemble de ressources visant à aider les cabinets à respecter leurs engagements dans les principaux domaines. Les normes permettent de démontrer dans quelle mesure un cabinet d'avocats se conforme aux lois et règlements en matière d'égalité et aux normes en matière de diversité et d'égalité.

Normes sur les exigences

La troisième approche porte sur l'exigence que les organismes de conseillers juridiques et les cabinets adoptent des normes et des ressources sur le recrutement, le maintien en fonction et l'avancement professionnel des titulaires de permis racialisés. Le Barreau élaborerait de telles normes.

En plus de la mise en œuvre de programmes de diversité, le Groupe de travail propose que les cabinets recueillent des données démographiques sur leurs avocat(e)s et parajuristes.

Il y a un certain nombre d'avantages à recueillir des données démographiques, telles que répertoriées ci-dessous, par rapport à la question 2. On estime que de telles données seraient particulièrement utiles pour établir les types de programmes de diversité qui répondraient le mieux aux besoins de chaque cabinet.

Question n° 2 : Quel est le modèle privilégié pour la cueillette de données démographiques et pourquoi? La proposition d'autres modèles serait appréciée.

- À l'aide des données du Barreau : Le Barreau recueille les données démographiques des titulaires en utilisant les rapports annuels des avocats et des parajuristes, déclare publiquement les données démographiques sur la taille des cabinets et divulgue aux cabinets ses propres données démographiques.
- Fournir des modèles : Le Barreau collabore avec les cabinets pour élaborer des modèles uniformes de cueillette de données démographiques et encourage les cabinets à recueillir régulièrement de telles données<sup>59</sup>.
- Exiger des rapports des cabinets : Le Barreau définit les paramètres pour la cueillette volontaire de données démographiques des cabinets et exige que les cabinets déclarent soit qu'ils recueillent ces renseignements, soit la raison pour laquelle ils ne le font pas.
- Cueillette de données obligatoire : Le Barreau pourrait établir des paramètres pour la cueillette obligatoire des données démographiques par les cabinets.

Analyse de base

Certains participants au processus d'études et de mobilisation ont souligné la valeur de la cueillette organisationnelle des données démographiques. Par exemple, certains informateurs clés de Stratcom ont indiqué que des statistiques plus détaillées sur la racialisation au sein des cabinets seraient précieuses, compte tenu d'approches adoptées aux États-Unis, où la transparence de la représentation des cabinets contribue à accroître la représentation au sein des cabinets<sup>60</sup>. Les résultats du sondage de Stratcom indiquent que, bien que la majorité des titulaires de permis racialisés sont en faveur des mesures de cueillette et de partage des données, certains ont exprimé des préoccupations voulant que les mesures puissent servir à établir des cibles en matière de diversité<sup>61</sup>.

Les avantages de la cueillette de données

Le Groupe de travail croit que la cueillette et le maintien des données démographiques sont des pratiques exemplaires. Il y a de nombreuses raisons de recueillir des renseignements démographiques, entre autres les suivantes :

- a. De telles données peuvent être un outil pour accroître les capacités concurrentielles d'un cabinet. De nombreux clients importants aux États-Unis, et maintenant au Canada, présentent des demandes de propositions pour sélectionner leurs conseillers juridiques en exigeant que les cabinets présentent les données démographiques de leur main-d'œuvre. Par exemple, le Groupe sur les services juridiques, affaires générales et conformité de la Banque de Montréal exige la divulgation des statistiques du cabinet sur la diversité dans le cadre de son processus de demande de propositions à l'intention des fournisseurs de services juridiques<sup>62</sup>.
- b. La diversité et les données sur la diversité aident les cabinets à attirer des employés talentueux. Comme les groupes d'étudiants en droit sont de plus en plus diversifiés, il en est de même pour leurs talents.
- c. Le fait de maintenir des données démographiques permet aux cabinets de surveiller la diversité du recrutement et des promotions et d'ajuster leurs pratiques et politiques en conséquence.
- d. Les données démographiques aident les cabinets à améliorer leurs services à la clientèle et leur réputation professionnelle, et à devenir des modèles en s'assurant une représentation sur tous les plans.
- e. Les données démographiques fournissent aux cabinets un contexte à partir duquel élaborer des programmes pour améliorer l'inclusivité.
- f. Les renseignements contribuent à l'élaboration d'initiatives visant à améliorer l'accès à la justice.

Le doyen Lorne Sossin et Sabrina Lyon, dans leur article Data & Diversity in the Canadian Legal Community, soulignent aussi l'importance de la cueillette de données en indiquant que même si le seul fait de recueillir et publier des données sur la diversité ne permettra pas de rendre la justice communautaire plus inclusive, il est difficile, sinon impossible, de voir comment la justice communautaire pourrait devenir plus inclusive sans données fiables et significatives<sup>63</sup>.

Malgré l'importance des données démographiques quantitatives, de nombreux employeurs évaluent leurs progrès en matière de diversité et d'inclusion en tenant compte de mesures plus qualitatives. Sossin et Lyon pensent que lorsqu'un organisme est composé de membres très peu diversifiés, un sondage sur l'inclusion mené dans tout le cabinet mènera probablement à des résultats trompeurs. Lorsque les données sont complétées par des données quantitatives et qualifiées, le résultat devient beaucoup plus clair<sup>64</sup>. La plupart des personnes consultées au cours du projet de Sossin et Lyon ont indiqué que, en tant qu'organisme de réglementation de la profession, le Barreau du Haut-Canada est l'organisme le plus approprié pour diriger les efforts et demander la cueillette et la diffusion des données démographiques.

L'expérience des États-Unis

La cueillette de données est de pratique courante aux États-Unis chez des organismes comme la National Association of Legal Career Professionals (NALP)<sup>65</sup> et Vault<sup>66</sup>, où l'on fait la cueillette de renseignements et la production de rapports qualitatifs et quantitatifs sur la diversité et l'inclusion concernant les cabinets ou les organismes juridiques des États-Unis. Bien que la publication des données ne soit pas obligatoire, elle s'avère un outil de recrutement efficace pour les cabinets et organismes juridiques, qui participent aux initiatives de NALP et Vault par centaines. Actuellement, la filiale canadienne de NALP ne publie que des données démographiques sur le sexe du personnel des cabinets.

Malgré la volonté de nombreux cabinets américains de recueillir des données démographiques, il y a eu certains différends quant à savoir si la cueillette des données a permis d'augmenter efficacement le nombre de titulaires racialisés dans les cabinets américains<sup>67</sup>. Veronica Root, dans son article Retaining Color, indique ce qui suit :

Les données disponibles démontrent que i) un grand nombre de personnes de couleur fréquentent les 25 écoles de droit les plus importantes, ii) un pourcentage bien inférieur d'entre elles sont engagées par de grands cabinets, et iii) un pourcentage encore plus inférieur deviennent des partenaires. Ces données persistent malgré le fait que l'American Bar Association (ABA) et le National Association for Law Placement (NALP) ont commencé à examiner et suivre la diversité démographique au sein des cabinets en 1993. Vingt ans plus tard, seuls de petits gains ont été réalisés dans les efforts visant à accroître la diversité démographique dans les grands cabinets d'avocats<sup>68</sup>.

Il est évident que le manque de diversité démographique est le produit de pratiques et de systèmes autres que la cueillette de données. Toutefois, comme on l'a noté ci-dessus, le Groupe de travail a identifié d'importants avantages à la cueillette de données.

L'expérience du Royaume-Uni

Le Solicitors Regulation Authority (SRA) de la Law Society of England and Wales a adopté une démarche proactive en matière de cueillette de données démographiques. Les cabinets réglementés par la SRA sont maintenant tenus de recueillir des données sur la diversité de leurs effectifs, de rédiger un rapport et de le publier chaque année. La SRA publie des données globales chaque année. Elle élaborera un point de référence afin de permettre aux cabinets d'évaluer leurs progrès<sup>69</sup>.

L'expérience canadienne

Au Canada, au moins trois grands cabinets de l'Ontario recueillent des données d'auto-identification sur la race et l'origine ethnique de leurs employés et membres, sans toutefois publier un rapport public<sup>70</sup>. Un certain nombre d'autres cabinets travaillent à l'élaboration de processus de cueillette de données démographiques, et de nombreux cabinets membres de Justicia recueillent déjà des données sur le sexe de leurs membres<sup>71</sup>.

D'autres organismes de réglementation de l'Ontario ont aussi envisagé d'imposer à leurs membres l'obligation de présenter des rapports sur des questions liées à la diversité. Récemment, la Commission des valeurs mobilières de l'Ontario (CVMO) a entrepris la mise en œuvre finale des modifications à la règle qui obligera, entre autres, les sociétés qu'elle réglemente à divulguer les renseignements suivants relatifs aux femmes chaque année : les politiques concernant la représentation des femmes au conseil d'administration; l'examen par le conseil de la représentation des femmes dans le processus de sélection des membres du conseil; l'examen de la représentation des femmes aux postes de dirigeants lors de telles nominations; détermination de nombres cibles de femmes au conseil et aux postes de direction<sup>72</sup>.

La CVMO mettra en œuvre une approche « se conformer ou s'expliquer », qui oblige les entreprises à soit présenter un rapport sur la mise en œuvre ou l'examen des questions indiquées ci-dessus, soit expliquer les raisons pour lesquelles elles ne l'ont pas fait<sup>73</sup>.

En 2012, l'Association du Barreau canadien a produit un guide pour aider les entreprises à affiner leur approche concernant la diversité et l'inclusion et pour mesurer leurs résultats en matière de diversité<sup>74</sup>. En 2009, la Commission ontarienne des droits de la personne a également produit Comptez-moi! Cueillette de données relatives aux droits de la personne, un guide publié pour aider les organismes à recueillir des données démographiques<sup>75</sup>.

Cueillette de données volontaire ou obligatoire

Il y a des avantages et des inconvénients dans la cueillette volontaire et obligatoire de données démographiques. Même si la déclaration obligatoire peut potentiellement fournir davantage de données fiables, le Barreau du Haut-Canada ne régit pas directement les cabinets et organismes juridiques en ce moment. De plus, Sossin et Lyon ont perçu une résistance et une forte opposition à l'exigence de déclarations obligatoires et ont indiqué que la divulgation volontaire de statistiques démographiques ou assortie de mesures d'incitation est une approche importante à envisager.

Utilisation des données du Barreau

Comme le Barreau recueille déjà des données démographiques sur la race et d'autres données sur, par exemple, la taille des cabinets, le statut des employés dans le cabinet, leur milieu, leur domaine de pratique, l'année de leur admission au Barreau, il pourrait être souhaitable que le Barreau améliore la qualité de ses activités de cueillette de données et devienne la source commune des données démographiques. Cela aurait l'avantage de fournir des données démographiques comparables et, probablement, de rendre la cueillette de données plus efficace. D'autre part, il y a peut-être des avantages à la participation des cabinets à la cueillette de données et à la déclaration de leurs propres renseignements.

Conformité en matière de diversité et de contrats

Question n° 3 : Comment le Barreau pourrait-il collaborer avec des services juridiques internes à l'élaboration de programmes de conformité des contrats types lorsque ces services juridiques internes embauchent des cabinets?

Analyse de base

Comme nous l'avons mentionné ci-dessus, un certain nombre d'entreprises, de gouvernements et d'établissements américains et canadiens exigent maintenant la divulgation des données démographiques sur la main-d'œuvre aux fins d'examen pendant le processus d'évaluation des demandes de propositions. Certains membres de Leaders juridiques pour la diversité, association qui comprend plus de 70 signataires partout au Canada, tiennent compte de la diversité à l'embauche d'employés et dans le cadre de leurs pratiques d'approvisionnement en exigeant des fournisseurs juridiques potentiels de divulguer leurs données démographiques. D'autres exigent qu'au moins un membre des communautés diverses travaille sur leur dossier<sup>77</sup>.

Certains participants au processus de mobilisation ont indiqué que le Barreau était tout désigné pour le rôle consistant à favoriser les politiques d'approvisionnement des entreprises. Afin de promouvoir la diversité dans la profession et de veiller à ce que les titulaires racialisés aient la possibilité de travailler sur des dossiers importants, le Barreau du Haut-Canada pourrait collaborer avec des organismes comme les Leaders juridiques pour la diversité à l'élaboration de programmes de conformité des contrats types qui exigeraient que les fournisseurs potentiels présentent des statistiques sur la diversité pendant le processus de demande de propositions.

B. Le mentorat, les services de consultation et le réseautage

Au cours du processus de mobilisation, on a déterminé que le mentorat et le réseautage sont des éléments cruciaux de la promotion de l'inclusivité dans la profession. Nous avons demandé aux professionnels de fournir leurs commentaires sur les modèles de mentorat, de services de consultation et de réseautage.

Services de consultation et de mentorat

Question n° 4 : Quels sont les modèles de mentorat et de services de consultation privilégiés pour les titulaires de permis racialisés? La proposition de modèles autres que ceux présentés ci-dessous serait appréciée.

En novembre 2013, les membres du conseil ont approuvé la création du groupe de travail sur les services consultatifs et le mentorat (groupe de travail sur le mentorat). Le mandat du groupe de travail sur le mentorat est le suivant :

- a. se renseigner sur les services obligatoires et facultatifs de mentorat et de services de consultation fournis aux avocat(e)s et autres professionnels par leurs organismes de réglementation ou leurs associations professionnelles ou commerciales au Canada et à l'étranger;
- b. élaborer un ensemble de critères pour évaluer l'efficacité de ces services à répondre aux besoins en matière de pratique des membres de la profession juridique en Ontario;
- c. déterminer la gamme des modèles de services de mentorat et de services de consultation, y compris ceux qui sont assistés par la technologie, virtuels, en partenariat avec d'autres organismes ainsi que la centralisation ou la mise en œuvre de mentorats et d'autres ressources qui pourraient être explorées et envisagées;
- d. consulter des intervenants externes sur les objectifs et les pratiques exemplaires pour de tels services;
- e. examiner et déterminer l'étendue possible des répercussions financières immédiates et à long terme pour le Barreau du Haut-Canada;

Le mentorat consiste en un programme officiel ou informel ou en une relation dans laquelle le mentor fournit au stagiaire des conseils personnels et sur la carrière. Dans une relation de mentorat, il n'y a aucun objectif précis établi. Toutefois, les services de consultation sont centrés sur le travail et orientés vers les résultats. Le conseiller/aidant fournit des conseils et évalue et surveille les progrès réalisés. Le conseiller/aidant aide l'employé à développer des compétences particulières pour une tâche ou une difficulté définie.

Le Groupe de travail vous invite à fournir des commentaires sur les modèles de mentorat et de services consultatifs qui seraient les plus utiles aux titulaires de permis racialisés. Vos commentaires peuvent être examinés par le Groupe de travail et par le groupe de travail sur le mentorat. Certains modèles proposés sont présentés ci-dessous, mais la liste n'est pas complète, et la proposition d'autres modèles serait appréciée.

Mentor bénévole ou services de consultation

- a. Mentorat individuel ou services de consultation : Le mentor et son stagiaire se réuniraient régulièrement. La relation de mentorat serait individualisée et personnelle. Les mentors ne seraient pas rémunérés.
- b. Mentorat de groupe : Un mentor formerait une relation de mentorat avec un petit groupe de titulaires. Le mentor et les stagiaires se réuniraient régulièrement en groupe. Les mentors ne seraient pas rémunérés.
- c. Mentorat à distance : Le mentorat serait fourni par un mentor à un stagiaire, principalement par courrier électronique et d'autres formes de communication électronique. La communication électronique pourrait être complétée par quelques appels téléphoniques et des réunions en personne. Les mentors ne seraient pas rémunérés.
- d. Mentorat par équipe : Plusieurs mentors travailleraient auprès d'un groupe de plusieurs stagiaires. Les mentors et les stagiaires se réuniraient régulièrement en équipe. Les mentors ne seraient pas rémunérés.
- e. Mentorat par pairs : Des collègues qui sont à un stade semblable de leur carrière seraient jumelés afin d'échanger des conseils.
- f. Portée limitée des services de consultation : Un conseiller possédant une expertise dans un domaine précis fournirait à un stagiaire des conseils sur une question de fond ou de procédure juridique. Cette relation serait vraisemblablement à court terme. Les conseillers ne seraient pas rémunérés.

Mentor rémunéré ou services de consultation

- a. Mentorat individuel avec un professionnel : Ce modèle fonctionnerait de la même façon que le mentorat individuel bénévole, mais les stagiaires pourraient accéder à un mentor qu'ils choisiraient dans une liste de mentors rémunérés.
- b. Comité de conseillers : Un groupe diversifié d'avocat(e)s et de conseillers parajuristes formés serait payé pour fournir des services de soutien précis à l'intention des personnes qui sont exposées à un risque accru de manquer à leurs obligations professionnelles.

Il est important de souligner que les associations comme l'Association des Avocats Noirs du Canada, la South Asian Bar Association (SABA) et la Federation of Asian Canadian Lawyers (FACL) offrent de précieuses possibilités de réseautage, de mentorat et des programmes d'éducation continue.

Le Barreau du Haut-Canada pourrait déterminer si d'autres programmes de soutien pourraient être mis en œuvre par l'intermédiaire d'associations comme celles qui aident les avocates et avocats et les parajuristes qui font partie de petits cabinets, qui exercent seuls ou qui ont été formés à l'étranger. Des propositions à ce sujet seraient appréciées.

Réseautage

Question n° 5 : Quels sont les modèles de réseautage privilégiés pour les titulaires de permis racialisés? La proposition de modèles autres que ceux présentés ci-dessous serait appréciée.

Le processus de mobilisation a permis d'indiquer que les titulaires racialisés sont souvent plus isolés des réseaux de soutien professionnels. La majorité des titulaires racialisés et non racialisés qui ont participé au sondage de Stratcom ont souligné la nécessité des titulaires racialisés d'avoir un meilleur accès aux réseaux professionnels.

Le Barreau du Haut-Canada pourrait collaborer avec des organismes juridiques et associations d'affinité pour élaborer des possibilités de réseautage plus structurées et planifiées, par exemple, dans le cadre de la formation professionnelle continue. Ces possibilités de réseautage fourniraient aux titulaires racialisés un forum leur permettant d'interagir avec des titulaires de permis racialisés et non racialisés d'autres cabinets et organismes juridiques.

Il est important de souligner que certains participants ont mentionné que les associations n'existent pas pour leur communauté. Par exemple, des parajuristes ont indiqué qu'ils n'ont pas accès à une association de parajuristes racialisés. Il n'y a également aucune association d'avocats formés à l'étranger, malgré les commentaires selon lesquels les avocat(e)s formés à l'étranger sont souvent isolés et n'ont pas accès aux réseaux qui sont si importants pour les petits cabinets et les praticiens qui exercent seuls.

Le programme de l'Université de Toronto à l'intention des avocats formés à l'étranger s'est avéré très efficace pour préparer ces derniers à entrer dans la profession juridique. Toutefois, des réseaux continus en cours d'exercice seraient précieux.

C. L'amélioration des compétences culturelles dans la profession

Les résultats du sondage de Stratcom soulignent l'importance de séminaires de formation professionnelle sur l'équité, la diversité et les compétences culturelles parrainés par le Barreau qui pourraient faire partie du processus d'agrément.

Il y a de nombreuses définitions du terme « compétence culturelle », mais Robert Wright<sup>78</sup> a élaboré la définition suivante : « La capacité d'interagir efficacement avec des gens de différentes cultures. La compétence culturelle comprend quatre capacités essentielles :

- a. Nous devons connaître nos propres points de vue culturels et comprendre en quoi ils diffèrent ou ressemblent à d'autres (auto-analyse critique culturelle).
- b. Nous devons comprendre la réalité sociale et culturelle dans laquelle nous vivons et travaillons ainsi que celle dans laquelle nos clients vivent et travaillent.
- c. Nous devons cultiver des attitudes envers les différences culturelles.
- d. Nous devons être capables de générer et d'interpréter une grande variété de réponses verbales et non verbales (entrevues centrées sur le client) »<sup>79</sup>.

Question n° 6 : Comment le Barreau pourrait-il améliorer la compétence culturelle dans la profession à l'aide de ses programmes de formation professionnelle continue? La proposition d'autres modèles serait appréciée.

- Inclure dans le cours de responsabilité professionnelle et de pratique (RPP) les thèmes de compétence culturelle, diversité et inclusion.
- Fournir des programmes de formation professionnelle continue agréés annuels et volontaires sur les compétences culturelles.
- Exiger que les titulaires effectuent chaque année, ou, moins fréquemment, une heure de formation professionnelle continue en compétence culturelle qui serait intégrée aux trois heures requises de professionnalisme.

Les options suggérées ci-dessus sont proposées afin de s'assurer que les titulaires se familiarisent avec la notion de compétence culturelle au début de leur carrière, dans le cadre du cours de responsabilité professionnelle et de pratique (RPP), et tout au long de leur carrière.

<sup>80</sup> En ligne à www.lsuc.on.ca/articling\_fr

On estime que les programmes d'éducation sur la compétence culturelle seraient bénéfiques pour l'ensemble de la profession. Les règles 2.1-1 et 6.3.1-1 du Code de déontologie soulignent que les avocat(e)s et les parajuristes ont la responsabilité de reconnaître la diversité de la collectivité de l'Ontario<sup>81</sup>. Le Code de déontologie et le Code de déontologie des parajuristes imposent l'obligation de protéger la dignité des personnes et de respecter les lois relatives aux droits de la personne en vigueur en Ontario<sup>82</sup>. La formation en compétence culturelle pourrait être utile pour aider les avocat(e)s et les parajuristes à comprendre cette règle et à s'y conformer<sup>83</sup>.

Il est donc proposé que les programmes de FPC soient offerts à la profession et/ou que l'on exige des professionnels qu'ils suivent une heure de FPC dans le cadre des heures de professionnalisme agréé chaque année ou moins fréquemment.

D. La discrimination et le rôle du processus des plaintes

Question n° 7 : Comment le Barreau devrait-il s'assurer que les plaintes de discrimination soient portées à son attention et qu'elles soient traitées efficacement? D'autres propositions seraient appréciées.

- En mettant à jour le Code de déontologie et le Code de déontologie des parajuristes afin de définir précisément la discrimination systémique et en la combattant, et en élaborant un plan de communication pour la profession.
- En collaborant avec les associations de titulaires racialisés afin d'accroître leurs capacités de présenter des plaintes.
- En affectant un groupe de spécialistes de la réglementation professionnelle des membres du personnel au traitement des plaintes de discrimination raciale.
- En collaborant avec les associations de titulaires racialisés afin d'accroître leurs capacités d'offrir à leurs membres qui ont fait l'objet de plaintes un soutien de type avocat de service.

Comprendre la discrimination

Selon la Commission ontarienne des droits de la personne, la discrimination raciale systémique « découle de politiques, pratiques et comportements qui font partie des structures sociales et administratives de l'organisation et dont l'ensemble crée ou perpétue une situation désavantageuse pour les personnes racialisées »<sup>84</sup>. Le processus de mobilisation a révélé que, souvent, les personnes touchées par la discrimination raciale ne croient pas qu'elles ont la possibilité de se plaindre, car la discrimination est systémique ou elles ne veulent pas se plaindre de peur que la plainte ait des répercussions sur leur carrière.

Les règles du Code de déontologie et du Code de déontologie des parajuristes portent sur la responsabilité particulière des avocats et parajuristes de respecter les exigences des lois relatives aux droits de la personne en vigueur en Ontario et, plus précisément, d'honorer l'obligation de non-discrimination. Le mandat du Barreau d'enquêter sur les plaintes de discrimination systémique n'est pas largement connu. Nous proposons que les règles soient clarifiées et qu'un plan de communication soit élaboré afin d'informer les titulaires que des plaintes de discrimination systémique peuvent être présentées au Barreau du Haut-Canada.

Fournir des ressources à la profession

En plus de recevoir des plaintes relatives à la discrimination systémique, le Barreau pourrait développer des méthodes institutionnelles proactives pour s'attaquer à la discrimination systémique,

---

comme offrir aux cabinets et aux organismes juridiques des guides de pratiques exemplaires et des modèles de politiques.

Le Barreau pourrait également exiger que les cabinets adoptent des politiques et procédures pour lutter contre la discrimination et le harcèlement, et pourrait tenir les cabinets comme responsables de l'échec d'établir et de respecter ces politiques et procédures.

Présentement, le Barreau ne réglemente pas directement les cabinets ni les organismes juridiques. En février 2014, toutefois, les membres du conseil ont approuvé l'élaboration d'un cadre de travail relativement à la réglementation des cabinets (aussi connue sous le terme « réglementation des entités (entity regulation) » aux fins d'examen par les membres du conseil. Ce cadre de travail pourrait être conçu de façon semblable à la méthode d'auto-évaluation qui s'est révélée fructueuse en Nouvelle-Galles-du-Sud. Ce possible changement à l'approche réglementaire du Barreau pourrait lui permettre d'exiger des cabinets de créer des politiques et procédures en matière de discrimination et de harcèlement et de les respecter.

La crainte de déposer une plainte a été mentionnée au cours du processus de mobilisation et, présentement, le droit de se plaindre auprès du Barreau par l'intermédiaire des associations professionnelles n'est pas largement connu.

Le Barreau pourrait souhaiter collaborer avec des associations d'affinité en vue d'accroître leurs capacités de porter plainte pour discrimination raciale et/ou ethnique. La possibilité de déposer une plainte par l'intermédiaire d'une association peut réduire le risque que la plainte ait un impact négatif sur la carrière du plaignant. Le Groupe de travail souhaiterait obtenir d'autres suggestions sur la façon d'améliorer les politiques et les pratiques de sorte que les personnes puissent se sentir plus à l'aise de s'adresser au Barreau pour se plaindre de discrimination raciale.

Étant donné que les cas de discrimination raciale et/ou ethnique sont souvent très complexes, nous suggérons qu'un groupe de spécialistes de la réglementation professionnelle des membres du personnel soit nommé pour s'occuper de tels cas. Ce groupe de spécialistes participerait à des programmes de formation approfondie sur la compétence culturelle et la discrimination raciale afin de les rendre sensibles à la nature de ces cas et des parties concernées.

Apporter un soutien par le biais du processus

Les participants à un groupe de discussion ont convenu qu'il peut y avoir des facteurs contribuant à rendre les titulaires racialisés plus vulnérables à des plaintes, la plupart citant fréquemment un manque de ressources et de formation ainsi que des problèmes associés à une mauvaise communication et à des malentendus culturels. Ces facteurs, comme le manque de ressources, seraient vraisemblablement pertinents une fois que le titulaire fait partie du processus de réglementation. Par conséquent, le Groupe de travail suggère que le Barreau puisse collaborer avec les associations juridiques pour renforcer leurs capacités d'offrir un soutien de type avocat de service aux personnes qui font l'objet de plaintes.

E. Les activités du Barreau du Haut-Canada

Le Groupe de travail a discuté des initiatives qui pourraient être mises en œuvre à l'interne pour traiter les résultats du processus de mobilisation. Il envisage de recommander aux membres du conseil l'adoption des programmes suivants. Le Groupe de travail souhaiterait obtenir des commentaires concernant ces programmes ainsi que d'autres initiatives internes qui pourraient être examinées par le Groupe de travail.

Initiative 1 : Améliorer le programme de conformité en matière d'équité

Le Barreau améliorerait son programme de conformité en matière d'équité afin d'inclure une demande de données démographiques lorsque l'on retient les services de fournisseurs, de cabinets ou d'avocat(e)s.

Initiative 2 : Mener une vérification interne de l'équité

Le Barreau renforcerait ses politiques et ses programmes en procédant à une vérification opérationnelle de l'équité des services qu'il offre à la profession.

Initiative 3 : Cueillette de données internes

Le Barreau envisagerait la cueillette de données internes complémentaires sur les questions relatives à la racialisation dans le processus de réglementation.

Initiative 4 : Développer une image publique plus diversifiée du Barreau du Haut-Canada

Le Barreau envisagerait des stratégies pour développer une image publique plus diversifiée et inclusive.

Analyse de base

Actuellement, dans le cadre de son processus d'appel d'offres, le Barreau exige que les fournisseurs ayant plus de 50 employés et les cabinets comprenant plus de 50 avocats se conforment au Code des droits de la personne, à la Loi sur la santé et la sécurité au travail (LSST), s'il y a lieu, et à la Politique de prévention contre le harcèlement et la discrimination du Barreau du Haut-Canada.

Le Barreau pourrait renforcer les exigences du programme de conformité en matière d'équité en incluant une demande d'examen des données démographiques au cours du processus de sélection.

Le Barreau du Haut-Canada s'est également engagé à faire en sorte que ses politiques, ses programmes et ses pratiques soient inclusifs et accessibles. Afin de s'en assurer, le Barreau pourrait demander à une tierce partie externe de mener une vérification opérationnelle de l'équité des services qu'elle offre à la profession. Cette vérification se concentrerait sur les employés du Barreau qui offrent des services directement à la profession. Une vérification de l'équité permettrait d'identifier les difficultés et progrès reliés à l'intégration des principes et pratiques d'équité dans les activités du Barreau.

Le Barreau pourrait aussi déterminer si des données supplémentaires, de meilleures données ou d'autres renseignements devraient être recueillis à l'interne concernant les questions de réglementation, y compris les plaintes et les enquêtes, relativement à l'incidence et à l'impact de la racialisation.

Un nombre important de participants racialisés et non racialisés au processus de mobilisation approuvent la suggestion que le Barreau développe une image publique plus diversifiée et inclusive. Le Barreau pourrait envisager des initiatives qui rendraient son image publique plus diversifiée et inclusive. On pourrait obtenir des commentaires du Groupe consultatif en matière d'équité, qui est composé d'associations partenaires et de membres individuels qui possèdent une expertise dans les questions liées à l'équité et à la diversité. Le Groupe de travail sur la gouvernance pourrait obtenir le soutien du personnel et des commentaires supplémentaires du Service de l'équité, du Service des affaires publiques et du Service des communications du Barreau.

CONCLUSION

Le Barreau s'est engagé à promouvoir une profession qui est représentative de tous les peuples de l'Ontario et qui est inclusive et exempte de discrimination et de harcèlement. Le processus de mobilisation a cerné un certain nombre d'obstacles qui touchent les titulaires racialisés tout au long de leur carrière.

Le Groupe de travail a examiné ces obstacles et les défis à relever en raison de la discrimination, du racisme flagrant, des différences culturelles, du manque de mentors, de parraineurs, de modèles et de possibilités de réseautage et en raison d'autres facteurs systémiques. Par conséquent, il a cerné un certain nombre d'initiatives possibles qui pourraient relever certains de ces défis.

Les initiatives proposées sont présentées à la profession, et nous vous invitons à nous faire part de vos commentaires.

Nous vous invitons à nous faire part de vos commentaires sur l'ensemble du présent document et sur toute question abordée. De plus, nous souhaitons obtenir des propositions de solutions non présentées dans ce document.

Annexe 1 — Racialisation et taille des cabinets selon les données du Barreau sur les avocats et les parajuristes d'avril 2014

Tableau 1 — Professionnels exerçant seuls — en pourcentages

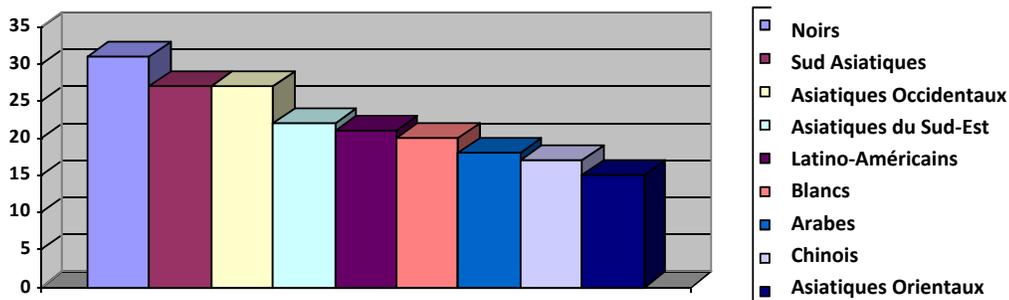

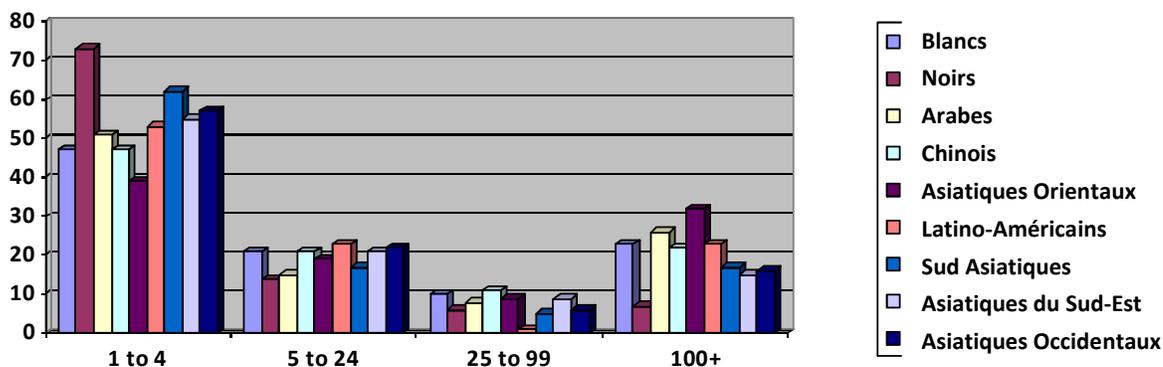

Tableau 2 — Par taille du cabinet — en pourcentages

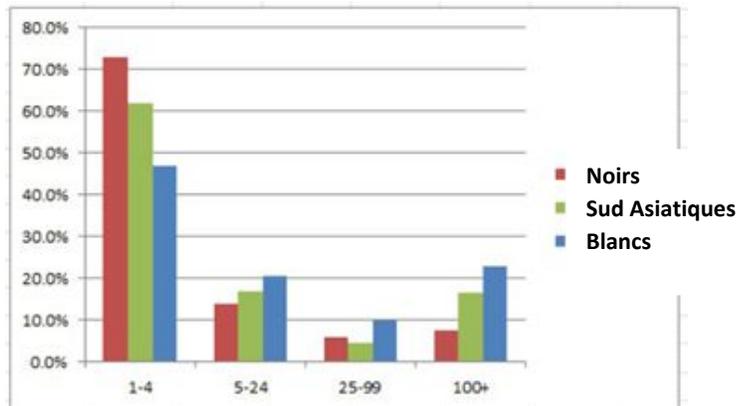

Le tableau 1 montre que les avocates et avocats Noirs, Sud-Asiatiques et Asiatiques Occidentaux sont proportionnellement plus susceptibles d'exercer seuls.

Le tableau 2 montre que les avocates et avocats Noirs et Sud-Asiatiques sont proportionnellement plus susceptibles d'exercer seuls ou dans de petits cabinets et proportionnellement beaucoup moins susceptibles d'exercer dans de grands ou moyens cabinets.

Le tableau 2 est difficile à interpréter, car il comporte une comparaison entre plusieurs groupes. Pour faciliter sa compréhension, le tableau 3 ci-dessous montre la taille des cabinets dans lesquels exercent les avocats Noirs, Blancs et Sud-Asiatiques.

Tableau 3 — Par taille du cabinet — en pourcentages

Le tableau 3 montre plus clairement les différentes tendances des cabinets où exercent les avocats Noirs, Sud-Asiatiques et Blancs. Les avocates et avocats Noirs et, dans une moindre mesure, les Sud-Asiatiques, exercent de façon disproportionnée dans les plus petits cabinets. Il y a relativement peu d'avocats Noirs qui exercent dans les cabinets les plus grands, alors que les proportions d'avocats Sud-Asiatiques et des Avocats Blancs dans les plus grands cabinets ne sont pas si différents.

Annexe 2 – Questions à la professionÉtablir des programmes de diversité au sein des cabinets

Question n° 1 : Comment le Barreau du Haut-Canada devrait-il agir à titre de catalyseur dans l'établissement de programmes de diversité dans les cabinets et pourquoi devrait-il le faire ?

Question n° 2 : Quel est le modèle privilégié pour la cueillette de données démographiques et pourquoi?

Question n° 3 : Comment le Barreau pourrait-il collaborer avec des services juridiques internes à l'élaboration de programmes de conformité des contrats types lorsque ces services juridiques internes embauchent des cabinets?

Services de consultation et de mentorat

Question n° 4 : Quels sont les modèles de mentorat et de services de consultation privilégiés pour les titulaires de permis racialisés ?

Réseautage

Question n° 5 : Quels sont les modèles de réseautage privilégiés pour les titulaires de permis racialisés? La proposition de modèles autres que ceux présentés ci-dessous serait appréciée.

L'amélioration des compétences culturelles dans la profession

Question n° 6 : Comment le Barreau pourrait-il améliorer la compétence culturelle dans la profession à l'aide de ses programmes de formation professionnelle continue ?

THE EVOLUTION OF LEGAL INFORMATION AND LIBRARY SERVICES IN ONTARIO

The Treasurer spoke to the report for information, outlined the next steps in the transition to a new structure and thanked the members of the Legal Information and Support Services Working Group for their work on this initiative.

MOTION

It was moved by Mr. Strosberg, seconded by Ms. Backhouse, that Convocation direct the Law Society administration not to make any decision about moving discipline hearings to a location outside of Osgoode Hall until Convocation has had an opportunity to debate the matter.

Not Put

The Treasurer ruled Mr. Strosberg's motion out of order.

Following an appeal of the Treasurer's ruling, a debate on the appeal was conducted.

Convocation voted to uphold the Treasurer's ruling.

Tab 8*THE EVOLUTION OF LEGAL INFORMATION AND LIBRARY SERVICES IN ONTARIO

(October 15, 2014)

The efficient, effective and forward-looking delivery of legal information services is a critical component of a modern and competent legal profession. Almost 15 years ago the delivery of library services was critically examined and significant changes undertaken. No system-wide examination has taken place since then. While those improvements moved the delivery of legal information services forward, rapid changes in the legal landscape, the profession and the public's interaction with the legal system since then, as well as increasing recognition that some of the goals of that earlier reform have not been realized, make it essential to consider the issue further at this time.

Although some aspects of the library system and the delivery of legal information and support services have not changed since the last examination, many others and, in particular the landscape in which library services exist, have. The explosion of technology, changes in the legal publishing field and the development of CanLII, access to justice issues, and library funding changes are all relevant to any consideration of libraries in the 21st century.

The preliminary fact-gathering, issue identification and analysis and advice that the Library Information and Support Services Working Group (the LISS Working Group) has provided to the Treasurer, and with which the shareholders agree, make clear that now is the time to move forward with the examination of the County Courthouse Library System (the Library System).

The work of the LISS Working Group, first and foremost, concluded and affirmed that there is a significant and important role for courthouse libraries in Ontario both in the provision of legal information and for the development and maintenance of professional competence.

The LISS working group also concluded that there was significant room to improve service, find efficiencies and reform the overall system. It finally concluded that any efficiencies or reform should be based on the following principles, which are essential to any successful systemic change:

1. Relationships built on trust, collaboration, cooperation and accountability among the various stakeholders, who include the county courthouse libraries, law associations, the Great Library, the Law Society and its licensees must be at the heart of the process of implementing changes and efficiencies within the Library System.
2. To ensure a library system that works well, there must be a rational process for decision-making, a meaningful and efficient administrative structure and a system-wide examination looking for efficiencies.
3. There is an urgency to moving forward, particularly in view of funding pressures caused by the rising cost of legal information that is outpacing rates of inflation, and a rapidly changing legal landscape that is having an impact on every aspect of the law, including delivery of legal information services.
4. Legal information services play an essential role in the development, maintenance and enhancement of licensee competence and research literacy, which should be more directly and systemically fostered within the Library System.
5. Positive evolution will be achieved by working with a variety of participants and should include the input of experts in the legal information, library and competence fields. Skills-based participation in visioning and planning will add significant value to the evolution effort.
6. There is also an opportunity to better integrate the use of physical library space and library staff into the administration of justice and goals for increased access to justice.
7. Attention should be paid to enhancing the provision of French-language resources within the Library System.
8. Any discussion about library services must include an examination of potential new sources for funding or money, as well as better use of or redeployment of current funding.
9. There are many successes within the Library System where examples of excellent service to lawyers and the public can be emulated and built upon. Ways should be found to share best-practices and to standardize certain components so that there is a consistent level of service across the province.

The LISS Working Group's fact-gathering process and the preliminary advice on next steps to support the goals for a 21st century approach to the Library System have focused on four main areas: governance, physical space, licensee competence and research literacy, and monetary funding and financial efficiencies.

GOVERNANCE

Effective governance of the Library System must include processes that foster trust among the various stakeholders, including the County Courthouse Libraries, the local Law Associations, the Great Library, the Law Society and its licensees. It must balance their often competing interests.

To make the best use of resources and ensure a system that works, there must be systemic efficiencies, rational processes for decision-making, administrative structures that can be justified in operation rather than in theory and certainty for those both working in and using the system. Governance-related discussions must address current administrative structure and operation of LibraryCo, allocation of funding, regional libraries' role in the system and staffing. Building trust among the various players involved in the Library System will need time and a coherent communication and action plan. It will be important to address issues of accountability of all participants within the Library System.

In parallel to an examination of governance and accountability, an examination must be taken into the funding models for libraries. Currently, the funding model is not based on a rational or consistently applied formula. This leads to inefficiency and uncertainty and is itself a barrier to reform. With a "fresh start" on governance and appropriate reassurances regarding the importance of the Library System, trust can be re-built among the stakeholders and opportunities can be pursued to revitalize libraries, provide other benefits to the local bar and contribute to access to justice.

Courthouse Libraries and Great Library staff are invaluable resources within the Library System and provide an important service to the legal profession. Supporting staff professional development and better coordinating the differing roles of regional, area and local libraries would improve their ability to provide assistance to library users.

Next Steps

In the area of governance, the Treasurer and shareholders received the advice provided to,

- continue the dialogue respecting improving governance of the system, rationalizing its cost, updating and confirming financial information, determining what component parts of the current LibraryCo, if any, should be retained and exploring various ways of improving the Library System's integrated components of governance, management and operations;
- engage in a more open dialogue about overall spending on library & legal information services throughout the Library System (with the Great Library);
- consider whether and how regional libraries may play an expanded and enhanced role in improving the delivery of services throughout the Library System, including through better and more creative interaction between the regional libraries and the Great Library; and
- consider systemic professional development and more coherent consideration of differing roles for staff across the system.

PHYSICAL SPACE

The local County Courthouse Libraries occupy physical space in courthouses. For many years, law associations have utilized the space for multiple purposes building on library services with complementary services. At the same time, the space has potential to be an important community resource both for the legal community and the public for the delivery of a broad range of legal services, including researching the law and facilitating access to justice. Going forward, by expanding the way the space is viewed the space could become an important or useful part of any strategy to improve access to justice. At the same time, considerations of security, client confidentiality and the need for private-bar lawyers to “have their own space” inside the courthouse must be weighed and balanced. While it is true that the transition from relatively passive, closed spaces to more vibrant and active space will require extensive consultation, flexibility and planning, if this can occur, the potential results will be important not only to the members of the public who are accessing legal services but also to the local communities in which the libraries are located.

Next Steps

In the area of physical space, the Treasurer and shareholders received the advice provided to,

- undertake a business case analysis of the potential for increased use of the libraries to provide community legal education, resources for self-represented litigants and access to legal information without disrupting the access by licensees who provide core funding for the resources.

LICENSEE COMPETENCE AND RESEARCH LITERACY

The Library System is an integral component of the Law Society's mandate to ensure licensee competence. Its services and their delivery should, therefore, be focused on best practices, particularly as it relates to the development of legal research literacy and skills and lawyer and paralegal competence. The current system has not been designed to advance this systemic approach or to provide education and training to encourage lawyers and paralegals to accomplish these competence goals. Proper research is the foundation of competence and best practices and libraries and library staff are an invaluable aid to that objective. Library staff is well positioned to assist with legal research literacy for both lawyers and paralegals and expand and enhance that role. There is room for such education to become part of licensees' continuing professional development (CPD) landscape.

Any consideration of this area must address, among other issues, research literacy and the role of library staff in fostering it, access to French language resources, the uses for both electronic and paper resources, the libraries' role in fostering networking, collegiality and mentoring as part of competence, marketing and orientation sessions for licensees.

French language resources are important to the overall competent delivery of legal services in Ontario. Such resources should include precedents, legislation, case law and reference materials. Whereas some resources are currently available, others are insufficient. Concerted efforts to enhance the availability and delivery of French language materials should be the subject of specific discussion and analysis.

There is room for greater interaction within the Library System of licensees and the bench, other stakeholder groups and associations operating within the courthouses or local communities. Law associations and libraries provide opportunities for licensees to get to know and support one another. This is an important component of the Library System and it is especially important for recent and internationally-trained Law Society members who might otherwise become isolated.

Discussion should also take place about increasing paralegal access to the county law libraries so that paralegals benefit from and contribute to the Library System and enhanced use of the spaces. Increasing paralegal access, which is inconsistent across different libraries in Ontario, will enhance their opportunities for networking, collegiality and mentorship.

Law Society members are not always aware of the resources for which they pay or to which they have access, and therefore may not appreciate the value they receive for their fees. There are ways to address this gap and to enhance the use of services.

Next Steps

In the area of licensee competence and research literacy, the Treasurer and shareholders received the advice provided to,

- consider the means by which the Law Society could increase materials available in both official languages to licensees and the public, at reasonable cost, such as through Jurisource, CanLII and County Courthouse Libraries;
- ensure that any improvements to the Library System focus on the central role libraries should play in enhancing licensee competence and research literacy; and
- consider the investigation of a CPD requirement, whether for new calls or all licensees, addressing legal research competency.

Monetary Funding / Financial Efficiencies

Effective use of resources is essential to the success of the Library System, never more so than in an environment of scarce resources, such as money. Possibilities for new sources of funding and ways of better utilizing and redeploying existing funding should be explored.

CanLII is an extraordinary success story that is good news for the legal information system of which the County Courthouse Libraries are an integral component. The importance of CanLII and its continued potential for spectacular growth and improvement at relatively little cost compared to the current model using private publishers is a vital consideration for the Library System's future. Further, such improvement could leverage the investment made to date by the Law Society and secure CanLII's position as a viable and acceptable alternative to existing commercial services.

In the face of cuts and other challenges to funding, as well as in the interest of rigorous analysis of the usefulness of services and delivery mechanisms it is important to consider redeploying existing funding, including eliminating approaches that do not produce necessary results. Revitalizing library spaces to provide better public access, pro bono programs to assist self-represented litigants and seminars to provide both general education to the public about the law and their rights and obligations as well as tools to search the law could all contribute to access to justice. They could also provide possible new funding from a variety of sources, such as the Law Foundation and other granting bodies interested in improving access to justice.

Next Steps

In the area of monetary funding and financial efficiencies, the Treasurer and shareholders received the advice provided to,

- consider establishing a mechanism by which CanLII is bolstered financially to further enable it to develop into a robust, affordable competitor to the private sector publishers; and
- conduct a comprehensive review of alternate sources of funding and opportunities for better use of existing funds within the Library System.

CONCLUSION

The Library System needs to be revitalized in keeping with the contemporary realities of a world in which clients are increasingly taking a more active role in areas of law such as small claims court, family law and less complex cases. Lawyers and paralegals also require constantly updated resources to provide high quality services.

Physical library space is critical to the local law associations who make good use of it. There is also room to enlarge the activities taking place in the libraries. More education to the public and assistance to self-represented litigants can only serve to increase the benefit of having a library in the courthouse and of lawyers and paralegals assisting with information seminars on the law and documentation to explain court processes. Increased access for the public can be achieved while maintaining appropriate after-hours access and reserving portions of the space for lawyers and paralegals.

This Report outlines the significant issues it considers relevant to any continued consideration of Library System improvements. There is a degree of urgency in addressing efficiencies within the Library System. Next steps must be coordinated and coherent and should embrace a willingness of all stakeholders to be flexible in the interests of a vibrant Library System. Collaboration and partnership can hopefully become part of the overall Library System management by the shareholders, partners and stakeholders. Including the input of experts in legal information, library systems and competence will result in recommendations that will provide a well-defined pathway for the future.

The Treasurer and shareholders received the advice provided to,

- consider extending the mandate and scope of the LISS Working Group to flesh out the most immediately promising areas and develop a plan to prioritize the other areas or, continue such work through other avenues with the benefit of expert participation and advice on the future direction of legal information and library services and best practices.

PROFESSIONAL REGULATION COMMITTEE REPORT

Mr. Mercer presented the Report.

Re: Request to Amend Section 49.12 of the Law Society Act

It was moved by Mr. Mercer, seconded by Mr. Sullivan, that Convocation approve amendments to section 49.12 of the Law Society Act to:

- a. exclude information obtained as a result of a trusteeship or freezing order from 49.12; and
- b. clarify that the Law Society may release information under subsection 49.12(2)(f) to prevent harm that is personal, financial, or in the administration of justice, in addition to physical, and that “person” can include an individual or a business entity.

FOR DECISION

REQUEST TO AMEND SECTION 49.12 OF THE LAW SOCIETY ACT

MOTION

10. That Convocation approve amendments to section 49.12 of the Law Society Act to:
  - c. exclude information obtained as a result of a trusteeship or freezing order from 49.12; and
  - d. clarify that the Law Society may release information under subsection 49.12(2)(f) to prevent harm that is personal, financial, or in the administration of justice, in addition to physical, and that “person” can include an individual or a business entity.

Issue for Consideration

11. The Executive Director, Professional Regulation, Director, Public Affairs and General Counsel have been working with representatives of the Ministry of the Attorney General to discuss issues around reporting to law enforcement.

12. Ministry staff have been interested in the Law Society's confidentiality and disclosure requirements and have been receptive to the idea of a legislative amendment.
13. The Treasurer has written to the Attorney General of Ontario to confirm these discussions. A copy of the letter to the Honourable Madeline Meilleur, dated September 10, 2014, is attached as Tab 3.2.1.
14. The proposed amendments will provide greater certainty for Law Society staff and benchers and stakeholders including law enforcement, government, the media, licensees and the general public about the protections provided in section 49.12. Sections 49.3-49.13 of the Law Society Act are attached as Tab 3.2.2.<sup>1</sup>

DISCUSSION

Background and Context

Express Exclusion of Trusteeships from Section 49.12

15. Section 49.12 does not specifically refer to information obtained as a result of a trusteeship. Subsection 49.12(1) states that information that comes to the knowledge of a bencher, officer, employee, agent or representative of the Law Society as a result of an audit, investigation, review, search, seizure or other proceeding under this Part may not be disclosed. Subsection 49.12(2) provides exceptions.
16. The Law Society's authority to apply to the Superior Court of Justice for a freezing order and/or trusteeship order is set out in sections 49.44 – 49.54 of the Law Society Act, reproduced at Tab 3.2.3.
17. The Law Society's authority for trusteeships and freezing orders is distinct from its authority for audits, investigations, reviews, searches, seizures or other proceedings as referred to in section 49.12. The purpose of the proceedings listed in section 49.12 is to determine whether there is evidence of misconduct, incapacity or incompetence on the part of a licensee, whereas an application for a trusteeship or freezing is largely driven by the need to protect property, files and monies belonging to a licensee's clients.
18. The Law Society's Trustee Services department will seek a trusteeship from the Court when such an order is required to permit the Law Society to take over all or part of a licensee's practice, to protect the clients of the licensee. Freezing orders are specifically focused on the licensee's trust account. Only the Superior Court of Justice has the power to grant either a trusteeship or a freezing order.
19. An application for a freezing or trusteeship order, including the affidavit evidence and any other materials used in support of the application, is filed with the Court and must be considered publicly available, subject to the Rules of the Court. Since the application is made to Court and is public, it would be impossible to comply with the confidentiality requirements of section 49.12, if such information was caught by the prohibition.
20. The information relied on in order to obtain a trusteeship or freezing order is intended to be used in a public court process rather than a confidential investigation. If, however, such information must be kept confidential this can be brought before the Court to address as required.
21. When the Law Society obtains a trusteeship, the Law Society becomes trustee of the licensee's practice. This ensures that solicitor-client privilege continues to be protected. The primary difference with 49.12 is that the licensee's consent would not be required under the trusteeship and in fact requiring his/her consent would be inconsistent with the concept of trusteeship.

22. However, information collected for the purpose of a trusteeship does not acquire greater protection when it comes into the Law Society's possession than it would have in the licensee's possession. In order to obtain this information through a production order the police still require client waivers. The court cannot order access to solicitor/client privileged information unless the facts fit within one of the exceptions. The information may be subject to a production order by the police with client waivers, for example. To interpret this otherwise would permit a dishonest licensee to abandon his or her practice and shield it from law enforcement when the Law Society steps in as trustee.
23. As noted above, while the Law Society currently interprets section 49.12 to exclude both information used to obtain a trusteeship or freezing order and information subsequently obtained pursuant to such orders, it would be helpful if this were more clearly expressed in the Act. The information used to obtain the order is typically public already. Furthermore, in most instances, the information obtained as a result of a trusteeship belongs to clients of the licensee and is most likely to be shared with the clients or their new representatives.

Exemption for Risk of Harm

24. Paragraph 49.12(2)(f) permits disclosure of confidential information if there are reasonable grounds for believing that if the disclosure is not made, there is significant risk of harm to the person who was the subject of the audit, investigation, review, search, seizure or proceeding or to another person, and making the disclosure is likely to reduce the risk.
25. The Law Society has broadly interpreted this exception so that:
  - a. "harm" includes physical, psychological or financial harm;
  - b. "person" can include an individual, business entity or the administration of justice.
26. To interpret otherwise would hamper the Law Society's ability to disclose information about a licensee who has misappropriated trust funds, or engaged in mortgage fraud. These circumstances may not disclose a risk of physical harm, but may constitute reasonable grounds to believe that there is a significant risk of financial harm to current and future clients, and disclosure would likely reduce the risk.
27. This interpretation would assist the Law Society in reporting criminal or illegal activity to law enforcement and other regulators such as the Ontario Securities Commission, or the Financial Services Commission of Ontario. The Law Society would only disclose sufficient information required to make the report and would not disclose client information without obtaining client consent.
28. While the current legislation does not prohibit the Law Society from interpreting the subsection in this manner, it would be of assistance if the exception were clarified to make this explicit.

29. The Professional Regulation and Paralegal Standing Committees discussed these proposed amendments at their October 2014 meetings, and are in agreement that this initiative should proceed.

The Honourable Madeleine Meilleur
Attorney General
McMurtry - Scott Building

Dear Minister:

Re: Law Society of Upper Canada Professional Regulation investigations and prosecutions and reports of wrongdoing to other authorities

From time to time The Law Society has information about criminal or other wrongful activity on the part of lawyers and paralegals as a result of its regulatory work. As you are aware, this was the subject of media interest, focusing on the Law Society's obligation to report to law enforcement authorities. Even absent media interest, this is an issue of concern for the Law Society. In keeping with standard instructions, staff regularly assess cases to determine whether any such report should be made. In 2013, the Law Society began a review of its reporting procedures as a result of the adoption of a national law society standard (National Discipline Standards) through the Federation of Law Societies. This standard, which was adopted by Convocation, requires that all law societies have the ability to report information to police.

In reviewing our existing processes in order to comply with the National Discipline Standards, we noted that amendments could be made to the Law Society Act that would clarify our authority to report. Our interest in amendments is focused on section 49.12. This section provides confidentiality protection primarily to clients and others whose confidential and privileged information the Law Society is able to compel under the legislation. More specifically, the Law Society is considering the merits of an amendment of sub-section 49.12(2)(f) to expressly state that the Law Society can disclose information where that would prevent a risk of harm that is physical, otherwise personal or financial to any person.

fax 416-947-7609

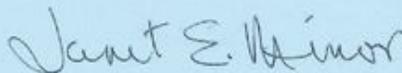

Secondly section 49.12 could be amended to clarify that the information protected under that section does not include information obtained in the course of a trusteeship under the Act. Information held in a trusteeship is not obtained through the Law Society's investigation authority and therefore does not require the same level of protection. Such information can be obtained in the normal course by police with client waivers and production orders.

Law Society staff have been consulting with your Ministry staff on these possible amendments and I am encouraged by the positive nature of these discussions.

In addition to our review of the legislation, the Law Society is also developing a formal written statement to capture its current processes to notify police and other authorities of criminal acts or other wrongdoing. A policy setting out the process for the public is under consideration and will likely be before Convocation shortly. This will improve our ability to explain to media and others how we address this responsibility on a timely basis. In addition, in September 2014 we will be implementing a process to actively alert authorities when a released decision of the Law Society Tribunal discloses evidence of criminal activity.

I look forward to further discussions on this subject as required, and would be happy to meet with you

Yours truly,

Janet E. Minor
Treasurer

Law Society Act*R.S.O. 1990, CHAPTER L.8*SECTIONS 49.3 – 49.13

Last amendment: 2013, c. 17, ss. 1-26.

Investigations*Conduct

49.3 (1) The Society may conduct an investigation into a licensee's conduct if the Society receives information suggesting that the licensee may have engaged in professional misconduct or conduct unbecoming a licensee. 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 43.

Powers

(2) If an employee of the Society holding an office prescribed by the by-laws for the purpose of this section has a reasonable suspicion that a licensee being investigated under subsection (1) may have engaged in professional misconduct or conduct unbecoming a licensee, the person conducting the investigation may,

- (a) enter the business premises of the licensee between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. from Monday to Friday or at such other time as may be agreed to by the licensee;
- (b) require the production of and examine any documents that relate to the matters under investigation, including client files; and
- (c) require the licensee and people who work with the licensee to provide information that relates to the matters under investigation. 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 43.

Capacity

(3) The Society may conduct an investigation into a licensee's capacity if the Society receives information suggesting that the licensee may be, or may have been, incapacitated. 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 43.

Powers

(4) If an employee of the Society holding an office prescribed by the by-laws for the purpose of this section is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that a licensee being investigated under subsection (3) may be, or may have been, incapacitated, the person conducting the investigation may,

- (a) enter the business premises of the licensee between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. from Monday to Friday or at such other time as may be agreed to by the licensee;
- (b) require the production of and examine any documents that relate to the matters under investigation, including client files; and
- (c) require the licensee and people who work with the licensee to provide information that relates to the matters under investigation. 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 43.

49.4-49.7 REPEALED: 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 43.

Privilege*Disclosure despite privilege

49.8 (1) A person who is required under section 42, 49.2, 49.3 or 49.15 to provide information or to produce documents shall comply with the requirement even if the information or documents are privileged or confidential. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 44 (1).

Disclosure by other person, body

(1.1) The Society or the Complaints Resolution Commissioner, as the case may be, may receive from any person or body information or documents in relation to a review under section 42, an audit under section 49.2, or an investigation under section 49.3 or 49.15, even if the information or documents are privileged or confidential. 2013, c. 17, s. 14 (1).

Admissibility despite privilege

(2) Despite clause 15 (2) (a) and section 32 of the Statutory Powers Procedure Act, information provided and documents produced under section 42, 49.2, 49.3 or 49.15 and information or documents described in subsection (1.1) are admissible in a proceeding under this Act even if the information or documents are privileged or confidential. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 44 (2); 2013, c. 17, s. 14 (2).

(2.1) REPEALED: 2013, c. 17, s. 14 (3).

Privilege preserved for other purposes

(3) Subsections (1), (1.1) and (2) do not negate or constitute a waiver of any privilege and, even though information or documents that are privileged must be disclosed under subsection (1) or may be received under subsection (1.1), and are admissible in a proceeding under subsection (2), the privilege continues for all other purposes. 2013, c. 17, s. 14 (4).

Removal for copying

49.9 (1) A person entitled to examine documents under section 42, 49.2, 49.3 or 49.15 may, on giving a receipt,

- (a) remove the documents for the purpose of copying them; and
  - (b) in the case of information recorded or stored by computer or by means of any other device, remove the computer or other device for the purpose of copying the information.
- 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 44 (2).

Return

(2) The person shall copy the documents or information with reasonable dispatch and shall return the documents, computer or other device promptly to the person from whom they were removed. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Order for search and seizure

49.10 (1) On application by the Society, the Superior Court of Justice may make an order under subsection (2) if the court is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing,

- (a) that one of the following circumstances exists:
  - (i) a review of a licensee's professional business under section 42 is authorized,
  - (ii) an investigation into a licensee's conduct under subsection 49.3 (1) is authorized, or
  - (iii) a licensee whose capacity is being investigated under subsection 49.3 (3) may be, or may have been, incapacitated;

- (b) that there are documents or other things that relate to the matters under review or investigation in a building, dwelling or other premises specified in the application or in a vehicle or other place specified in the application, whether the building, dwelling, premises, vehicle or place is under the control of the licensee or another person; and
- (c) that an order under subsection (2) is necessary,
  - (i) because of urgency,
  - (ii) because use of the authority in subsection 42 (2) or 49.3 (2) or (4) is not possible, is not likely to be effective or has been ineffective, or
  - (iii) because subsection 42 (2) or 49.3 (2) or (4) does not authorize entry into the building, dwelling or other premises specified in the application or the vehicle or other place specified in the application. 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 46 (1).

Contents of order

(2) The order referred to in subsection (1) may authorize the person conducting the investigation or review, or any police officer or other person acting on the direction of the person conducting the investigation or review,

- (a) to enter, by force if necessary, any building, dwelling or other premises specified in the order or any vehicle or other place specified in the order, whether the building, dwelling, premises, vehicle or place is under the control of the licensee or another person;
- (b) to search the building, dwelling, premises, vehicle or place;
- (c) to open, by force if necessary, any safety deposit box or other receptacle; and
- (d) to seize and remove any documents or other things that relate to the matters under investigation or review. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 46 (2).

Terms and conditions

(3) An order under subsection (2) may include such terms and conditions as the court considers appropriate. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Assistance of police

(4) An order under subsection (2) may require a police officer to accompany the person conducting the investigation or review in the execution of the order. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Application without notice

(5) An application for an order under subsection (2) may be made without notice. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Removal of seized things

- (6) A person who removes any thing pursuant to an order under this section shall,
  - (a) at the time of removal, give a receipt to the person from whom the thing is seized; and
  - (b) as soon as practicable, bring the thing before or report the removal to a judge of the Superior Court of Justice. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2002, c. 18, Sched. A, s. 12 (2).

Order for retention

(7) If the judge referred to in clause (6) (b) is satisfied that retention of the thing is necessary for the purpose of the investigation or review or for the purpose of a proceeding under this Part, he or she may order that the thing be retained until,

- (a) such date as he or she may specify; or

- (b) if a proceeding under this Part has been commenced, until the proceeding, including any appeals, has been completed. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Extension of time

(8) A judge of the Superior Court of Justice may, before the time for retaining a thing expires, extend the time until,

- (a) such later date as he or she may specify; or
- (b) if a proceeding under this Part has been commenced, until the proceeding, including any appeals, has been completed. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2002, c. 18, Sched. A, s. 12 (2).

Return

(9) If retention of a thing is not authorized under subsection (7) or the time for retaining the thing expires, it shall be returned to the person from whom it was seized. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Seizure despite privilege

(10) An order under this section may authorize the seizure of a thing even if the thing is privileged or confidential. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Admissibility despite privilege

(11) Despite clause 15 (2) (a) and section 32 of the Statutory Powers Procedure Act, a thing seized under this section is admissible in a proceeding under this Act even if the thing is privileged or confidential. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Privilege preserved for other purposes

(12) Subsections (10) and (11) do not negate or constitute a waiver of any privilege and, even though a thing that is privileged may be seized under subsection (10) and is admissible in a proceeding under subsection (11), the privilege continues for all other purposes. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Identification

49.11 On request, a person conducting an audit, investigation, review, search or seizure under this Part shall produce identification and proof of his or her authority. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Confidentiality

49.12 (1) A bencher, officer, employee, agent or representative of the Society shall not disclose any information that comes to his or her knowledge as a result of an audit, investigation, review, search, seizure or proceeding under this Part. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Exceptions

- (2) Subsection (1) does not prohibit,
  - (a) disclosure required in connection with the administration of this Act, the regulations, the by-laws or the rules of practice and procedure;
  - (b) disclosure required in connection with a proceeding under this Act;
  - (c) disclosure of information that is a matter of public record;
  - (d) disclosure by a person to his or her counsel;
  - (e) disclosure with the written consent of all persons whose interests might reasonably be affected by the disclosure; or
  - (f) disclosure, if there are reasonable grounds for believing that,

- (i) if the disclosure is not made, there is a significant risk of harm to the person who was the subject of the audit, investigation, review, search, seizure or proceeding or to another person, and
- (ii) making the disclosure is likely to reduce the risk. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 47.

Testimony

(3) A person to whom subsection (1) applies shall not be required in any proceeding, except a proceeding under this Act, to give testimony or produce any document with respect to information that the person is prohibited from disclosing under subsection (1). 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Disclosure to public authorities

49.13 (1) The Society may apply to the Superior Court of Justice for an order authorizing the disclosure to a public authority of any information that a bencher, officer, employee, agent or representative of the Society would otherwise be prohibited from disclosing under section 49.12. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2002, c. 18, Sched. A, s. 12 (2).

Restrictions

- (2) The court shall not make an order under this section if the information sought to be disclosed came to the knowledge of the Society as a result of,
  - (a) the making of an oral or written statement by a person in the course of the audit, investigation, review, search, seizure or proceeding that may tend to criminate the person or establish the person's liability to civil proceedings;
  - (b) the making of an oral or written statement disclosing matters that the court determines to be subject to solicitor-client privilege; or
  - (c) the examination of a document that the court determines to be subject to solicitor-client privilege. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Documents and other things

(3) An order under this section that authorizes the disclosure of information may also authorize the delivery of documents or other things that are in the Society's possession and that relate to the information. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

No appeal

(4) An order of the court on an application under this section is not subject to appeal. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Law Society Act*R.S.O. 1990, CHAPTER L.8*SECTIONS 49.44 – 49.52

Last amendment: 2013, c. 17, ss. 1-26.

FREEZING ORDERS AND TRUSTEESHIP ORDERS*Application

49.44 (1) Sections 49.45 to 49.52 apply to property that is or should be in the possession or control of a licensee in connection with,

- (a) the professional business of the licensee;
- (b) the business or affairs of a client or former client of the licensee;
- (c) an estate for which the licensee is or was executor, administrator or administrator with the will annexed;
- (d) a trust of which the licensee is or was a trustee;
- (e) a power of attorney under which the licensee is or was the attorney; or
- (f) a guardianship under which the licensee is or was the guardian. 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 63 (1).

Same

(2) Sections 49.45 to 49.52 apply to property wherever it may be located. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Same

(3) An order under section 49.46 or 49.47 applies to property that is or should be in the possession or control of the licensee before or after the order is made. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 63 (2).

Grounds for order

49.45 An order may be made under section 49.46 or 49.47 with respect to property that is or should be in the possession or control of a licensee only if,

- (a) the licensee's licence has been revoked;
- (b) the licensee's licence is under suspension or the manner in which the licensee may practise law or provide legal services has been restricted;
- (c) the licensee has died or has disappeared;
- (d) the licensee has neglected or abandoned his or her professional business without making adequate provision for the protection of clients' interests;
- (e) there are reasonable grounds for believing that the licensee has or may have dealt improperly with property that may be subject to an order under section 49.46 or 49.47 or with any other property; or
- (f) there are reasonable grounds for believing that other circumstances exist in respect of the licensee or the licensee's professional business that make an order under section 49.46 or 49.47 necessary for the protection of the public. 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 64.

Freezing order

49.46 On the application of the Society, the Superior Court of Justice may order that all or part of the property that is or should be in the possession or control of a licensee shall not be paid out or dealt with by any person without leave of the court. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2002, c. 18, Sched. A, s. 12 (2); 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 65.

Trusteeship order

49.47 (1) On the application of the Society, the Superior Court of Justice may order that all or part of the property that is or should be in the possession or control of a licensee be held in trust by the Society or another person appointed by the court. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2002, c. 18, Sched. A, s. 12 (2); 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 66 (1).

Purpose of order

(2) An order may be made under subsection (1) only for one or more of the following purposes, as specified in the order:

1. Preserving the property.
2. Distributing the property.
3. Preserving or carrying on the licensee's professional business.
4. Winding up the licensee's professional business. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 66 (2).

Property subject to freezing order

(3) An order under subsection (1) may supersede an order under section 49.46. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Use of agent

(4) If the Society is appointed as trustee, it may appoint an agent to assist it or act on its behalf. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Search and seizure

(5) An order under subsection (1) may authorize the trustee or the sheriff, or any police officer or other person acting on the direction of the trustee or sheriff,

- (a) to enter, by force if necessary, any building, dwelling or other premises, or any vehicle or other place, where there are reasonable grounds for believing that property that is or should be in the possession or control of the licensee may be found;
- (b) to search the building, dwelling, premises, vehicle or place;
- (c) to open, by force if necessary, any safety deposit box or other receptacle; and
- (d) to seize, remove and deliver to the trustee any property that is or should be in the possession or control of the licensee. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 66 (3, 4).

Assistance of police

(6) An order under this section may require a police officer to accompany the trustee or sheriff in the execution of the order. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Compensation

(7) In an order under subsection (1) or on a subsequent application, the court may make such order as it considers appropriate for the compensation of the trustee and the reimbursement of the trustee's expenses out of the trust property, by the licensee or otherwise as the court may specify. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 66 (5); 2010, c. 1, Sched. 12, s. 5.

Application for directions

49.48 The Society, at the time of making an application for an order under section 49.46 or 49.47, or the trustee appointed under subsection 49.47 (1), may apply to the Superior Court of Justice for the opinion, advice or direction of the court on any question affecting the property. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2002, c. 18, Sched. A, s. 12 (2).

Application without notice

49.49 An application for an order under section 49.46 or 49.47 may be made without notice. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Requirement to account

49.50 An order under section 49.46 or 49.47 may require the licensee to account to the Society and to any other person named in the order for such property as the court may specify. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 67.

Variation or discharge

49.51 (1) The Society, the licensee or any person affected by an order under section 49.46 or 49.47 may apply to the Superior Court of Justice to vary or discharge the order. 1998, c. 21, s. 21; 2002, c. 18, Sched. A, s. 12 (2); 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 68.

Notice

(2) In addition to any person specified by the rules of court, notice of an application under this section shall be given to,

- (a) the Society, if the Society is not the applicant; and
- (b) the trustee, if an order has been made under section 49.47 and the applicant is not the trustee. 1998, c. 21, s. 21.

Former licensees or members

49.52 (1) Sections 49.44 to 49.51 also apply, with necessary modifications, in respect of,

- (a) a person who was and has ceased to be a licensee; and
- (b) a person who was and has ceased to be a member and has never become a licensee. 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 69.

Same

(2) Sections 49.44 to 49.51 apply to property that is or should be in the possession or control of,

- (a) a person described in clause (1) (a), before or after the person ceases to practise law or provide legal services; or
- (b) a person described in clause (1) (b), before or after the person ceases to practise law. 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 69.

Same

(3) In applying sections 49.44, 49.45 and 49.47 to a person described in clause (1) (b),

- (a) a reference to a professional business shall be deemed to be a reference to a law practice;

- (b) a reference to a licence having been revoked shall be deemed to be a reference to a membership having been revoked; and
- (c) a reference to a licence being under suspension shall be deemed to be a reference to rights and privileges as a member being under suspension. 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 69.

Definitions

(4) In this section,

“amendment day” means the day subsection 2 (6) of Schedule C to the Access to Justice Act, 2006 came into force; (“jour de la modification”)

“member” means a member as defined in section 1, as it read immediately before the amendment day. (“membre”) 2006, c. 21, Sched. C, s. 69.

LAWPRO Annual Shareholder Resolutions LibraryCo Inc. Annual Meeting

Purpose of Report: Decision

Prepared by James Varro Director, Policy

FOR DECISION

LAWPRO ANNUAL SHAREHOLDER RESOLUTIONS

Motion

1. That Convocation authorize the Treasurer to sign the shareholder resolutions for the Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company (LawPRO) set out at Tab 2.4.1.

Background

2. As a result of amendments to LAWPRO's By-law No. 1, which the Law Society and all shareholders approved in 2014, the Law Society became the sole shareholder of LAWPRO effective January 1, 2015.
3. Accordingly, LAWPRO has implemented a change in governance process related to annual decisions required to be made by the shareholder of the company. Rather than seeking Convocation's approval for the Treasurer to sign the proxy to be used at LAWPRO's Annual General Meeting, Convocation's approval is sought to direct the Treasurer to sign the annual Resolutions of the Shareholder. The proposed shareholder resolutions appear at Tab 2.4.1.
4. Also included for the information of Convocation is biographical information on the members of the LawPRO Board at Tab 2.4.2 and LawPRO's 2014 Financial Statements at Tab 2.4.3.

FOR DECISION

LIBRARYCO INC. ANNUAL MEETING

Motion

5. That Convocation authorize the Treasurer to sign the proxy in favour of the proposed shareholder resolutions set out at Tab 2.4.4.

Background

6. The Annual and General Meeting of Shareholders of LibraryCo Inc. will be held on May 12, 2015. The notice of the meeting is attached at Tab 2.4.5.
7. At the meeting, the shareholder will be asked to vote on the proposed shareholder resolutions set out at Tab 2.4.6.
8. Traditionally, the Treasurer has signed the proxy to vote the Law Society's shares in favour of the resolutions. The proxy is set out at Tab 2.4.4.
9. The Treasurer seeks Convocation's authorization to sign the proxy on behalf of the Law Society of Upper Canada.

LAWYERS' PROFESSIONAL INDEMNITY COMPANY
(the "Corporation")

RESOLUTIONS OF THE SHAREHOLDER

Dated as of the 24th day of April, 2015

ACCEPTANCE OF MINUTES

RESOLVED that the minutes of the April 30, 2014 Shareholders Meeting are accepted.

FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

WHEREAS the Board of Directors has approved the financial statements of the Corporation for the year ending December 31, 2014;

AND WHEREAS the shareholder has received a report of the auditor which includes statements regarding management's responsibility and the auditor's responsibility and an opinion from the auditor;

RESOLVED that the financial statements of the Corporation for the year ended December 31, 2014 are approved.

ELECTION OF DIRECTORS

RESOLVED that the following individuals are elected directors of the Corporation to hold office until the next annual meeting of shareholders or until their successors are elected or appointed:

George D. Anderson
Clare A. Brunetta
Ian D. Croft (Vice-Chair)
Douglas F. Cutbush
Robert F. Evans
Frederick W. Gorbet
Malcolm L. Heins
Rita Hoff
Robert G.W. Lapper, Q.C.
Susan T. McGrath (Chair)
Barbara J. Murchie
Alan G. Silverstein
Andrew N. Smith
John C. Thompson
Kathleen A. Waters

APPOINTMENT OF AUDITOR

RESOLVED that PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP is appointed as auditor of the Corporation to hold office until the next annual meeting of shareholders at such remuneration as may be fixed by the directors and the directors are authorized to fix such remuneration.

CONFIRMATION OF ACTS OF DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS

RESOLVED that all acts, contracts, by-laws, proceedings, appointments, elections and payments enacted, made, done and taken by the directors and officers of the Corporation to the date hereof, as the same are set out or referred to in the resolutions of the board of directors, the minutes of the meetings of the board of directors or in the financial statements of the Corporation are approved, sanctioned and confirmed.

Consented to in writing by the sole shareholder of the Corporation.

To the Shareholder of Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company

We have audited the accompanying financial statements of Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company, which comprise the statement of financial position as at December 31, 2014, and the statements of profit or loss, comprehensive income, changes in equity and cash flows for the year then ended, and a summary of significant accounting policies and other explanatory information.

Management's Responsibility for the Financial Statements

Management is responsible for the preparation and fair presentation of these financial statements in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards, and for such internal control as management determines is necessary to enable the preparation of financial statements that are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error.

Auditor's Responsibility

Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit. We conducted our audit in accordance with Canadian generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we comply with ethical requirements and plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free from material misstatement.

An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. The procedures selected depend on the auditor's judgment, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements, whether due to fraud or error. In making those risk assessments, the auditor considers internal control relevant to the entity's preparation and fair presentation of the financial statements in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity's internal control. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of accounting estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the financial statements.

We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinion.

Opinion

In our opinion, the financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company as at December 31, 2014, and its financial performance and its cash flows for the year then ended in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards.

Appointed Actuary's Report

Eckler

I have valued the policy liabilities including reinsurance recoverables of Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company for its statement of financial position as at December 31, 2014, and their changes in its statement of profit or loss for the year then ended, in accordance with accepted actuarial practice in Canada, including selection of appropriate assumptions and methods.

In my opinion, the amount of the policy liabilities makes appropriate provision for all policy obligations, and the financial statements fairly present the results of the valuation.

2. Basis of Preparation and Significant Accounting Policies

These financial statements have been prepared under the Insurance Act (Ontario) and related regulations which require that, except as otherwise specified by the Company's primary insurance regulator, the Financial Services Commission of Ontario ("FSCO"), the financial statements of the Company are to be prepared in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards ("IFRS") as issued by the International Accounting Standards Board ("IASB").

These financial statements have been prepared in accordance with accounting standards issued and effective on or before December 31, 2014. None of the accounting requirements of FSCO represent exceptions to IFRS. These financial statements were authorized for issuance by the Company's Board of Directors on February 25, 2015.

The significant accounting policies used in the preparation of these financial statements are summarized below. These accounting policies conform, in all material respects, to IFRS.

Basis of measurement

The financial statements have been prepared under the historical cost basis, except for certain financial instruments that are measured at the end of each reporting period, as explained in the accounting policies below. Historical cost is generally based on the fair value of the consideration given for goods and services.

Fair value is the price that would be received to sell an asset or paid to transfer a liability in an orderly transaction between market participants at the measurement date, regardless of whether that price is directly observable or estimated using another valuation technique. In estimating the fair value of an asset or liability, the Company takes into account the characteristics of the asset or liability that market participants would likely take into account when pricing the asset or liability at the measurement date. A fair value measurement of a non-financial asset takes into account a market participant's ability to generate economic benefits by using the asset in its highest and best use or by selling it to another market participant that would use the asset in its highest and best use. Fair value for measurement and/or disclosure purposes in these financial statements is determined on such a basis, except for example, lease transactions that are within the scope of IAS 17 "Leases", and measurements that have some similarities to fair value but are not fair value, such as value in use in IAS 36 "Impairment of Assets".

The valuation process includes utilizing market driven fair value measurements from active markets where available, considering other observable and unobservable inputs and employing valuation techniques which make use of current market data. Considerable judgement may be required in interpreting market data used to develop the estimates of fair value. Accordingly, the estimates presented in these financial statements are not necessarily indicative of the amounts that would be realized in a current market exchange.

The Company utilizes a fair value hierarchy to categorize the inputs used in valuation techniques to measure fair value, which prioritizes these inputs into three broad levels. The level in the fair value hierarchy within which the fair value measurement is categorized in its entirety is determined on the basis of the lowest level input that is significant to the fair value measurement in its entirety. For this purpose, the significance of an input is assessed against the fair value measurement in its entirety. The three levels of the fair value hierarchy are:

Level 1 – Quoted market prices in active markets

Inputs to Level 1, the highest level of the hierarchy, reflect fair values that are quoted prices (unadjusted) in active markets for identical assets and liabilities. An active market is considered to be one in which transactions for the asset or liability occur with sufficient frequency and volume to provide pricing information on an ongoing basis. Level 1 assets and liabilities include debt and equity securities, quoted unit trusts and derivative contracts that are traded in an active exchange market, as well as certain government and agency mortgage-backed debt securities that are highly liquid and are actively traded in over-the-counter markets.

Level 2 – Modelled with significant observable market inputs

Inputs to Level 2 fair values are inputs, other than quoted prices within Level 1 prices, that are observable or can be corroborated by observable market data for substantially the full term of the assets or liabilities. Level 2 inputs include: quoted prices for similar (i.e. not identical) assets and liabilities in active markets; quoted prices for identical or similar assets and liabilities in markets that are not active, the prices are not current, or price quotations vary substantially either over time or among market makers, or in which little information is released publicly; inputs other than quoted prices that are observable for the asset or liability (for example, interest rates and yield curves observable at commonly quoted intervals, volatilities, prepayment spreads, loss severities, credit risks, and default rates); and inputs that are derived principally from, or corroborated by, observable market data by correlation or other means (market corroborated inputs). Valuations incorporate credit risk by adjusting the spread above the yield curve for government treasury securities for the appropriate amount of credit risk for each issuer, based on observed market transactions. To the extent observed market spreads are either not used in valuing a security, or do not fully reflect liquidity risk, the valuation methodology reflects a liquidity premium. Examples of these are securities measured using discounted cash flow models based on market observable swap yields, and listed debt or equity securities in a market that is inactive. This category generally includes government and agency mortgage-backed debt securities and corporate debt securities.

Level 3 – Modelled with significant unobservable market inputs

Inputs to Level 3 are unobservable, supported by little or no market activity, and are significant to the fair value of the assets or liabilities. Unobservable inputs may have been used to measure fair value to the extent that observable inputs are not available, thereby allowing for situations in which there is little, if any, market activity for the asset or liability at the measurement date (or market information for the inputs to any valuation models). As such, unobservable inputs reflect the assumptions the business unit considers that market participants would use in pricing the asset or liability. Where estimates are used, these are based on a combination of independent third-party evidence and internally developed models, calibrated to market observable data where possible. Level 3 assets and liabilities generally include certain private equity investments, certain asset-backed securities, highly structured, complex or long-dated derivative contracts, and certain collateralized debt obligations where independent pricing information was not able to be obtained for a significant portion of the underlying assets.

Use of estimates and judgments made by management

The preparation of financial statements requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the reported amounts of assets and liabilities and disclosure of contingent assets and liabilities at the date of the financial statements and the reported amounts of revenues and expenses during the reporting period. Actual results could differ from these estimates and changes in estimates are recorded in the reporting period in which they are determined. Key estimates are discussed in the following accounting policies and applicable notes.

Financial instruments – recognition and measurement

Financial assets are classified as fair value through profit or loss (“FVTPL”), available-for-sale, held to maturity or loans and receivables. Financial liabilities are classified as FVTPL or as other financial liabilities. These classifications are determined based on the characteristics of the financial assets and liabilities, the company's choice and/or the company's intent and ability. As permitted under the IFRS standards, a company has the ability to designate any financial instrument irrevocably, on initial recognition or adoption of the standards, as FVTPL provided certain criteria are met.

The Company's financial assets and liabilities are measured on the statement of financial position at fair value on initial recognition and are subsequently measured at fair value or amortized cost depending on their classification as indicated below.

Transaction costs for FVTPL investments are expensed in the current period, and for all other categories of investments are capitalized and, when applicable, amortized over the expected life of the investment. The Company accounts for the purchase and sale of securities using trade date accounting. Realized gains or losses on disposition are determined on an average cost basis.

The effective interest method is used to calculate amortization/accretion of premiums or discounts on fixed income securities over the relevant period. The effective interest rate is the rate that exactly discounts estimated future cash receipts (including all fees and points paid or received that form an integral part of the effective interest rate, transaction costs and other premiums or discounts) through the expected life of the fixed income security, or, where appropriate, a shorter period, to the net carrying amount on initial recognition.

Financial assets at fair value through profit or loss

Financial assets at FVTPL are measured at fair value in the statement of financial position with realized gains and losses and net changes in unrealized gains and losses recorded in net investment income along with dividends and interest earned.

The Company maintains an investment portfolio, referred to as the cash-flow matched portfolio, which is designated as FVTPL. This portfolio is invested with the primary objective of matching the cash inflows from fixed income investment securities with the expected timing and magnitude of future payments of claims and adjustment expenses. The cash-flow matched portfolio represents a significant component of the Company's risk management strategy for meeting its claims obligations. The designation of the financial assets in the cash-flow matched investment portfolio as FVTPL is intended to significantly reduce the measurement or recognition inconsistency that would otherwise arise from measuring assets, liabilities, and gains and losses under different accounting methods. Interest rate movements cause changes in the values of the investment portfolio and of discounted estimated future claims liabilities. As the changes in values of the matched portfolio and of the discounted estimated future claims liabilities flow through profit or loss, the result is an offset of a significant portion of these changes.

Cash and cash equivalents are also classified as FVTPL. Cash and cash equivalents consist of cash on deposit and short-term investments that mature in three months or less from the date of acquisition. The net gain or loss recognized incorporates any interest earned on the financial asset.

Available-for-sale financial assets

Financial assets classified as available-for-sale are measured at fair value in the statement of financial position. Net interest income, including amortization of premiums and the accretion of discounts, are recorded in investment income in profit or loss. Dividend income on common and preferred shares is included in investment income on the ex-dividend date. Changes in fair value of available-for-sale fixed income securities resulting from changes to foreign exchange rates are recognized in net investment income as incurred. Changes in the fair value of available-for-sale fixed income securities related to the underlying investment in its issued currency, as well as all elements of fair value changes of available-for-sale equity securities, are recorded to unrealized gains and losses in accumulated other comprehensive income ("AOCI") until disposition or impairment is recognized, at which time the cumulative gain or loss is reclassified to net investment income in profit or loss. When a reliable estimate of fair value cannot be determined for equity securities that do not have quoted market prices in an active market, the security is valued at cost.

Financial assets in the Company's surplus portfolio (consisting of all investments outside the cash-flow matched portfolio), including fixed income securities and equities, are designated as available-for-sale.

Other financial assets and liabilities

The Company has not designated any financial assets as held to maturity. Loans and receivables and other financial liabilities are carried at amortized cost using the effective interest rate method. Given the short term nature of other financial assets and other financial liabilities, amortized cost approximates fair value.

Property and equipment

Property and equipment are recorded in the statement of financial position at cost less accumulated amortization. Amortization is charged to operating expense on a straight-line basis over the estimated useful lives of the assets as follows:

Furniture and fixtures	5 years
Computer equipment	3 years
Computer software	1 to 3 years
Leasehold improvements	Term of lease

An item of property and equipment is derecognized upon disposal or when no future economic benefits are expected to arise from the continued use of the asset. Any gain or loss arising from the disposal or retirement of an item of property and equipment is determined as the difference between the sales proceeds and the carrying amount of the asset and is recognized immediately in profit or loss.

Intangible Assets

Intangible assets with finite useful lives that are acquired separately are carried at cost, less any applicable accumulated amortization and accumulated impairment losses. Once an acquired intangible asset is available for use, amortization is recognized on a straight-line basis over its estimated useful life. The estimated useful life and amortization method are reviewed at the end of each reporting period, with the effect of any changes in estimate being accounted for on a prospective basis.

An intangible asset is derecognized on disposal, or when no future economic benefits are expected from its use or disposal. Gains and losses arising from derecognition of an intangible asset, measured as the difference between the net disposal proceeds and the carrying cost of the asset, are recognized in profit and loss when the asset is derecognized.

Impairment

Financial Assets

Available-for-sale financial assets are tested for impairment on a quarterly basis. Objective evidence of impairment for fixed income securities includes financial difficulty of the issuer, bankruptcy or defaults and delinquency in payments of interest or principal. Objective evidence of impairment for equities includes a significant or prolonged decline in fair value of the equity below cost or changes with adverse effects that have taken place in the technological, market, economic or legal environment in which the issuer operates that indicates the cost of the security may not be recovered. In general, an equity security is considered impaired if the decline in fair value relative to cost has been either at least 25% for a continuous nine-month period or more than 40% at the end of the reporting period, or been in an unrealised loss position for a continuous period of 18 months.

Where there is objective evidence that an available-for-sale asset is impaired, the loss accumulated in AOCI is reclassified to net investment income. Once an impairment loss is recorded to profit or loss, the loss can only be reversed into income for fixed income securities to the extent a subsequent increase in fair value can be objectively correlated to an event occurring after the loss was recognized. Following impairment loss recognition, further decreases in fair value are recorded as an impairment loss to profit or loss, while a subsequent recovery in fair value for equity securities, and fixed income securities that do not qualify for loss reversal treatment, are recorded to other comprehensive income ("OCI"). Interest continues to be accrued, but at the effective rate of interest based on the fair value at impairment, and dividends of equity securities are recognized in income when the Company's right to receive payment has been established.

Non-Financial Assets

At the end of each reporting period, the Company reviews the carrying amount of its property and equipment, intangible assets and other non-financial assets to determine whether there is any indication that those assets have suffered an impairment loss. If any indication exists, the recoverable amount of the asset is estimated in order to determine the extent of the impairment loss, if any. When it is not possible to estimate the recoverable amount of an individual asset, the Company estimates the recoverable amount of the cash-generating unit to which the asset belongs. Intangible assets not yet available for use are tested for impairment at least annually, and whenever there is an indication that the asset may be impaired.

Recoverable amount is the higher of fair value less costs of disposal and value in use. In assessing value in use, the estimated future cash flows are discounted to their present value using a pre-tax discount rate that reflects current market assessments of the time value of money and the risks specific to the asset for which the estimates of future cash flows have not been adjusted. If the recoverable amount of an asset (or cash-generating unit) is estimated to be less than its carrying amount, the carrying amount of the asset (or cash-generating unit) is reduced to its recoverable amount. An impairment loss is recognized immediately in profit or loss. If an impairment loss subsequently reverses, the carrying amount of the asset (or cash-generating unit) is increased to the revised estimate of its recoverable amount, but so that the increased carrying amount does not exceed the carrying amount that would have been determined had no impairment loss been recognized for the asset (or cash-generating unit) in prior years. A reversal of impairment loss is recognized immediately in profit or loss.

Foreign currency translation

The Canadian dollar is the functional and presentation currency of the Company. Transactions in foreign currencies are translated into Canadian dollars at rates of exchange at the time of such transactions. Monetary assets and liabilities are translated at current rates of exchange, with all translation differences recognized in investment income in the current period. Non-monetary assets and liabilities are translated at the date the fair value is determined, with the translation differences recognized in AOCI until disposition or impairment of the underlying asset or liability.

Premium-related balances

The Company issues two types of professional liability policies: a primary lawyer's errors and omissions policy and an excess policy increasing the insurance coverage limit to a maximum of $9 million per claim/$9 million in the aggregate above the $1 million per claim/$2 million aggregate levels provided by the primary policy; and a title insurance policy. Insurance policies written under the professional liability insurance program are effective on a calendar year basis. Professional liability insurance premium income is earned on a pro rata basis over the term of coverage of the underlying insurance policies, which is generally one year, except for policies for retired lawyers, which have terms of up to five years. Title insurance premiums are earned at the inception date of the policies.

Unearned premiums reported on the statement of financial position represent the portion of premiums written that relate to the unexpired risk portion of the policy at the end of the reporting period.

Premiums receivable are recorded in the statement of financial position as amounts due from insureds, net of any required provision for doubtful amounts. Premiums received from insureds in advance of the effective date of the insurance policy are recorded as amounts due to insureds in the statement of financial position.

The Company defers policy acquisition expenses, primarily premium taxes on its written professional liability insurance premiums, to the extent these costs are considered recoverable. These costs are expensed on the same basis that the related premiums are earned. The method to determine recoverability of deferred policy acquisition expenses takes into consideration future claims and adjustment expenses to be incurred as premiums are earned and anticipated net investment income. Deferred policy acquisition expenses are not material at year-end, and therefore the Company's policy is to not recognize an asset on the statement of financial position.

Unpaid claims and adjustment expenses

The provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses includes an estimate of the cost of projected final settlements of insurance claims incurred on or before the date of the statement of financial position, consisting of case estimates prepared by claims adjusters and a provision for incurred but not reported claims ("IBNR") calculated based on accepted actuarial practice in Canada as required by the Canadian Institute of Actuaries ("CIA"). These estimates include the full amount of all expected expenses, including related investigation, settlement and adjustment expenses, net of any anticipated salvage and subrogation recoveries. The professional liability insurance policy requires insureds to pay deductibles to the maximum extent of $25,000 on each individual claim, subject to an additional $10,000 for certain claims involving an administrative dismissal. Expected deductible recoveries on paid and unpaid claims are recognized net of any required provision for uncollectible accounts at the same time as the related claims liability.

The provision takes into consideration the time value of money using discount rates based on the estimated market value based yield to maturity of the underlying assets backing these liabilities, with reductions for estimated investment-related expense and credit risk. A provision for adverse deviations ("PfAD") is then added to the discounted liabilities, to allow for possible deterioration of experience in claims development, recoverability of reinsurance balances and investment risk, in order to generate the actuarial present value.

These estimates of future claims payments and adjustment expenses are subject to uncertainty and are selected from a wide range of possible outcomes. All provisions are periodically reviewed and evaluated in light of emerging claims experience and changing circumstances. The resulting changes in estimates of the ultimate liability are reported as net claims and adjustment expenses in the reporting period in which they are determined.

Reinsurance

In the normal course of business, the Company enters into per claim and excess of loss reinsurance contracts with other insurers in order to limit its net exposure to significant losses. Amounts relating to reinsurance in respect of the premiums and claims-related balances in the statements of financial position and profit or loss are recorded separately.

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

Premiums ceded to reinsurers are presented before deduction of broker commission and any premium-based taxes or duty. Amounts recoverable from reinsurers are estimated and recognized in a manner consistent with the Company's method of determining the underlying provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses covered by the reinsurance contract. Amounts recoverable from reinsurers are assessed for indicators of impairment at the end of each reporting period. An impairment loss is recognized and the amount recoverable from reinsurers is reduced by the amount by which the carrying value exceeds the expected recoverable amount under the impairment analysis.

Ceding commissions, which relate to amounts received from the Company's reinsurers on the placement of its reinsurance contracts, is earned into income on a pro rata basis over the contract period.

Income taxes

Income tax expense is recognized in profit or loss and the statement of profit or loss and other comprehensive income. Current tax is based on taxable income which differs from profit or loss as reported in the statement of profit or loss and statement of profit or loss and other comprehensive income because of items of income or expense that are taxable or deductible in other years and items that are never taxable or deductible. Current tax includes any adjustments in respect of prior years.

Deferred tax assets are generally recognized for all deductible temporary income tax differences to the extent that it is probable that taxable profits will be available against which those deductible temporary differences can be utilized. Deferred tax liabilities are generally recognized for all taxable temporary differences. Deferred tax assets and liabilities are determined based on the enacted or substantively enacted tax laws and rates that are anticipated to apply in the period of realization. The measurement of deferred tax assets and liabilities utilizes the liability method, reflecting the tax consequences that would follow from the manner in which the Company expects to recover or settle the carrying amount of the related assets and liabilities. The carrying amount of the deferred tax asset is reduced to the extent that it is no longer probable that sufficient taxable profits will be available to allow all or part of the asset to be recovered.

Income tax assets and liabilities are offset when the income taxes are levied by the same taxation authority and there is a legally enforceable right to offset current tax assets with current tax liabilities.

Employee benefits

The Company maintains a defined contribution pension plan for its employees as well as a supplemental defined benefit pension plan for certain designated employees, which provides benefits in excess of the benefits provided by the Company's defined contribution pension plan. For the supplemental defined benefit pension plan, the benefit obligation is determined using the projected unit credit method. Actuarial valuations are carried out at the end of each annual reporting period using management's assumptions on items such as discount rates, expected asset performance, salary growth and retirement ages of employees. The discount rate is determined based on the market yields of high quality, mid-duration corporate fixed income securities.

Defined contribution plan expenses are recognized in the reporting period in which services are rendered. Regarding the supplemental defined benefit pension plan, remeasurements comprising actuarial gains and losses, the effect of the changes to the asset ceiling (if applicable) and the return on plan assets (excluding net interest cost), is reflected immediately in the statement of profit or loss and other comprehensive income with a charge or credit recognized in OCI in the period in which they occur. Remeasurements recognized in OCI are transferred immediately to retained earnings and will not be reclassified to profit or loss. Past service cost is recognized in profit or loss in the period of a plan amendment. Net interest is calculated by applying the discount rate at the beginning of the period to the net defined benefit liability or asset. Defined benefit costs are categorized as follows: service cost (including current service, past service cost, as well as gains or losses on curtailments and settlements), net interest expense or income, and remeasurements. The Company presents the first two components of defined benefit cost as part of operating expenses in the statement of profit or loss.

Notes to Financial Statements

Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

The retirement benefit obligation recognized in the statement of financial position represents the actual deficit or surplus in the Company's defined benefit pension plan. Any surplus resulting from this calculation is limited to the present value of any economic benefits available in the form of refunds from the plan or reductions in future contributions to the plan.

3. Application of New and Revised IFRSs Relevant to the Company

In the current year, the Company has applied a number of new and revised IFRSs issued by the IASB that are mandatorily effective for an accounting period that begins on or after January 1, 2014.

a) Amendments to IAS 32 "Offsetting Financial Assets and Financial Liabilities"

The Company has applied the amendments to IAS 32 for the first time in the current year, and they have been applied retrospectively. The amendments clarify the requirements relating to the offset of financial assets and financial liabilities. Specifically, the amendments clarify the meaning of "currently has a legal enforceable right of offset" and "simultaneous realisation and settlement". The application of the amendments to IAS 32 has not had any material impact on the amounts recognized or disclosed in the financial statements.

b) IFRIC 21 "Levies"

The Company has applied IFRIC 21 for the first time in the current year, and it has been applied retrospectively. IFRIC 21 "Levies" was issued to introduce an interpretation of IAS 37 "Provisions, Contingent Liabilities and Contingent Assets" on the accounting for levies (except income taxes) imposed by governments, government agencies and similar bodies. IFRIC 21 defines a levy, and clarifies that the obligating event that gives rise to a liability to pay a levy is the activity described in the relevant legislation that triggers the payment of the levy. The interpretation provides guidance on how many different levy arrangements should be accounted for, in particular, it clarifies that neither economic compulsion nor the going concern basis of financial statement preparation implies that an entity has a present obligation to pay a levy that will be triggered by operating in a future period. The liability to pay a levy is recognized progressively if the obligating event occurs over a period of time. The application of IFRIC 21 has not had any material impact on the amounts recognized or disclosed in the financial statements.

4. New and Revised IFRSs Issued but not yet Effective

The Company has not applied the following new and revised IFRSs that have been issued but are not yet effective:

a) IFRS 9 "Financial Instruments"

IFRS 9, issued in November 2009 as part of a three-phase project to replace IAS 39 "Financial Instruments: Recognition and Measurement", introduced new requirements for the classification and measurement of financial assets. IFRS 9 was subsequently amended in October 2010 to include requirements for the classification and measurement of financial liabilities and for derecognition, and in November 2013 to include the new requirements for general hedge accounting. Another revised version of IFRS 9 was issued in July 2014 mainly to include impairment requirements for financial assets as well as limited amendments to the classification and measurements by introducing fair value through other comprehensive income ("FVOCI") measurement category for certain simple debt instruments.

Notes to Financial Statements

Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

Pursuant to IFRS 9, all recognized financial assets that are within the scope of IAS 39 are required to be subsequently measured at amortized cost or fair value. Specifically, debt instruments that are held within a business model whose objective is to collect the contractual cash flows, and that have contractual cash flows that are solely payments of principal and interest on the principal outstanding are generally measured at amortized cost. Debt instruments that are held within a business model whose objective is achieved both by collecting contractual cash flows and selling financial assets, and that have contractual terms that give rise on specified dates to cash flows that are solely payments of principal and interest on the principal amount outstanding, are measured at FVOCI. All other debt securities, as well as equity securities, are measured at FVTPL. Entities may make an irrevocable election to present subsequent changes in the fair value of an equity security in OCI, with only dividend income generally recognized in profit or loss. In addition, under the fair value option, entities may elect for amortized cost or FVOCI debt securities to be designated as FVTPL.

With regard to the measurement of financial liabilities designated as FVTPL, IFRS 9 requires that the amount of change in the fair value of the financial liability that is attributable to changes in the credit risk of that liability is to be recognized in OCI, unless the recognition of the effects of changes in the liability's credit risk in OCI would create or enlarge an accounting mismatch in profit or loss. Under IAS 39, the entire amount of the change in the fair value of the financial liability designated as FVTPL is recognized in profit or loss.

With regards to debt securities measured at amortized cost or FVOCI, IFRS 9 requires an expected credit loss model for determining impairment, as opposed to an incurred credit loss model under IAS 39. The expected credit loss model requires an entity to account for expected credit losses and changes in those expected credit losses at each reporting date to reflect changes in credit risk since initial recognition. In other words, it is no longer necessary for a credit event to have occurred before impairment losses are recognized. Under IFRS 9, impairment is not considered for equity securities.

IFRS 9 as revised (2014) is effective for annual periods beginning on or after January 1, 2018. The Company anticipates that the application of IFRS 9 in the future may have a material impact on amounts reported in respect of the Company's financial assets. However, it is not practicable to provide a reasonable estimate of the effect of IFRS 9 until the Company undertakes a detailed review.

b) Amendments to IAS 19 “Defined Benefit Plans: Employee Contributions”

The amendments to IAS 19 clarify how an entity should account for contributions made by employees or third parties to defined benefit plans, based on whether those contributions are dependent of the number of years of service provided by the employee. For contributions that are independent of the number of years of service, the entity may either recognize the contributions as a reduction in the service cost in the period in which the related service is rendered, or attribute them to the employees' periods of service using the projected unit credit method; whereas for contributions that are dependent on the number of years of service, the entity is required to attribute them to the employees' periods of service. These amendments are effective for accounting periods beginning on or after July 1, 2014. The Company does not anticipate a significant impact from the implementation of these amendments.

b) Maturity profile of fixed income securities

c) Impairment Analysis

Management performs a quarterly analysis of the Company's available-for-sale investments to determine whether there is objective evidence that the estimated cash flows of the investments have been affected. The analysis includes the following procedures as deemed appropriate by management:

- identifying all security holdings in unrealized loss positions that have existed for a length of time that management believes may impact the recoverability of the investment;
- identifying all security holdings in unrealized loss positions that have an unrealized loss magnitude that management believes may impact the recoverability of the investment;
- reviewing the trading range of certain investments over the preceding calendar period;
- assessing whether any credit losses are expected for those investments. This assessment includes consideration of, among other things, all available information and factors having a bearing upon collectability such as changes to credit rating by rating agencies, financial condition of the issuer, expected cash flows and value of any underlying collateral;
- assessing whether declines in fair value for any fixed income securities represent objective evidence of impairment based on their investment grade credit ratings from third party security rating agencies;
- assessing whether declines in fair value for any fixed income securities with non-investment grade credit rating represent objective evidence of impairment based on the history of its debt service record; and
- obtaining a valuation analysis from third party investment managers regarding the intrinsic value of these holdings based on their knowledge, experience and other market based valuation techniques.

As a result of the impairment analysis performed by management, $857,061 in write-downs to various equity securities were required for the year ended December 31, 2014 (2013: $850,680).

The movements in cumulative impairment write-downs on available-for-sale investments for the years ended December 31 were as follows:

		2014	2013

9. Provision for Unpaid Claims and Adjustment Expenses

a) Nature of unpaid claims and adjustment expenses

The determination of the provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses is a complex process based on known facts, interpretations and judgment and is influenced by a variety of factors. These factors include the Company's own experience with similar cases and historical trends involving claim payment patterns, loss payments, pending levels of unpaid claims and adjustment expenses, product mix and concentration, claims severity and claim frequency patterns.

Other factors include the continually evolving and changing regulatory and legal environment, actuarial studies, professional experience and expertise of the Company's claim departments' personnel and independent adjusters retained to handle individual claims, the quality of the data used for projection purposes, existing claims management practices including claims handling and settlement practices, the effect of inflationary trends on future claims settlement costs, investment rates of return, court decisions and economic conditions. In addition, time can be a critical part of the provision determination, since the longer the span between the incidence of a loss and the settlement of the claim, the more potential for variation in the ultimate settlement amount. Accordingly, short-tailed claims, such as property claims, tend to be more reasonably predictable than long-tailed claims, such as professional liability and title claims.

The process of establishing the provision relies on the judgment and opinions of a large number of individuals, on historical precedents and trends, on prevailing legal, economic, social and regulatory trends and on expectations as to future developments. The provision reflects expectations of the ultimate cost of resolution and administration of claims based on an assessment of facts and circumstances then known, together with a review of historical settlement patterns, estimates of trends in claims severity and frequency, legal theories of liability and other factors.

Consequently, the measurement of the ultimate settlement costs of claims to date that underlies the provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses, and any related recoveries for reinsurance and deductibles, involves estimates and measurement uncertainty. The amounts are based on estimates of future trends in claim severity and other factors which could vary as claims are settled. Variability can be caused by several factors including the emergence of additional information on claims, changes in judicial interpretation, significant changes in severity or frequency of claims from historical trends, and inclusion of exposures not contemplated at the time of policy inception. Ultimate costs incurred could vary from current estimates. Although it is not possible to measure the degree of variability inherent in such estimates, management believes that the methods of estimation that have been used will produce reasonable results given the current information.

b) Methodologies and assumptions

The best estimates of future claims payments and adjustment expenses are determined based on one or more of the following actuarial methods: the Adler-Kline method, the chain ladder method, the frequency and severity method and the expected loss ratio method. Considerations in the choice of methods to estimate ultimate claims include, among other factors, the line of business, the number of years of experience and the relative maturity of the experience, and as such, reflect methods for lines of business with long settlement patterns and which are subject to the occurrence of large claims.

Each method involves tracking claims data by "policy year", which is the year in which such claims are made for the Company's professional liability policies, and the year in which such policies were written for its title policies. Claims paid and reported, gross and net of reinsurance recoveries and net of salvage and subrogation, are tracked by lines of business, policy years and development periods in a format known as claims development triangles.

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

A description of each of these methods is as follows:

i. Adler-Kline method

This is a form of frequency and severity method which involves estimation of the closing pattern for current open and estimated unreported claims, which is combined with estimates of the average severity across successive intervals of percentage claims closed, based on consideration of historical claim settlement patterns and average amounts paid on closed claims.

ii. Chain ladder method

The distinguishing characteristic of this form of development method is that ultimate claims for each policy year are projected from recorded values assuming the future claim development is similar to the prior years' development.

iii. Frequency and severity method

This method assumes that, for each identified homogenous claims type group, claims count reported to date will develop to ultimate in a similar manner to historical patterns, and settle at predictable average severity amounts. This method involves applying the developed estimated ultimate claims count to selected estimated ultimate average claim severities.

iv. Expected loss ratio method

Using the expected loss ratio method, ultimate claims projections are based upon a priori measures of the anticipated claims. An expected loss ratio is applied to the measure of exposure to determine estimated ultimate claims for each year. This method is commonly used in lines of business with a limited experience history.

Claims data includes external claims adjustment expenses, and for a portion of the portfolio includes internal claims adjustment expenses ("IAE"). A provision for IAE has been determined based on the Mango-Allen claim staffing technique, a transaction-based method which utilizes expected future claims handler workload per claim per handler, claims closure rates and ultimate claims count. The IAE provision is included in the IBNR balances.

The provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses is discounted using an interest rate based on the estimated market value based yield to maturity, inherent credit risk and related investment expense of the Company's fixed income securities supporting the provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expense as at December 31, 2014, which was 1.95% (December 31, 2013: 2.69%). Reinsurance recoverable estimates and claims recoverable from other insurers are discounted in a manner consistent with the method used to establish the related liability. Based on published guidance from the CIA, as at December 31, 2014 the PfAD was calculated at 15% (December 31, 2013: 15%) of the net discounted claim liabilities, 1.5% (December 31, 2013: 1.5%) of the ceded discounted claim liabilities, and a 0.50% reduction to the discount rate (December 31, 2013: 0.50%).

As the provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses is recorded on a discounted basis and reflects the time value of money, its carrying value is expected to provide a reasonable basis for the determination of fair value. However, determination of fair value also requires the practical context of a buyer and seller, both of whom are willing and able to enter into an arm's length transaction. In the absence of such a practical context, the fair value is not readily determinable.

The following table shows unpaid claims and adjustment expenses on an undiscounted basis and a discounted basis:

	December 31, 2014		December 31, 2013
	Undiscounted	Discounted	Undiscounted	Discounted
Unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	$ 426,622	468,493	417,231	447,912

Details of the provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses, by line of business, are summarized as follows:

	December 31, 2014			December 31, 2013
	Gross	Ceded	Net	Gross	Ceded	Net
Professional liability	$ 453,626	(44,814)	408,812	430,823	(40,348)	390,475

The provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses by case reserves and IBNR are as follows:

	December 31, 2014			December 31, 2013
	Gross	Ceded	Net	Gross	Ceded	Net
Case reserves	$ 287,235	(3,056)	284,179	269,525	(3,473)	266,052
IBNR	181,258	(41,844)	139,414	178,387	(37,014)	141,373
Total	$ 468,493	(44,900)	423,593	447,912	(40,487)	407,425

An evaluation of the adequacy of claims liabilities is completed at the end of each financial quarter. This evaluation includes a re-estimation of the liability for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses compared to the liability that was originally established. As adjustments to estimated claims liabilities become necessary, they are reflected in current operations.

c) Changes in methodologies or basis of selection of assumptions

Based on the Company's actuarial valuation process, at each valuation the Company's claims data is analyzed to determine whether the current methodologies and basis of selection of actuarial assumptions continue to be appropriate for the determination of the IBNR provision. As a result, the Company revised the basis of selection of some key assumptions used in its actuarial valuation methods as at December 31, 2014 and December 31, 2013.

In 2014, the Company updated the methodologies and basis of selection of key assumptions used in determining its provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses to ensure they appropriately reflect emerging experience and changes in risk profile, which resulted in a change to projected net cash outflows and, therefore, to the provision. In addition, as at December 31, 2014, an amount of $2,303,584 was added explicitly to the IBNR provision to account for a group of related claims. The net impact of these changes was a $4,979,000 decrease in the provision, before reinsurance, as at December 31, 2014, which included a net decrease of $5,378,629 relating to severity assumptions and an increase of $399,629 relating to claim frequency assumptions. This total impact has been allocated by policy year as a $2,607,000 decrease related to the current year and a $2,372,000 decrease related to the prior years, and by line of business as a $4,135,119 net decrease to professional liability and an $843,881 net decrease to title.

In 2013, the Company performed a detailed re-evaluation of the methodologies and basis of selection of key assumptions used in determining its provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses to ensure they appropriately reflect emerging experience and changes in risk profile. Changes to the actuarial methods and assumptions resulted in a change to projected net cash outflows and, therefore, to the provision. The net impact of the changes in the basis of selection of assumptions and model enhancements was an $11,417,969 decrease in the provision, before reinsurance, as at December 31, 2013, which included a net decrease of $11,609,994 relating to severity assumptions, and an increase of $192,025 relating to claim frequency assumptions. This total impact has been allocated by policy year as a $4,925,517 decrease related to the current year and a $6,492,452 decrease related to the prior years and by line of business as a $12,136,482 net decrease to professional liability and a $718,513 increase to title.

d) Loss development tables

The tables on the following pages show the development of claims, excluding IAE, by policy year over a period of time. The first table reflects development for gross claims, which excludes any reductions for reinsurance recoverables. The second table reflects development for net claims, which is gross claims less reinsurance recoverables. The top triangle in each table shows how the estimates of total claims for each policy year develop over time as more information becomes known regarding individual claims and overall claims frequency and severity. Claims are presented on an undiscounted basis in the top triangle. The bottom triangle in each table presents the cumulative amounts paid for claims and external loss adjustment expenses for each policy year at the end of each successive year. At the bottom of each table, the provision for IAE as well as the effect of discounting and the PfAD, as at December 31, 2014, is presented based on the net amounts of the two triangles.

10. Unearned Premiums

The following changes have occurred in the provision for unearned premiums during the years ended December 31:

	2014	2013
Balance, as at January 1	$ 749	723
Net premiums written during the year	114,920	106,510

Increase (decrease) in unearned premiums	20	26
Balance, as at December 31	$ 769	749

The estimates for unearned premium liabilities have been actuarially tested to ensure that they are sufficient to pay for future claims and expenses in servicing the unexpired policies as of the valuation dates.

11. Reinsurance

The Company's reinsurance program consists of a 90% quota share cession on its excess professional liability policies (2013: 90%), and a $10 million in excess of $5 million per occurrence clash reinsurance arrangement which provides protection for single events that bring about multiple professional liability and/or title claims with an additional $20 million in excess of $15 million per occurrence relating to class action proceedings (2013: $20 million in excess of $15 million). Reinsurance does not relieve the Company of its primary liability as the originating insurer. In the event that a reinsurer is unable to meet obligations assumed under reinsurance agreements, the Company is liable for such amounts. Reinsurance treaties typically renew annually and the terms and conditions are reviewed by senior management and reported to the Company's Board of Directors. Reinsurance agreements are negotiated with reinsurance companies that have an independent credit rating of "A-" or better and that the Company considers creditworthy. Based on current information on the financial health of the reinsurers, no provision for doubtful debts has been made in the financial statements in respect of reinsurers.

12. Related Party Transactions

Pursuant to a service agreement effective January 1, 1995, and as amended effective September 30, 2009, the Company administers the Errors and Omissions Insurance Fund (the "Fund") of the Law Society and provides all services directly related to the operations and general administration of the Fund in consideration for the Law Society insuring its mandatory professional liability insurance program with the Company.

The insurance policy under the mandatory professional liability insurance program of the Law Society is written by the Company and is effective on a calendar year basis. The insurance policy is renewed effective January 1 each year subject to the Law Society's acceptance of the terms of renewal submitted by the Company. The annual policy limits for each of the years effective January 1, 1995 to December 31, 2014 are $1 million per claim and $2 million in aggregate per member. Under the insurance policy that was in force between July 1, 1990 and December 31, 1994, the Company was responsible for claims in excess of the Law Society and member deductibles. The provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses is net of amounts relating to policies for years prior to 1995 that are payable by the Law Society.

Notes to Financial Statements

Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

For the year ended December 31, 2014, $110,871,667 of the gross premiums written related to mandatory insurance coverage provided to the Law Society and its members (2013: $102,093,412). As at December 31, 2014, the Company had a balance due from the Law Society of $6,622,607 (December 31, 2013: $2,896 due to Law Society).

For the year ended December 31, 2014, the Company contributed to the Law Society $231,194 in regards to a wellness program to be made available to the insureds of the Company's primary liability policy (2013: $210,230). This expenditure is included in operating expenses (see note 15).

The total compensation to Company personnel classified as key management, being those having authority and responsibility for planning, directing and controlling the activities of the Company, directly or indirectly, including directors of the Company, is as follows:

	2014	2013
Short-term compensation and benefits	$ 3,372	3,163
Post employment benefits	246	251
	$ 3,618	3,414

13. Employee Benefits

The Company has a defined contribution pension plan which is available to all its employees upon meeting the eligibility requirements. Each employee is required to contribute 4.5% of yearly maximum pensionable earnings, and 6% in excess thereof, of an employee's annual base earnings. Under the plan, the Company matches all employee contributions. In 2014, the Company made payments of $641,012 (2013: $603,836) and recorded pension expense of $675,910 (2013: $630,402).

The Company also has a supplemental defined benefit pension plan, which provides pension benefits on a final salary or fixed schedule basis, depending on certain criteria. Measurements and funding requirements of this plan are based on valuations prepared by an external actuary. For reporting purposes the plan is measured using the projected unit credit method, which involves calculating the actuarial present value of the past service liability to members including an allowance for their projected future earnings. Funding requirements for the plan are determined using the solvency method, which utilizes the estimated cost of securing each member's benefits with an insurance company or alternative buy-out provider as at the valuation date. The valuation methods are based on a number of assumptions, which vary according to economic conditions, including prevailing market interest rates, and changes in these assumptions can significantly affect the measurement of the pension obligations.

Funding for the supplemental plan commenced in 2005, with no payments made in 2014 (2013: $248,402) and recorded pension expenses of $11,865 in 2014 (2013: $59,671). Funding requirements are reviewed annually with an actuarial valuation for funding purposes effective as at December 31. As the Company's defined benefit pension plan qualifies as a "retirement compensation arrangement" pursuant to the Income Tax Act, half of any required annual contribution to the plan is remitted to the Canada Revenue Agency, held in a refundable tax account and refunded in prescribed amounts as actual benefit payments are made to the participants. The most recent actuarial valuation for funding purposes was performed effective December 31, 2013. Management's preliminary estimate is that no contribution is required to the plan during the year ending December 31, 2015.

The assets of both pension plans are held separately from those of the Company in funds under the control of trustees.

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

The defined benefit pension plan exposes the Company to risks such as: investment risk, interest rate risk, longevity risk and salary risk.

Investment risk	The present value of the defined benefit plan liability is calculated using a discount rate determined by reference to high quality mid-duration corporate bond yields; if the return on plan assets is below this rate, it will create a plan deficit. Currently the plan has a relatively balanced investment in equity and fixed income securities. Due to the long-term nature of the plan liabilities, the Company considers it appropriate that a reasonable portion of the plan assets should be invested in equity securities to leverage the return generated by the fund.
Interest rate risk	A decrease in the market interest rate will increase the plan obligation; however, this will be partially offset by an increase in the return of the plan's fixed income securities.
Longevity risk	The present value of the defined benefit plan obligation is calculated by reference to the best estimate of the mortality of plan participants both during and after their employment. An increase in the life expectancy of the plan participants will increase the plan's obligation.
Salary risk	The present value of the defined benefit plan liability is calculated by reference to the future salaries of plan participants. As such, an increase in the salary of the plan participants will increase the plan's obligation.

The following represents the assets and liabilities associated with pension benefits measured using values as at December 31:

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

The defined benefit plan assets arise primarily from employer contributions that are originally allocated equally between deposits with the Government of Canada and investments in the units of a balanced pooled fund. The fair values of the above equity and fixed income securities are derived based on quoted market prices in active markets. The plan assets contain the following financial instrument allocation:

	December 31, 2014	December 31, 2013
Equity securities	33.21%	36.42%
Fixed income securities	17.32%	16.48%
Cash and cash equivalents	4.55%	1.31%

Reconciliation of funded status surplus of the benefit plans to the amounts recorded in the financial statements is as follows:

	December 31, 2014	December 31, 2013
Fair value of plan assets	$ 8,848	8,731
Accrued benefit obligation	(7,158)	(6,253)

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

The significant assumptions used by the Company for year-end measurement purposes are as follows:

	2014	2013
Discount rate	3.80%	4.60%
Rate of compensation increase	3.50%	3.50%
Mortality	CPM 2014Priv mortality table with generational mortality improvements following Scale CPM-B; pension size adjustment factors of 0.83 for males and 0.88 for females	CPM-RPP2014Priv mortality table with generational mortality improvements following Scale CPM-A; pension size adjustment factors of 0.84 for males and 0.96 for females

The sensitivity of the key assumption, namely discount rate, assuming all other assumptions remain constant, is as follows: as at December 31, 2014, if the discount rate was 1% higher/(lower) the defined benefit obligation would decrease by $863,800 (increase by $1,061,400). Note that the sensitivity analysis may not be representative of the actual change in the defined benefit obligation as it is unlikely that the change in assumption would occur in isolation of one or other changes as some of the assumptions may be correlated.

The expected maturity profile of the defined benefit obligation as at December 31, 2014 is as follows:

	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	Thereafter
Expected benefit payments	273	282	281	280	401	1,983

The defined benefit obligation as at December 31, 2014 by participant category is as follows:

Active participants	2,412
Pensioners	4,746

b) Income tax expense recognized in the statement of profit or loss and other comprehensive income

The total income tax expense recognized in OCI is comprised as follows:

	2014	2013
Current income tax
Unrealized investment gains and losses on available-for-sale portfolio	$ 815	4,388
Pensions	-	-
Total current income tax expense	815	4,388
Deferred income tax
Unrealized investment gains and losses on available-for-sale portfolio	-	-
Pensions	(206)	174
Total deferred income tax expense	(206)	174
Total income tax expense in OCI	$ 609	4,562

c) Income tax reconciliation

The following is a reconciliation of income taxes, calculated at the statutory income tax rate, to the income tax provision included in profit or loss.

	2014	2013
Profit or loss before income taxes	$ 22,971	7,833
Statutory income tax rate	26.50%	26.50%
Provision for (recovery of) income taxes at statutory rates	6,087	2,076
Increase (decrease) resulting from:
Investments	(198)	(193)
Non-deductible meals and entertainment	13	12
Other non-deductible items	9	5
Provision for (recovery of) income taxes	$ 5,911	1,900

The statutory rate applicable to the Company at December 31, 2014 is same as at December 31, 2013.

During the year, the Company made income tax payments of $10,293,132 (2013: $2,205,734) and received no income tax refunds (2013: $2,674,499) from the various taxing authorities.

d) Net deferred income tax asset

The Company's net deferred income tax asset is the result of temporary differences between the carrying amounts of assets and liabilities for financial reporting purposes and the amounts used for income tax purposes. The sources of these temporary differences and the tax effects are as follows:

	December 31, 2014	December 31, 2013
Deferred tax assets
Net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	$ 5,613	5,398
Property and equipment	292	249
	5,905	5,647
Deferred tax liabilities
Investments	(433)	(471)
Pension	(415)	(633)
	(848)	(1,104)
Total net deferred tax assets	$ 5,057	4,543

The Company believes that, based on available information, it is probable that the deferred income tax assets will be realized through a combination of future reversals of temporary differences and taxable income.

15. Operating Expenses

The following table summarizes the Company's operating expenses by nature:

	2014	2013
Salaries and benefits	$ 9,755	9,373
Administrative expenses	2,631	2,203
Professional fees	1,746	1,682

16. Operating Lease Commitments

The Company entered into a lease agreement for premises at 250 Yonge Street, with an effective date of February 1, 2008 and an expiry date of May 31, 2018. The Company has an option to extend the lease period for five additional years under the current general terms and conditions.

At December 31, 2014, lease obligations on office premises were as follows:

2015	1,220
2016	1,220
2017	1,220
2018	508

17. Capital Stock and Contributed Surplus

Capital stock of the Company represents:

30,000 Common Shares of par value of $100 each – authorized, issued and paid.

20,000 6% non-cumulative, redeemable, non-voting Preferred Shares of par value of $100 each – authorized, issued and paid.

The Preferred Shares meet the definition of equity in accordance with the criteria outlined in IAS 32 “Financial Instruments: Presentation”.

Contributed surplus represents additional capitalization funding provided by the Law Society.

18. Statutory Insurance Information

The Company is the beneficiary of trust accounts in the amount of $1,238,354 as at December 31, 2014 (December 31, 2013: $1,247,970) which are held as security for reinsurance ceded to unregistered reinsurers. This trust balance is not reflected in these financial statements but is considered in determining statutory capital requirements.

In accordance with licensing requirements, the Company no longer requires deposited securities with the regulatory authorities (December 31, 2013: market value of $50,416).

19. Capital Management

Capital is comprised of the Company’s equity. As at December 31, 2014 the Company’s equity was $208,625,233 (December 31, 2013: $189,875,442). The Company’s objectives when managing capital are to maintain financial strength and protect its claims paying abilities, to maintain creditworthiness and to provide a reasonable return to the shareholder over the long term. In conjunction with the Company’s Board of Directors and its Audit Committee, senior management develops the capital strategy and oversees the capital management processes of the Company. Capital is managed using both regulatory capital measures and internal metrics.

FSCO, the Company's primary insurance regulator, along with other provincial insurance regulators, regulate the capital required in the Company using two key measures, i.e., Minimum Capital Test ("MCT") and the Dynamic Capital Adequacy Test ("DCAT"). FSCO has established an MCT guideline which sets out 100% as the minimum and 150% as the supervisory target for P&C insurance companies. To ensure that it attains its objectives, the Company has established an internal target of 180% (2013: 180%) in excess of which, under normal circumstances, the Company will maintain its capital. During the year ended December 31, 2014, the Company complied with the various provincial regulators' guidelines and as at December 31, 2014, the Company has a MCT ratio of 251% (December 31, 2013: 233%). Annually, the Company's Appointed Actuary prepares a DCAT on the MCT to ensure that the Company has adequate capital to withstand significant adverse event scenarios. These scenarios are reviewed each year to ensure appropriate risks are included in the testing process. The Appointed Actuary must present both an annual report and the DCAT report to management and the Audit Committee. The DCAT report prepared during the year indicated that the Company's capital position is satisfactory. In addition, the target, actual and forecasted capital position of the Company is subject to ongoing monitoring by management using stress and scenario analysis to ensure its adequacy.

The Company may use reinsurance to manage its capital position.

20. Risk Management

By virtue of the nature of the insurance company business, financial instruments comprise the majority of the Company's statement of financial position as at both December 31, 2014 and 2013. The most significant identified risks to the Company which arise from holding financial instruments and insurance contract liabilities include insurance risk, credit risk, liquidity risk and market risk. The market risk exposure of the Company is primarily related to changes in interest rates and adverse movement in equity prices.

The Company employs an enterprise-wide risk management framework which establishes practices for risk management and includes policies and processes to identify, assess, manage and monitor risks and risk tolerance limits. It provides governance and supervision of risk management activities across the Company's business units, promoting the discipline and consistency applied to the practice of risk management.

The Company's risk framework is designed to minimize risks that could materially adversely affect the value or stature of the Company, to contribute to stable and sustainable returns, to identify risks that the Company can manage in order to increase earnings, and to provide transparency of the Company's risks through internal and external reporting. The Company's risk philosophy involves undertaking risks for appropriate return and accepting those risks that meet its objectives. The Company's risk management program is aligned with its long term vision and its culture supports an effective risk management program. The key components of the risk culture include acting with fairness, appreciating the impact of risk on all major stakeholders, embedding risk management into day to day business activities, fostering full and transparent communications, cooperation, and aligning of objectives and incentives. The Company's risk management activities are monitored by its Risk Committee and Board of Directors.

The risk exposure measures expressed below primarily include the sensitivity of the Company's profit or loss, and OCI as applicable, to the movement of various economic factors. These risk exposures include the sensitivity due to specific changes in market prices and interest rate levels projected using internal models as at a specific date, and are measured relative to a starting level reflecting the Company's assets and liabilities at that date and the actuarial factors, investment returns and investment activity the Company assumes in the future. The risk exposures measure the impact of changing one factor at a time and assume that all other factors remain unchanged. Actual results can differ materially from these estimates for a variety of reasons including the interaction among these factors when more than one changes, changes in actuarial and investment return and future investment activity assumptions, actual experience differing from the assumptions, changes in business mix, effective tax rates, and other market factors and general limitations of the Company's internal models.

a) Insurance risk

Insurance risk is the risk of loss due to actual experience differing from the experience assumed when a product was designed and priced with respect to claims, policyholder behaviour and expenses. The Company has identified pricing risk, concentration of risk and reserving risk as its most significant sources of insurance risks. The Company's underwriting objective is to develop business within its target market on a prudent and diversified basis and to achieve profitable operating results.

Pricing risk

Pricing risk arises when actual claims experience differs from the assumptions included in pricing calculations. Historically, the underwriting results of the property and casualty industry have fluctuated significantly due to the cyclical nature of the insurance market. The market cycle is affected by the frequency and severity of claims, levels of capacity and demand, general economic conditions and price competition.

The Company focuses on profitable underwriting using a combination of experienced underwriting staff, pricing models and price adequacy monitoring tools. The Company prices its products taking into account numerous factors including claims frequency and severity trends, product line expense ratios, special risk factors associated with the product line, and the investment income earned on premiums held until the payment of claims and expenses. The Company's pricing is designed to ensure an appropriate return while also providing long-term rate stability. These factors are reviewed and adjusted periodically to ensure they reflect the current environment.

Concentration of risk

A concentration of risk represents the exposure to increased losses associated with an inadequately diversified portfolio of policy coverage. The Company has a reinsurance program to limit its exposure to catastrophic losses from any one event or set of events. The Company has approximately 99% of its business in Ontario (2013: 99%) and 96% in professional liability (2013: 95%), and consequently is exposed to trends, inflation, judicial changes and regulatory changes affecting these segments. The geographical diversity by location of the underlying insurance risk for the year ended December 31 is summarized below:

Gross written premium	2014			2013
	Ontario	All other provinces	Total	Ontario	All other provinces	Total
Professional liability	$ 116,979	-	116,979	108,009	-	108,009
Title	4,966	204	5,170	5,257	295	5,552
Total	$ 121,945	204	122,149	113,266	295	113,561

Reserving risk

Reserving risk arises because actual claims experience can differ adversely from the assumptions included in setting reserves, in large part due to the length of time between the occurrence of a loss, the reporting of the loss to the insurer and the ultimate resolution of the claim. Claims provisions reflect expectations of the ultimate cost of resolution and administration of claims based on an assessment of facts and circumstances then known, a review of historical settlement patterns, estimates of trends in claims severity and frequency, legal theories of liability and other factors. Reserve changes associated with claims of prior periods are recognized in the current period, which could have a significant impact on current year profit or loss. In order to mitigate this risk the Company utilizes information systems in order to maintain claims data integrity, and the claims provision valuations are prepared by an internal actuary on a quarterly basis, and are reviewed separately by, and must be acceptable to, management of the Company every quarter and the external Appointed Actuary at mid-year and year-end.

Sensitivity analyses

Risks associated with property and casualty insurance contracts are complex and subject to a number of variables which complicate quantitative sensitivity analysis. The Company considers that the provision for its unpaid claims and adjustment expenses recognized in the statement of financial position is adequate. However, actual experience will differ from the expected outcome. Among the Company's lines of business, the professional liability line of business has the largest provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses. Given this line of business and the actuarial methods utilized to estimate the related provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses, the reported claims count development factors and average claim severity selections are the most critical of the assumptions used. The following table provides the estimated increase (decrease) of the net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expense and the after-tax net effect on equity if the reported claims count development factors were increased such that the estimate of unreported claims was 20% higher or the average claim severity selections were 1% higher. Other changes in assumptions are considered to be less material.

	December 31, 2014		December 31, 2013
	Net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	Equity	Net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	Equity
Unreported claims +20%	5,283	(3,883)	4,904	(3,605)
Average claim severities +1%	5,299	(3,895)	4,843	(3,560)

b) Credit risk

Credit risk is the risk of loss due to the inability or unwillingness of a borrower or counterparty to fulfill its payment obligation to the Company. Credit risks arise from investments in fixed income securities and preferred shares, and balances due from insureds and reinsurers.

Management monitors credit risk and any mitigating controls. The Company has established a credit review process where the credit quality of all exposures is continually monitored so that appropriate prompt action can be taken when there is a change which may have material impact.

Governance processes around investments include oversight by the Board of Directors' Investment Committee. The oversight includes reviews of the Company's third party investment managers, investment performance and adherence to the Company's investment policy. The Company's investment policy statement is reviewed at least on an annual basis and addresses various matters including investment objectives, risks and management. Guidelines and limits have been established in respect of asset classes, issuers of securities and the nature of securities to address matters such as quality and concentration of risks.

With respect to credit risk arising from balances due from reinsurers, the Company's exposure is measured to reflect both current exposure and potential future exposure to ceded liabilities. Reinsurance and insurance counterparties must also meet minimum risk rating criteria. The Company's Board of Directors has approved a reinsurance policy, which is monitored by the Company's Audit Committee.

Fixed income securities are rated using a composite of Moody's, Standard & Poor and Dominion Bond Rating Service ratings, and reinsurers are rated using A.M. Best. The balances in the above tables do not contain any amounts that are past due.

c) Liquidity risk

Liquidity risk is the risk that the Company will not have enough funds available to meet all expected and unexpected cash outflow commitments as they fall due. Under stressed conditions, unexpected cash demands could arise primarily from a significant increase in the level of claim payment demands.

To manage its cash flow requirements, the Company has arranged diversified funding sources and maintains a significant portion of its invested assets in highly liquid securities such as cash and cash equivalents and government bonds (see note 5b). In addition, the Company has established counterparty exposure limits that aim to ensure that exposures are not so large that they may impact the ability to liquidate investments at their market value.

Claims liabilities account for the majority of the Company's liquidity risk. A significant portion of the investment portfolio is invested with the primary objective of matching the investment asset cash flows with the expected future payments on these claims liabilities. This portion, referred to as the cash-flow matched investment portfolio, consists of fixed income and preferred equity securities that are intended to address the liquidity and cash flow needs of the Company as claims are settled. The remainder of the Company's overall investment portfolio, the available-for-sale portfolio, backs equity and is invested in fixed income securities and equities with the objective of preserving capital and achieving an appropriate return consistent with the objectives of the Company.

d) Market and interest rate risk

Market risk is the risk that the fair value or future cash flows of financial instruments will fluctuate due to changes in market variables such as interest rate, foreign exchange rates, and equity prices. Due to the nature of the Company's business, invested assets and insurance liabilities as well as revenues and expenses are impacted by movements in capital markets, interest rates, and to a lesser extent, foreign currency exchange rates. Accordingly, the Company considers these risks together in managing its asset and liability positions and ensuring that risks are properly addressed. These risks are referred to collectively as market price and interest rate risk - the risk of loss resulting from movements in market price, interest rate, credit spreads and foreign currency rates.

Interest rate risk is the potential for financial loss arising from changes in interest rates. The Company is exposed to interest rate price risk on monetary financial assets and liabilities that have a fixed interest rate and is exposed to interest rate cash flow risk on monetary financial assets and liabilities with floating interest rates that are reset as market rates change.

For FVTPL assets and other financial assets supporting actuarial liabilities, the Company is exposed to interest rate risk when the cash flows from assets and the policy obligations they support are significantly mismatched, as this may result in the need to either sell assets to meet policy payments and expenses or reinvest excess asset cash flows under unfavourable interest environments. Bonds designated as available-for-sale generally do not support actuarial liabilities. Changes in fair value, other than foreign exchange rate gains and losses, of available-for-sale fixed income securities are recorded to OCI.

The following chart provides the estimated increase (decrease) on the Company's net investment income, net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses, and after-tax OCI, after an immediate parallel increase or decrease of 1% in interest rates as at December 31 across the yield curve in all markets.

		December 31, 2014			December 31, 2013
		Net investment income	Net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	After-tax OCI	Net investment income	Net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	After-tax OCI
Interest rates	+1%	(9,224)	(12,741)	(2,951)	(10,780)	(11,686)	(3,003)
	-1%	9,664	13,428	3,092	11,332	9,717	3,161

Market price and interest rate risk is managed through established policies and standards of practice that limit market price and interest rate risk exposure. Company-wide market price and interest rate risk limits are established and actual positions are monitored against limits. Target asset mixes, term profiles, and risk limits are updated regularly and communicated to portfolio managers. Actual asset positions are periodically rebalanced to within established limits.

Equity price risk is the risk that the fair values of equities decrease as the result of changes in the levels of equity indices and the value of individual equity securities. The Company's equities are designated as available-for-sale and generally do not support actuarial liabilities. The following chart provides the estimated increase (decrease) on the Company's after-tax OCI, assuming all other variables held constant, after an immediate 10% increase or decrease in equity prices as at December 31.

		2014 After-tax OCI	2013 After-tax OCI
Equity prices	+10%	6,958	6,648
	-10%	(6,958)	(6,648)

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

Currency risk is the risk that the fair value or future cash flows of a financial instrument will fluctuate because of changes in foreign exchange rates, in particular when an asset and liability mismatch exists in a different currency than the currency in which they are measured. As the Company does not hold significant liabilities in foreign currencies, the resulting currency risk is borne by the Company and forms part of its overall investment income. The table below details the effect of a 10% movement of the currency rate against the Canadian dollar as at December 31, with all other variables held constant.

Currency	2014		2013
	Effect on profit (loss) before taxes (+/-)	Effect on OCI (+/-)	Effect on profit (loss) before taxes (+/-)	Effect on OCI (+/-)
US Dollar	356	3,081	344	2,600
Euro	-	1,142	1	1,204
Other	-	830	-	847
	356	5,053	345	4,651

The Company also manages possible excessive concentration of risk. Excessive concentrations arise when a number of counterparties are engaged in similar business activities, or activities in the same geographic region, or have similar economic features that would cause their ability to meet contractual obligations to be similarly affected by changes in economic, political and other conditions. Concentrations indicate the relative sensitivity of the Company's performance to developments affecting a particular industry or geographic location. In order to avoid excessive concentrations of risk, the Company applies specific policies on maintaining a diversified portfolio. Identified risk concentrations are managed accordingly.

The following tables summarize the carrying amounts of financial instruments by geographical location of the issuer, as at:

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

21. Contingent Liability

During 2012, three insurance companies providing a separate coverage to the insured in excess of the Company's primary professional liability policy commenced independent but related legal actions against the Company, claiming total damages of $28,000,000 for alleged breaches of duty in the Company's handling of a claim. The Company believes that the actions lack merit and will vigorously defend its position. Accordingly, the Company has not recorded any related provision in its statement of financial position. Subsequent to the claims being brought forward, two claimants have agreed to drop their actions against the Company without costs. The amount of damages claimed by the remaining claimant is $14,000,000.

22. Contingent Asset

In 2013, the Income Tax Act was amended to extend tax exempt status given to certain subsidiaries of Canadian municipalities to also include certain subsidiaries of public bodies performing a function of government in Canada. Transitional rules were also included to allow applicable taxpayers to refile on this tax exempt basis for their taxation years beginning after May 8, 2000. After completing a detailed and careful evaluation of the applicability of the new provisions to the Company, the Company believes that it is probable that a refund claim would be successful. Accordingly, during the current year the Company has filed as a tax exempt organization for income tax purposes, and has requested full retrospective exemption back to its 2001 taxation year. The income tax payments relating to taxation years 2001 onwards total as much as $65,810,261. The exemption would also give rise to significant ongoing future income tax savings, but the Company's deferred income tax asset would be of nil value.

Amendment to By-Law 3 Respecting Nominations for the Treasurer's Election

Purpose of Report:      Decision

Prepared by the Policy Secretariat
Jim Varro (416-947-3434)

FOR DECISION*AMENDMENT TO BY-LAW 3*Motion

1. That Convocation make the amendment to By-Law 3 [Benchers, Convocation and Committees] set out in the motion at Tab 3.1 respecting the date for the close of nominations for the election of the Treasurer in a year for the election of lawyer benchers.

Issue for Consideration

2. In a year in which a bencher election for lawyer benchers is held, By-Law 3 (Benchers, Convocation and Committees) provides that the close of nominations for the Treasurer's election is the fourth Friday in May.
3. The Law Society Act requires that an elected bencher be elected as Treasurer.
4. If Convocation in May is scheduled to be after the fourth Friday in May in an election year, those benchers who may wish to be candidates for the election of the Treasurer will not have taken office as benchers, as By-Law 3 provides that they take office as an elected bencher at the May Convocation in an election year. As such, benchers who are elected at the end of April but who have not taken office before the close of nominations for the election of the Treasurer are not eligible candidates in the Treasurer's election.
5. An amendment to the By-Law is required to modify the date for the close of nominations in an election year to ensure that candidates are eligible for election.
6. The proposed amendment to By-Law 3 in this report provides that the close of nominations is on the Friday immediately after the day on which the regular meeting of Convocation is held in May.

FOR DECISION

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA, DRAFT AUDITED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS
FOR THE YEAR ENDED DECEMBER 31, 2014*Motion:

5. That Convocation approve the draft audited Annual Financial Statements for the Law Society for the financial year ended December 31, 2014 including the transfers to and from the restricted funds which are listed in Note 14 of the Notes to the Annual Financial Statements.

Actual-to-Budget Analysis

6. An unaudited actual-to-budget analysis for the Lawyer and Paralegal General Funds is also provided for supplementary information.
7. The Law Society's lawyer and paralegal General Funds, which account for the Law Society's program delivery and administrative activities, are reporting a combined operating surplus of $2.6 million compared to a budgeted deficit of $2.5 million. The 2014 budget for these two Funds included the use of accumulated balances in the Funds of $759,000 supplemented by the use of surplus investment income in the E&O Fund of $1.5 million, so operating results are better than budgeted. Annual fees, professional development revenues, investment income and other revenues are above budget. Virtually all of the expense categories in the General Funds are less than budget, although there are some noteworthy negative variances in individual accounts.
8. Overall, professional regulation expenses tracked close to budget with the exception of spending on outside counsel and expert witnesses.
9. Professional development and competence expenses were under budget primarily because of development expenses for the Pathways Pilot Project.
10. Corporate Services expenses primarily comprising the Client Service Centre, Information Systems, Facilities, Finance and Human Resources were over budget because of severance costs related to the operational review and increased expenditures on counsel fees.

11. Convocation, policy and outreach expenses primarily comprising Policy, Equity & Public Affairs and bencher expenses were all under budget with the largest component being less bencher remuneration and expense reimbursement than budgeted.

THE LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA ANNUAL FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

Summary of Financial Performance

The Law Society of Upper Canada's ("The Society") lawyer and paralegal General Funds, which account for the Society's program delivery and administrative activities, are reporting a combined operating surplus of $2.6 million, approximately the same as in 2013. The 2014 budget for these two Funds projected a combined deficit of $759,000 with the use of accumulated balances in the Funds so operating results are better than budgeted. Annual fees, professional development revenues, investment income and other revenues are above budget. Virtually all of the expense categories in the General Funds are less than budget, although there are some noteworthy negative variances in individual accounts, discussed later in this document.

The Society's restricted funds are reporting a combined deficit of $18.5 million in 2014 (2013 - $1.3 million surplus). There are three primary reasons for the restricted funds deficit in 2014. The Lawyer Compensation Fund experienced an adverse claims experience, primarily from two large scale alleged defalcations, resulting in a deficit of $10.2 million compared to a surplus of $498,000 in 2013. Premium transfers to LAWPRO, anticipated in the insurance contract, resulted in a deficit in the Errors & Omissions Insurance Fund of $5.2 million. Amortization in the Invested in Capital Assets Fund of $3.6 million was the third significant contributor to the restricted funds deficit in the current year.

The approved 2014 budget included the transfer of $6.0 million from the General Fund balance to the Capital Allocation Fund dedicated to the revitalization of the Society's information systems. This is included in the interfund transfers set out in the Schedule of Restricted Funds.

Statement of Revenues and Expenses and Change in Fund Balances

Revenues

Annual Fees

Total annual fee revenues have increased to $73.2 million from $70.8 million in 2013 primarily due to an increase in the number of lawyers and paralegals billed. Also, there were fluctuations in the individual fee components but the annual fee per lawyer increased by $15 from 2013. The annual fee per paralegal was the same as 2013.

Insurance Premiums and Levies

The Errors & Omissions Insurance Fund ("the E&O Fund") accounts for insurance related transactions between LAWPRO, the Society and insured lawyers. The E&O Fund collects premiums and levies from lawyers and remits these amounts to LAWPRO. Insurance premiums and levies increased to $104.4 million in 2014 from $102.4 million in 2013 as the number of insured lawyers was slightly higher than 2013. The base premium for professional liability insurance coverage for Ontario lawyers was $3,350 per lawyer, the same premium charged in 2013. The professional liability insurance program was essentially the same, year on year.

Professional Development & Competence (“PD&C”)

Total PD&C revenues have increased from $17.4 million in 2013 to $22 million in 2014.

- Licensing Process revenues from lawyer and paralegal candidates have increased from $9.4 million to $13.5 million due to increased fees and a higher number of candidates as compared in the table below:

Candidate Registrants	2014	2013
Lawyer	2,333	2,211
Paralegal	1,558	1,600

1,984 lawyer candidates were licensed in 2014 compared to 1,995 in 2013. 1,156 paralegal candidates were licensed in 2014 compared to 1,344 in 2013.

The Society is undertaking a pilot that allows lawyer licensing candidates to either article or complete a Law Practice Program (LPP). The first LPP commenced in the fall of 2014. The total Licensing Process fee for 2014-2015, including the fees for the initial application, the Barrister and Solicitor Licensing Examinations and the Call to the Bar is $4,710 compared to $2,810 per candidate in 2013 for all fees associated with licensing.

The Law Foundation of Ontario approved grants totaling $385,000 for the 2014 lawyer and paralegal Licensing Processes, 30% lower than 2013.

With more candidates, paralegal licensing process revenues increased from $2.3 million in 2013 to $2.5 million.

- Continuing Professional Development (“CPD”) revenues have increased from $8 million in 2013 to $8.6 million. In 2014, the Society began charging a small fee for professionalism-only courses which were previously free which was the main factor in the decline in total registrations as analysed below. However the number of registrations for paid programs continues to increase.

Registration (all formats)	2014	2013
Paid programs	46,828	37,449
Free / nominal fee programs	16,635	51,244
Total number of registrants	63,463	88,693

One result of a review of the CPD requirement is the Accredited Provider framework commenced in 2014. So far, 58 other education providers have received approval to deliver professionalism content without the requirement for individual program accreditation as the number of service providers other than the Society continues to increase.

Investment Income

Total investment income has decreased from $4.7 million to $3.7 million. An increase in interest, dividends and realized gains was more than offset by unrealized gains / losses.

Expenses

Professional Regulation, Tribunals and Compliance

Total regulatory expenses of $27.9 million have increased by $1.7 million compared to last year. There were two primary components to the increase. 2014 was the first full year in the establishment of the Tribunal office and spending on outside counsel and expert witnesses within professional regulation totalled $2 million compared to $1.1 million in 2013.

The processing of files through the Intake, Complaints, Investigations and Discipline departments comprise a significant part of regulatory resources. Complaint trends have fluctuated in a fairly narrow band in recent years with 2014 showing a slight decline. Expenses and staff numbers in these areas were relatively static year-on-year.

Cost awards arising from the disciplinary process are occasionally awarded against the Society. At the current time, there are three matters which may lead to significant cost awards against the Society, although, in compliance with generally accepted accounting principles, there is insufficient certainty for these cost awards to be accrued at this time.

Professional Development & Competence

In 2014, total PD&C expenses of $24.8 million exceeded the 2013 comparative by $3.7 million.

The Licensing Process has been heavily engaged in the implementation of the Pathways Pilot Project which included the creation of a Law Practice Program as a path to licensing which consists of a four month training course at Ryerson University or the University of Ottawa followed by a four month work placement. 243 candidates are enrolled in the program. The development of Pathways was significantly under budget as the confirmation of the retainers for external assistance and scope of activities were finalized after the budget was approved and the Society was able to leverage existing content and services to support the new program.

In 2014, PD&C produced 143 continuing professional development programs including 85 live programs, 51 replays and 7 e-courses. This was 6 fewer programs than 2013 reflecting the decline in registrations.

The other relatively significant 2014 occurrence in PD&C was the streamlining of the Spot Audit program and the subsequent reduction in staffing by three employees.

Corporate Services

Corporate Services expenses, primarily comprising the Client Service Centre, Information Systems, Facilities, Finance and Human Resources, increased from $21.9 million in 2013, to $23.1 million in 2014. Severance costs arising from an operational review have exceeded the severance and contingency budget, somewhat offset by savings in other areas.

Office of General Counsel expenditures on counsel fees total $588,000, exceeding budget and 2013 levels. In the current year, the Trinity Western University matter involved significant expenditures. Trinity Western University's application to the Ontario Divisional Court regarding the Society's decision not to accredit its law school is scheduled to be heard in June 2015.

Convocation, Policy and Outreach

Convocation, policy and outreach expenses primarily comprises Policy, Equity & Public Affairs and benchers expenses and total $8.6 million compared to $8 million in 2013. The new office of Executive Director, Policy, Equity and Public Affairs was implemented during the year. Included in Convocation, policy and outreach expenses are payments to benchers during the year. In respect of remuneration, these payments totalled $972,000 (2013 – $836,000) and in respect of expense reimbursements these payments, totalled $545,000 (2013 – $557,000).

Services to Members and Public

These expenses, which mainly comprise the Law Society's Referral Service, payments to CANLII and the Members Assistance Plan, were relatively static at $4.2 million compared to $4.3 in 2013.

The Law Society Referral Service has transitioned away from being primarily a phone service. While a dedicated phone service remains in place for callers in crisis and others with special needs, most referrals will now be processed through a web-based service.

Balance SheetCurrent Assets and Liabilities*

The most significant change in working capital is the increase in amounts due to LAWPRO of $6.6 million, with premiums written exceeding payments from the E&O Fund. Deferred revenue decreased from $13.2 million to $11.4 million relating primarily to less future year membership fees received in 2014 as compared to 2013. The timing of these payments does not follow a pattern and is dependent on when members actually pay their fees.

Investment in Subsidiaries

Investment in subsidiaries comprises the Society's investments in LibraryCo and LAWPRO recorded at cost. The Society owns all the common shares of LibraryCo at a cost of $100. The LAWPRO investment is made up of two parts: the cost of the acquired share capital of $4,997,000 plus contributed capital of $30,645,000.

Portfolio Investments

Portfolio investments are shown at fair value of $78.4 million compared to $77.1 million in 2013. In 2014, an amount of $1.5 million has been transferred from the E&O Fund portfolio as part of the transfer of surplus investment income to fund General Fund operations. Investments are held in the following funds:

($000's)	2014	2013
E&O Fund	29,067	29,576
Compensation Fund	34,243	33,000
General Fund	15,090	14,573
Total	78,400	77,149

Investments comprise Canadian equities (21%) and Canadian fixed income investments (79%). The portfolio is managed in compliance with the Society's investment policy. Fixed income investments are in a pooled fund of government, provincial and corporate bonds with an investment rating of BBB or better. Equity investments are in a pooled fund of diversified securities listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Capital Assets

The decrease in capital assets to $12.5 million from $13.7 million reflects amortization for the period, offset by $2.5 million in additions for projects such as the replacement of building infrastructure and the enterprise content management initiative. Capital assets are recorded at cost and are amortized over their useful lives according to the Society's capital asset policy. Capital asset additions are typically financed from the Society's Capital Allocation Fund.

Provision for Unpaid Grants

The provision for unpaid grants in the Compensation Fund represents the estimate for unpaid claims and inquiries against the Compensation Fund, supplemented by the costs for processing these claims. The Compensation Fund provision for unpaid grants (that is, the amount reserved) has risen to $21.4 million from $10 million in 2013. This increase is attributable to some large alleged defalcations on the part of certain licensees. The Compensation Fund describes a major defalcation as being over 35 claims arising from the conduct of one licensee and the Fund currently has two of these major defalcations. Most of these claims are still being evaluated and in some instances related investigations are still ongoing. Based on the advice of the actuary, however, the Fund balance remains sufficient to absorb the additional potential exposure. The paralegal Compensation Fund provision for unpaid grants comprises $225,000 (2013 – $98,000) of the total Compensation Fund provision for unpaid grants.

Unclaimed Trust Funds

Unclaimed trust funds continue to increase, now totalling $3.7 million compared to $3.2 million at the end of 2013. These are trust monies turned over to the Society by lawyers who are unable to locate or identify the clients to whom the monies are owed. To date, monies returned to clients from the fund have been nominal. By statute, the Society administers the unclaimed trust funds, in perpetuity, and is entitled to reimbursement for administrative expenses to a limit of the annual income earned on funds held. Net income, if any, is available for transfer to the Law Foundation of Ontario ("LFO"). To date, administrative expenses have exceeded income and no transfers to the LFO have been made.

Other Trust Funds

Included in the notes to the financial statements, but not the Balance Sheet, is a reference to other trust funds held by the Society. The Society administers client funds for lawyers under voluntary or court-ordered trusteeships. These funds and matching liabilities are not reflected on the Balance Sheet as they are held temporarily and with a restricted administrative mandate. Money paid to the Society is held in trust until it is repaid to the appropriate payee or transferred to the Unclaimed Trust Funds. At the end of 2014, total funds held in trust amounted to $2.4 million (2013 – $2.8 million). The volume and value of balances depend on trusteeships at the time.

Schedule of Restricted FundsCompensation Fund*

Total Compensation Fund expenses have increased from $10.1 million in 2013 to $21.7 million because of an increase in the provision for lawyer unpaid grants. The 2013 amount was exceptionally low and, as noted above, the 2014 number is above the normal range.

Errors & Omissions Insurance Fund

Expenses in the E&O Fund have increased from $102 million to $111 million. The fund is reporting a deficit of $5.2 million due to the use of $5 million of the fund balance to mitigate the 2014 base insurance levy for lawyers.

County Libraries Fund

Funding of county libraries totalled $7.5 million the same as 2013.

The Legal Information and Support Services Working Group reported to Convocation in October 2014 on the potential next steps in the evolution of legal information and library services. The information affirms the important role of courthouse libraries in the provision of legal information and library services and the maintenance of member competence. New appointments have been made to the Board of LibraryCo and a committee of board members is assessing transition requirements.

Other Restricted Funds

The other restricted funds balance is made up of the Repayable Allowance Fund, the Special Projects Fund and the Parental Leave Assistance Plan Fund ("PLAP").

The last grant from the J.S. Denison Fund, which assisted impoverished lawyers, candidates and their families, was approved by Convocation in November 2014. All money in the fund has now been distributed. The fund was established under the terms of the will of former Treasurer John Shirley Denison, KC. Born in 1870, Mr. Denison was called to the Bar in 1892, and practised in Toronto. He was Treasurer of the Society from 1944-47 and died in 1951.

PLAP provides financial assistance to lawyers in firms of five lawyers or fewer and do not have access to any other parental leave financial benefits. For the first time in 2014, a means test was implemented limiting eligibility to lawyers who have a net annual practice income of less than $50,000. Under the program terms, the Society provided a fixed sum of $750 a week to eligible applicants for up to 12 weeks to cover expenses associated with maintaining their practice during a maternity, parental or adoption leave. Benefit payments totaled $280,000 to 32 successful applicants (2013 - $418,000 to 54 successful applicants).

Changes in Fund Balances

The 2014 budget planned to reduce the lawyer General Fund balance by $446,000 but an operating surplus of $1.5 million was achieved. Based on these actual results and after the budgeted transfer of $1.5 million from the accumulated surplus investment income in the E&O Fund and $6 million to the Capital Allocation Fund, the lawyer General Fund has decreased by $2.9 million. The lawyer General Fund balance is now $18.5 million. In 2015, $641,000 of this accumulated balance has again been earmarked for the reduction of annual fees. The accumulated fund balance complies with Convocation's policy which, in brief, requires a minimum of two months and a maximum of three months operating expenses be maintained in the General Fund balance.

The 2014 budget planned to use $313,000 from the paralegal General Fund balance, although based on actual results, the paralegal General Fund has increased by $1.1 million. The paralegal General Fund balance is now $3 million. In 2015, $541,000 of this accumulated balance has again been earmarked for the reduction of annual fees.

The Compensation Fund balance of $15.6 million for lawyers has decreased by $10.2 million. The 2014 budget planned to reduce the lawyer Compensation Fund balance by $707,000. In 2015, $707,000 has again been earmarked for the reduction of Compensation Fund levies for lawyers. The accumulated fund balance complies with Convocation's policy which, in brief, requires an amount sufficient to provide for a minimum of three successive one-in-one-hundred-year events and a maximum of four such events to be maintained in the Fund balance.

The Compensation Fund balance of $426,000 for paralegals has increased by $7,000. The 2014 budget planned to reduce the paralegal Compensation Fund balance by $40,000. In 2015, $77,000 has been earmarked for the reduction of Compensation Fund levies for paralegals.

As noted above, the E&O Fund balance has decreased from $65 million in 2013 to $58 million in 2014. Surplus investment income of $1.5 million accumulated in this fund had been earmarked for the reduction of lawyers' annual fees and was transferred in 2014. In 2015, another $1.5 million has been earmarked for the reduction of lawyers' annual fees. $2.5 million is expected to be drawn from the available surplus in the E&O Fund and applied to the 2015 insurance premium (2014 - $5 million).

The Capital Allocation Fund has increased from $4 million in 2013 to $8.1 million in 2014. The three-year budget scenario approved by Convocation with the 2014 budget, included a provision of $8.0 million, comprising $6.0 million transferred from the General Fund balance to the Capital Fund and $2.0 million from the existing Capital Fund balance, dedicated to the revitalization of the Society's information systems over the next three years. In 2014, the Society embarked on this plan to modernize its technology infrastructure, improving both its internal systems and its external-facing presence. The largest project, implementation of Enterprise Content Management, revolves around the concept of a single secure location to develop, collaborate, distribute and archive information internally using Microsoft SharePoint. Another relevant project is the Finance portlet, which allows licensees to view and pay their annual fees and initiate fee adjustments using the LSUC Portal. This was launched in December 2014.

Conclusion

A plan of action for setting strategic priorities has been approved by the Priority Planning Committee and includes the appointment of a Strategic Planning Steering Group of benchers and senior management. This Group will work with a consultant to develop the process and supporting materials for the Bencher Planning Session that will follow the next lawyer Bencher election.

The Society remains financially sound and is well placed for the future. The Society's accumulated fund balances total $118 million of which $12.5 million represents the book value of the Society's capital assets and $36 million the value, at cost, of its investments in LAWPRO.

Independent Auditor's Report

To the Members of
The Law Society of Upper Canada

We have audited the accompanying financial statements of The Law Society of Upper Canada, which comprise the balance sheet as at December 31, 2014, and the statements of revenue and expenses and change in fund balances and of cash flows for the year then ended, and a summary of significant accounting policies and other explanatory information.

Management's Responsibility for the Financial Statements

Management is responsible for the preparation and fair presentation of these financial statements in accordance with Canadian accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations, and for such internal control as management determines is necessary to enable the preparation of financial statements that are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error.

Auditor's Responsibility

Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit. We conducted our audit in accordance with Canadian generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we comply with ethical requirements and plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free from material misstatement.

An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. The procedures selected depend on the auditor's judgment, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements, whether due to fraud or error. In making those risk assessments, the auditor considers internal control relevant to the entity's preparation and fair presentation of the financial statements in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity's internal control. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of accounting estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the financial statements.

We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinion.

Opinion

In our opinion, the financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of The Law Society of Upper Canada as at December 31, 2014, and the results of its operations and its cash flows for the year then ended, in accordance with Canadian accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations.

THE LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA*Notes to Financial Statements, December 31, 2014

Stated in whole dollars except where indicated

1. Background

The Law Society of Upper Canada (the “Society”) was founded in 1797 and incorporated in 1822 with the enactment of the Law Society Act.

The Law Society Act, section 4.1, states that it is a function of the Society to ensure that:

- All persons who practise law in Ontario or provide legal services in Ontario meet standards of learning, professional competence and professional conduct that are appropriate for the legal services they provide; and
- The standards of learning, professional competence and professional conduct for the provision of a particular legal service in a particular area of law apply equally to persons who practise law in Ontario and persons who provide legal services in Ontario.

In carrying out its functions, duties and powers, the Society, pursuant to section 4.2 of the Law Society Act, shall have regard to the following principles:

- The Society has a duty to maintain and advance the cause of justice and the rule of law;
- The Society has a duty to act so as to facilitate access to justice for the people of Ontario;
- The Society has a duty to protect the public interest;
- The Society has a duty to act in a timely, open and efficient manner;
- Standards of learning, professional competence and professional conduct for members and restrictions on who may provide particular legal services should be proportionate to the significance of the regulatory objectives sought to be realized.

The governing body of the Society, which is known as Convocation, carries out this mandate. Convocation comprises benchers and the Treasurer who presides over Convocation.

In 2014, the Modernizing Regulation of the Legal Profession Act, 2013, which amended the Law Society Act, increased the number of paralegal benchers from two to five and established the Law Society Tribunal, including the provision for the appointment of an independent Tribunal Chair and two bencher vice-chairs.

At December 31, 2014, the total number of lawyers and paralegals entitled to provide legal services in Ontario were 47,400 and 6,700 respectively. The primary sources of revenues are member annual fees and insurance premiums and levies, set by Convocation, based on the financial requirements of the Society.

The Society is not subject to federal or provincial income taxes.

2. Nature of Financial Statements

These financial statements present the financial position and operations of the Society and include the General Fund and a number of special purpose funds restricted by the Law Society Act or Convocation.

Subsidiaries and Related Corporation

The Society has two wholly-owned subsidiaries: Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company ("LAWPRO"), and LibraryCo Inc. ("LibraryCo") and a related corporation, the Law Society Foundation. These entities have not been consolidated or included in the Society's financial statements apart from the information in Notes 4 and 5. The audited annual financial statements for these three entities are available separately.

General Fund

The General Fund accounts for the Society's program delivery and administrative activities related to the regulation and licensing of lawyers and paralegals. This fund reports unrestricted resources. At December 31, 2014, the lawyer fund balance was $18,507,000 (2013 – $21,410,000). The paralegal fund balance was $2,974,000 (2013 – $1,882,000).

The Society's policy is to maintain the General Fund balance at no less than two and no more than three months of General Fund budgeted expenses.

If the General Fund balance exceeds three months of budgeted General Fund expenses, Convocation shall utilize the excess for one or more of the following:

- Mitigate the General Fund levy for the next fiscal year;
- Transfer the excess to another Law Society fund if the fund balance is below its stated policy benchmark.

If the General Fund balance is less than two months of budgeted General Fund expenses, Convocation shall budget for an annual surplus to restore the fund balance to its minimum policy objective. The minimum policy benchmark should be restored within three fiscal periods.

If the General Fund balance is more than two months of budgeted General Fund expenses and less than three months of budgeted General Fund expenses, Convocation may appropriate funds from the General Fund Balance for one or more of the following:

- Mitigate the General Fund levy for the next fiscal year;
- Transfer the excess to another Law Society fund if the fund balance is below its stated policy benchmark.

Restricted Funds

Compensation Fund

The Society maintains the Compensation Fund pursuant to section 51 of the Law Society Act to relieve or mitigate loss sustained by any person in consequence of dishonesty on the part of a member, in connection with the member's professional business or in connection with any trust of which the member was a trustee. The Compensation Fund is restricted in use by the Law Society Act.

Pursuant to the Law Society Act, the Compensation Fund is supported by members' annual fees, investment income and recoveries. The Compensation Fund accounts for program delivery, administration and payment of grants and has separate fund balances for lawyer members and paralegal members.

During 2014, Convocation approved new Guidelines for the determination of grants from the Compensation Fund replacing the existing Guidelines for lawyers and for paralegals. Their purpose is to structure the exercise of the Society's discretion and promote consistency in determining grants from the Compensation Fund. The new Guidelines were written to be clearer and more accessible but the underlying principles used to determine grants did not change.

The Society's policy is to maintain the Lawyer Compensation Fund balance at an amount sufficient to provide for a minimum of three successive 99th percentile aggregate claim scenarios (one-in-one-hundred-year event) and a maximum of four such events. The estimated amount of aggregate claims in the 99th percentile is to be actuarially reviewed at least every three years.

If the Lawyer Compensation Fund balance exceeds four one-in-one-hundred year events, Convocation shall utilize some or all of the excess for the following:

- Mitigation of the Lawyer Compensation Fund levy for the next fiscal year;
- Annual mitigation of the Lawyer Compensation Fund levy shall continue such that within the next three fiscal years, the maximum benchmark shall be achieved.

If the Lawyer Compensation Fund balance is less than three one-in-one-hundred-year events, Convocation shall budget for an annual surplus to restore the fund balance to its minimum policy objective. The minimum policy benchmark should be restored within three fiscal periods.

If the Lawyer Compensation Fund balance is more than three one-in-one-hundred-year events and less than four one-in-one-hundred-year events Convocation may:

- Mitigate the Lawyer Compensation Fund levy for the next fiscal year;
- Budget for a surplus sufficient to increase the fund balance to its maximum policy objective of four one-in-one-hundred-year events;
- Leave the fund balance at its current balance for the upcoming fiscal year.

The General Fund allocates certain administrative expenses, spot audit expenses and a portion of the costs of operating the investigation and discipline functions of the Society to the Compensation Fund. In 2014, these amounted to $7,872,000 (2013 – $8,353,000). At December 31, 2014, the lawyer share of the fund balance was $15,618,000 (2013 – $25,829,000) and the paralegal share of the fund balance was $426,000 (2013 – $419,000).

Errors and Omissions Insurance Fund

The Errors and Omissions Insurance Fund (“E&O Fund”) accounts for insurance-related transactions between LAWPRO, the Society and insured lawyers. The E&O Fund collects premiums and levies from lawyers, reported as revenues, and remits these amounts to LAWPRO, reported as expenses.

Pursuant to section 61 of the Law Society Act, the Society arranges mandatory professional liability insurance for practising lawyers with LAWPRO, and through the E&O Fund, levies the insured lawyers. Each year, the premium for the insurance program is established through a process whereby LAWPRO provides an offer for review and acceptance by Convocation. The offer provides details on the components of the insurance program, including anticipated base premiums, claims history levies, transaction-based levies and amounts to be drawn from the E&O Fund balance.

Under the offer for 2014, $5 million was drawn from the available surplus in the E&O Fund built up in prior years and applied to the 2014 insurance premium (2013 - $nil).

To the extent that transaction-based levies exceed anticipated amounts, the excess remains in the E&O Fund and is applied as premiums in future years. In the event of a shortfall, the shortfall is met by additional funds from the E&O fund balance. The net 2014 contribution to the insurance program was $1,458,000. The net 2013 contribution to the E&O Fund balance was $334,000.

There is also a retrospective premium provision under the insurance policy between the Society and LAWPRO. To the extent underwriting results vary from the approved program, additional premiums are charged. Under these provisions, LAWPRO made no retrospective premium assessment in 2014 and 2013.

At December 31, 2014, the E&O Fund balance was $58,305,000 (2013 – $65,042,000) of which $35,642,000 (2013 – $35,642,000) comprises the Society’s investment in LAWPRO.

Capital Allocation Fund

The Capital Allocation Fund is maintained to provide a source of funds for the acquisition and maintenance of the Society’s capital assets. These include buildings and major equipment including computers. Amounts of assets capitalized, according to the Society’s capital asset policy, are transferred to the Invested in Capital Assets Fund. Expenditures not capitalized are expended in the Capital Allocation Fund. During 2014, $6,000,000 was transferred to the Capital Allocation Fund from the lawyer General Fund to finance information systems upgrades over the next three years. At December 31, 2014, the balance was $8,096,000 (2013 – $3,953,000).

Invested in Capital Assets Fund

The Invested in Capital Assets Fund records transactions related to the Society’s capital assets, specifically acquisitions, amortization and disposals. At December 31, 2014, the balance was $12,549,000 (2013 – $13,653,000), representing the net book value of the Society’s capital assets.

County Libraries Fund

The County Libraries Fund records transactions related to the Society's support of county law libraries. As approved by Convocation, the fund accumulates funds for county library purposes which are remitted to LibraryCo. The fund balance at December 31, 2014 and 2013 was $nil.

Other Restricted Funds

The Repayable Allowance Fund provides loans for tuition and living expenses to candidates in the lawyer licensing process. At December 31, 2014, the balance was $300,000 (2013 – $316,000).

The J. Shirley Denison Fund, an endowment fund, provided relief and assistance to lawyers, candidates in the lawyer licensing process and former lawyers who found themselves in difficult financial circumstances. Contributions for endowments were recognized as revenues. At December 31, 2014, the balance was $nil (2013 – $46,000) and the Fund is closed.

The Special Projects Fund is maintained to ensure that financing is available for ongoing special projects approved by Convocation. The balance at December 31, 2014 was $460,000 (2013 – $758,000).

The Parental Leave Assistance Fund accounts for the delivery of the Parental Leave Assistance Program (“PLAP”) and is funded by lawyers’ fees. The PLAP provides financial assistance to lawyers in firms of five lawyers or fewer who have a net annual practice income of less than $50,000 and who do not have access to any other parental leave financial benefits. Under the program, the Society provides a fixed sum of $750 a week to eligible applicants for up to 12 weeks to cover expenses associated with maintaining their practice during a maternity, parental or adoption leave. At December 31, 2014, the Fund balance was $367,000 (2013 – $247,000).

3. Significant Accounting Policies*Basis of presentation

The financial statements have been prepared in accordance with the accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations set out in the CPA Canada Handbook – Accounting.

Financial instruments

The Society's financial assets and financial liabilities are classified and measured as follows:

Asset / Liability	Measurement
Cash and short-term investments	Fair value
Accounts receivable	Amortized cost
Portfolio investments	Fair value
Accounts payable and accrued liabilities	Amortized cost
Unclaimed trust funds	Amortized cost

Other amounts noted on the Balance Sheet such as prepaid expenses, capital assets, investment in subsidiaries, deferred revenue, and the provisions for unpaid grants/claims, are not financial instruments. Investments in subsidiaries are reported at cost.

The fair value of portfolio investments is determined by reference to transactional net asset values for the fixed income and Canadian equity pooled funds. Transaction costs are expensed as incurred. The fair value of cash and short-term investments, accounts receivable, accounts payable and accrued liabilities and unclaimed trust funds approximate their carrying values due to their nature or capacity for prompt liquidation.

There has been no change in risk exposures from the previous period.

Interest rate risk

The risk that the fair value of financial instruments will fluctuate due to changes in market interest rates is managed through compliance with the Society's investment policy. The normal duration range for the bond portfolio administered under the policy is between 1 and 5 years. The Society has no interest-bearing liabilities.

Fluctuations in interest rates do not have a significant effect on cash and short-term investments of the Society.

Market risk

The risk that the fair value of financial instruments will fluctuate due to changes in market prices is managed through compliance with the Society's investment policy which requires a diversified portfolio of government bonds, corporate bonds and Canadian equities meeting specified quality requirements.

Credit risk

Credit risk is the possibility that other parties may default on their financial obligations. At year end, the maximum exposure of the Society to credit risk in cash and short and long-term fixed income investments was $101,642,000 (2013 – $101,776,000). In compliance with the Society's investment policy, fixed income investments are in the financial obligations of governments, major financial institutions and commercial paper with investment grade ratings.

At year end, the maximum exposure of the Society to credit risk in accounts receivable was $3,768,000 (2013 – $2,494,000). This credit risk is minimized by the credit quality and a diverse debtor base. The Society maintains an allowance for potential credit losses.

Liquidity risk

Liquidity risk is the risk that the Society will not be able to fund its obligations as they come due, including being unable to liquidate assets in a timely manner at a reasonable price. The Society monitors forecasts of cash flows from operations and investments and holds investments that can readily be converted into cash. Investment income is not a primary source of revenue for the Society and all underlying long-term securities are publicly listed.

The Society has not entered into any derivative transactions. In addition, the Society's contractual arrangements do not have any embedded features.

Cash and short-term investments

Cash (bank balances) and short-term investments (less than one year) are amounts on deposit and invested in short-term investment vehicles according to the Society's investment policy.

Portfolio investments

Portfolio investments are recorded at fair value. The Society manages financial risk associated with portfolio investments in accordance with its investment policy. The primary objective of the investment policy is to preserve and enhance the real capital base. The secondary objective is to generate investment returns to assist the Society in funding its programs. Convocation monitors compliance with the investment policy and regularly reviews the policy.

Capital assets

Capital assets are presented at cost net of accumulated amortization. For purposes of calculating the first year's amortization, all capital assets are deemed to be acquired, put into service, or completed on July 1. Amortization is charged to expenses on a straight-line basis over the estimated useful lives of the assets as follows:

Buildings	30 years
Building improvements	10 years
Furniture, equipment and computer hardware and software	3 to 5 years

Revenue recognition

Annual member fees, premiums and levies are set annually by Convocation and are recognized in the year to which they relate if the amount can be reasonably estimated and collection is reasonably assured. Accordingly, fees for the next fiscal year received prior to December 31 have been deferred and are recognized as revenue in the next year. Premium revenues are recognized on a pro rata basis over the term of the respective insurance policies. Premiums related to the unexpired term of coverage at the balance sheet date are reported as deferred revenue. Transaction-based levies are recorded as revenues in the year received.

Professional development & competence, and other revenues and realized investment income/losses are recognized when receivable if the amount can be reasonably estimated. Unrealized investment gains/losses are recognized with changes in the fair value of financial instruments.

Fees and premiums receivable are recorded as accounts receivable on the balance sheet, net of any required provision for doubtful amounts.

Grant - related balances

Pursuant to section 51(5) of the Law Society Act, the payment of grants from the Compensation Fund is at the discretion of Convocation. Grants paid from the lawyer pool of the Compensation Fund are subject to a $150,000 limit per applicant. Grants paid from the paralegal pool of the Compensation Fund are subject to a $10,000 limit per applicant. The Compensation Fund expense represents a provision for unpaid grants, administrative expenses and expenses allocated from the General Fund.

Provisions for unpaid grants are recorded as liabilities on the balance sheet. The measurement of the ultimate settlement costs of claims made to date that underlies the provision for unpaid grants involves estimates and measurement uncertainty. Ultimate costs incurred could vary from current estimates. Although it is not possible to measure the degree of variability inherent in such estimates, management believes that the methods of estimation that have been used will produce reasonable results given the current information. These provisions represent an estimate of the present value of grants to be paid for claims and the associated administrative costs net of recoveries. Grant liabilities are carried on a discounted basis using the yield of the underlying assets backing the grant liabilities with a provision for adverse deviation. The discount rate is 0.86% (2013 – 1.28%).

Collections

The Society owns a collection of legal research and reference material as well as a collection of portraits and sculptures. The cost of additions to the collections is expensed as incurred. No value is recorded in these financial statements for donated items. There have not been any significant changes to the collections in the current year.

Volunteer services

Convocation, consisting of the Treasurer and benchers, governs the Society. Benchers may be elected by lawyers, paralegals, appointed by the provincial government, have ex-officio status by virtue of their office or past service as elected benchers or Treasurers, or qualify as emeritus benchers. In addition, the Paralegal Standing Committee is responsible for developing policy related to paralegal regulation for Convocation's approval. With effect from when they took office in April 2014, licensed paralegals elect five paralegals as benchers and members of the Paralegal Standing Committee.

Elected and ex-officio benchers are only eligible for remuneration after contributing 26 days of voluntary time. The work of the Society is also dependent on other voluntary services by lawyers and paralegals. No value has been included in these financial statements for volunteer services.

Measurement uncertainty

The preparation of the financial statements in accordance with Canadian accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the reported amount of assets and liabilities and disclosure of contingencies at the date of the financial statements and reported amounts of revenues and expenses during the reporting period. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

The valuation of liabilities, unpaid grants and unpaid claims anticipates the combined outcomes of events that are yet to occur. There is uncertainty inherent in any such estimation and therefore a limitation upon the accuracy of these valuations. Future loss emergence may deviate from these estimates.

4. Investment in Subsidiaries

Investment in the Society's subsidiaries is recorded at cost:

	2014	2013
LAWPRO	35,642,000	35,642,000
LibraryCo	100	100
Total investment in subsidiaries	35,642,100	35,642,100

LAWPRO

The Society provides mandatory professional liability insurance to lawyers through LAWPRO, a provincially licensed insurer and wholly-owned subsidiary of the Society.

The professional liability insurance program generally requires practising lawyers to pay premiums and levies to the E&O Fund that contribute toward the premium paid by the Society to fund the anticipated costs of professional liability claims made in each annual policy period.

Paralegals obtain this form of coverage through independent insurance companies. In addition to providing mandatory lawyers professional liability insurance, LAWPRO also sells optional excess lawyers professional liability and title insurance.

The $5 million in capital stock of LAWPRO comprises 30,000 common shares of par value of $100 each and 20,000 6% non-cumulative, redeemable, non-voting preferred shares. In the period from 1995 to 1997, the Society transferred a net amount of $30.6 million in capitalization funding as contributed surplus to LAWPRO.

As required by Canadian generally accepted accounting principles, LAWPRO, a publicly accountable entity, uses International Financial Reporting Standards ("IFRS").

There are therefore significant differences in the accounting policies of LAWPRO and the Society, but because the two organizations are so different and LAWPRO is not consolidated, variances arising from the different financial reporting framework adopted by the two organizations have not been reconciled.

Summarized balance sheet of LAWPRO:

($000's)	2014	2013
Total assets	681,909	645,436
Total liabilities	473,284	455,561

Cash and cash equivalents, beginning of year	14,525	18,377
Cash and cash equivalents, end of year	17,328	14,525

LAWPRO administers the operations of the E&O Fund at no charge, under an administrative services agreement. LAWPRO billed the Society $110,872,000 (2013 – $102,093,000) for premiums during the year. LAWPRO contributed $231,000 to a wellness program provided by the Society to its members (2013 – $210,000). Included in the Society's financial statements are amounts due to LAWPRO of $6,634,000 (2013 – due from of $3,000).

LibraryCo

LibraryCo, a wholly-owned, not-for-profit subsidiary of the Society, was established to develop policies, procedures, guidelines and standards for the delivery of county law library services and legal information across Ontario and to administer funding on behalf of the Society. LibraryCo was incorporated under the Business Corporations Act (Ontario) in 2001. The Society holds all of the 100 common shares. Of the 100 special shares, 25 are held by the Toronto Lawyers Association (“TLA”) and 75 are held by the County and District Law Presidents’ Association (“CDLPA”). The Society may appoint up to four directors, CDLPA may appoint up to three directors and TLA may appoint one director. The investment is recorded at cost on the Society's Balance Sheet.

The Society levies and collects funds for county and district law library purposes and transfers these funds to LibraryCo. Convocation internally restricts these funds for use by county and district law libraries to carry out their annual operations and any special projects approved by Convocation.

Summarized balance sheet of LibraryCo:

($000's)	2014	2013
Total assets	740	909
Total liabilities	98	26
Total share capital and fund balances	642	883
Total liabilities, share capital and fund balances	740	909

Summarized statement of income of LibraryCo for the year ended December 31:

($000's)	2014	2013
Total revenue	8,049	8,230
Total expenses	8,290	8,318
Deficit	241	88

Summarized statement of cash flows of LibraryCo for the year ended December 31:

($000's)	2014	2013
Net cash outflow from operating activities	201	(98)
Cash and short-term investments, beginning of year	864	962
Cash and short-term investments, end of year	663	864

The Society administers the operations of LibraryCo under an administrative services agreement. The total amount billed by the Society was $589,000 (2013 – $591,000) for administrative services and certain other services and publications. Included in the Society's accounts receivable are amounts due from LibraryCo of $1,000 (2013 – $8,000).

5. Related Corporation

The Law Society Foundation ("LSF") is regarded as a related corporation, although the Society does not have an equity interest in the LSF.

The LSF, a registered charity, was incorporated by Letters Patent in 1962. The objectives of the LSF are to foster, encourage and promote legal education in Ontario, provide financial assistance to licensing process candidates in Ontario, restore and preserve land and buildings of historical significance to Canada's legal heritage, receive gifts of muniments and legal memorabilia of interest and significance to Canada's legal heritage, maintain a collection of gifts of books and other written material for use by educational institutions in Canada, receive donations and maintain funds for the relief of poverty by providing meals to persons in need.

The Society provides facilities, administration, accounting, security and certain other services at no cost to the LSF. Trustees of the LSF are elected by the members of the LSF. Included in the Society's accounts receivable are amounts due from the LSF of $99,000 (2013 – $30,000).

6. Portfolio Investments

($000's)	2014	2013
Debt securities	61,924	62,665
Canadian equities	16,476	14,484
Total portfolio investments	78,400	77,149

At December 31, 2013 the Society's debt securities were invested in individual securities. In June 2014 these were transferred to a pooled fund. The debt securities have effective interest rates and maturity dates as follows:

	2014	2013
Effective interest rates (%)	1.1 – 2.8	1.4 – 3.1
Maturity dates (years)	1 - 5	1 - 5

7. Capital Assets

Furniture, equipment and computer hardware and software	7,901	6,406	1,495
Total capital assets	56,290	42,637	13,653

8. Accounts Payable and Accrued Liabilities and Accounts Receivable

Included in accounts payable is $258,000 in government remittances, primarily sales taxes (2013 – $934,000).

The accounts receivable balance comprises:

($000's)	2014	2013
Accounts receivable	19,186	15,352
Allowance for doubtful accounts	15,418	12,858
Accounts receivable – net	3,768	2,494

The allowance for doubtful accounts mainly relates to monitoring and enforcement receivables and annual fees receivable.

9. Unclaimed Trust Funds

Section 59.6 of the Law Society Act permits a member who has held money in trust for, or on account of, a person for a period of at least two years, to apply in accordance with the by-laws for permission to pay the money to the Society. Money paid to the Society is held in trust in perpetuity for the purpose of satisfying the claims of the persons who are entitled to the capital amount. Subject to certain provisions in the Act enabling the Society to recover its expenses associated with maintaining these funds, net income from the money held in trust shall be paid to the Law Foundation of Ontario. Unclaimed money held in trust amounts to $3,712,000 (2013 – $3,195,000).

10. Other Trust Funds

The Society administers client funds for members under voluntary or court-ordered trusteeships. These funds and matching liabilities are not reflected on the Balance Sheet. Money paid to the Society is held in trust until it is repaid to the clients or transferred to the Unclaimed Trust Funds. At December 31, 2014, total funds held in trust amount to $2,449,000 (2013 – $2,760,000).

11. Other Revenues

Included in other revenues are late fees, catering, monitoring & enforcement revenues, Ontario Reports, the LibraryCo administration fee and other miscellaneous revenue.

12. Investment Income

Investment income is summarized below:

($000's)	2014	2013
Dividends and interest	2,749	2,555
Realized gains	1,542	608
Unrealized (losses) gains	(556)	1,516
Total	3,735	4,679

13. Other Expenses

Included in Convocation, policy and outreach expenses are payments for the total remuneration of elected and ex-officio benchers, lay benchers and Paralegal Standing Committee members during the year of $972,000 (2013 – $836,000). The total expense reimbursements of the elected and ex-officio benchers, lay benchers and Paralegal Standing Committee members during the year was $544,000 (2013 – $557,000). The Treasurer's honorarium for the year was $185,000 (2013 – $176,000).

14. Interfund Transfers

During the year the following interfund transfers took place:

- $2,472,000 transferred from the Capital Allocation Fund to the Invested in Capital Assets Fund representing assets capitalized during the year in compliance with the Society's accounting policies;
- $12,000 transferred from the County Libraries Fund to the lawyer General Fund;
- $17,000 transferred from the lawyer General Fund to the paralegal General Fund;
- Transfer of $100,000 from the lawyer General Fund to the Repayable Allowance Fund, as provided in the 2014 budget to fund the Repayable Allowance Program in the Licensing Process;
- Transfer of $298,000 from the Special Projects Fund to the lawyer General Fund;
- Transfer of $1,500,000 from the E&O Fund to the lawyer General Fund as provided in the 2014 budget representing surplus investment income;
- Transfer of $6,082,000 from the lawyer General Fund to the Capital Allocation Fund as provided in the 2014 budget to fund information technology projects.

15. Pension Plan

The Society maintains a defined contribution plan for all eligible employees of the Society. Each member of the plan, other than designated employees, elect to contribute matching employee and employer contributions from 1% to 6% of annual earnings up to the maximum deduction allowed by the Canada Revenue Agency. Designated employees, who hold executive positions, have contributions made to the plan by the Society equivalent to 12% of annual earnings up to the maximum deduction allowed by the Canada Revenue Agency. The Society's pension expense in 2014 amounted to $2,526,000 (2013 – $2,495,000).

16. Commitments

The Society is committed to monthly lease payments for property under leases having various terms up to April 2020. Aggregate minimum annual payments to the expiry of the leases are as follows:

2015	$955,000
2016	$922,000
2017	$923,000
2018	$926,000
2019	$928,000
Thereafter	$309,000

In 2011, the Society renewed a five-year commitment in the annual amount of $138,000 to the Law Commission of Ontario to support its operations.

17. Contingent Liabilities

A number of claims or potential claims are pending against the Society. It is not possible for the Society to predict with any certainty the outcomes of such claims or potential claims. Except as set out in the next paragraph, management is of the opinion, based on the information presently available, that it is unlikely any liability, to the extent not covered by insurance or inclusion in the financial statements, would be material to the Society's financial position.

Members failing to meet their professional and ethical obligations are subject to the Society's regulatory process. Regulatory proceedings may result in cost awards against the Society. At the end of 2014, in management's judgement, there is at least a reasonable possibility that a contingent liability relating to one or more cost awards may exist but the amount of any losses cannot be reliably estimated. From its regulatory proceedings, the Society has determined that the ultimate settlement for costs awards could range from nil to approximately $5 million. No amount has been recorded in the financial statements.

FOR DECISION

INVESTMENT POLICY

Motion:

12. That Convocation approve the updated Investment Policy.
13. A copy of the draft Investment Policy follows.
14. In the “Accountabilities and Responsibilities” section of the Investment Policy it states that “Convocation shall.... review the administration of the Portfolios in the context of this policy. This shall be done on at least an annual basis.” This was last completed in May 2014.
15. The Investment Policy governs the investment portfolios of the General, Compensation and Errors & Omissions Insurance (“E&O”) Funds. At December 31, 2014, excluding cash and short-term investments, these investments had a total market value of $78 million comprising $62 million in fixed income investments and $16 million in equity investments.
16. The General Fund is the Law Society’s operating fund, accounting for the Law Society’s program delivery and administrative activities related to the regulation and licensing of members. The Law Society maintains the Compensation Fund pursuant to section 51 of the Law Society Act to relieve or mitigate loss sustained by any person in consequence of dishonesty on the part of a member. The E&O Fund accounts for insurance-related transactions between LAWPRO, the Law Society and insured lawyers.

Revisions

17. Many of the edits can be characterized as housekeeping such as updating balances at December 31, 2014.
18. However the revised draft policy also recommends a change in the mix of the fixed income portfolio which comprises 85% of the total portfolio with Canadian equities making up the remaining 15%. The fixed income portfolio uses the FTSE TMX Short Term Bond Index as the benchmark for its performance and therefore its asset mix. The possible change to the policy's fixed income asset mix has been initiated because of the considerable change in the composition of the FTSE TMX Short Term Bond Index over the last five years as a result of relative shifts between the amounts of net issuance of bonds in each sector. Since 2010, the following are the major changes to weightings within the FTSE TMX Short Term Bond Index:

	Change in benchmark over last five years
Government of Canada or Government of Canada guaranteed bonds	59% to 46%
Corporate bonds	26% to 36%
Corporate BBB bonds	4% to 8%

19. The Law Society's current fixed income asset mix no longer accurately reflects the benchmark TMX Short Term Bond index and the proposed changes are primarily intended to more properly align the Law Society's fixed income portfolio with its benchmark index. The proposal is to change the fixed income asset mix from:

Bond Holdings	Maximum
Government of Canada or Government of Canada guaranteed bonds	100%
Provincial government and provincial government guaranteed bonds	60%
Municipal bonds	10%
Corporate bonds	50%
Corporate BBB bonds	10%

to:

Bond Holdings	Asset Mix
	Maximum	Target	Minimum
Government of Canada or Government of Canada guaranteed bonds	100%	46%	26%
Provincial government and provincial government guaranteed bonds and municipal bonds	38%	18%	0%
Corporate bonds*	56%	36%	0%

*The Target for BBB bonds within corporate bonds is 8% of the fixed income portfolio with a maximum of 18%.

20. In the future, the Law Society's investment manager expects that corporate bonds and BBB corporate bonds will continue to increase their relative weightings within the FTSE TMX Short Term Bond Index and the current restrictions may make it more difficult to tactically overweight/underweight sectors such as federal bonds or corporate BBB's.
21. The Law Society's investment advisor, AON Hewitt, considers the suggested changes to be reasonable in the context of an active mandate. The 2 biggest risks of the fixed income portfolio are interest rate and credit risk with interest rate risk typically having the larger weighting, but this can partially be offset if the manager buys corporate bonds. AON still considers the weighting for BBBs at 8.5% +/- 10% fairly small and the portfolio has a more balanced profile.
22. The draft change to the fixed income asset mix increases risk, but the overall asset mix of the portfolio, with its concentration in short-term, fixed income securities is still very conservative.

Other Information

23. The Law Society's investment policy, with its significant bias towards short-term fixed income securities is conservative and relatively defensive. Investment returns in 2014 exceeded budget although the Law Society does not rely on investment returns as core funding for programs. The Committee deferred discussing increasing exposure to equities due to the wide variety of options. The recommended policy is intended to guide the Law Society's investment activities for the next year after which time the annual policy review will again be presented for consideration.
24. The Law Society has tax-exempt status under paragraph 149(1)(l) of the Income Tax Act. An organization that claims a tax exemption under paragraph 149(1)(l) of the Act is described as a club, society, or association that is organized and operated exclusively for social welfare, civic improvement, pleasure or recreation, or any other purpose except profit. In noting evidence of a profit purpose which would contravene paragraph 149(1)(l), the CRA has identified the holding of speculative or non-passive investments as a risk area. Aggressive investment policies may be regarded as a profit purpose and the primary objective of an investment policy should be to preserve capital, not maximize returns. Investments that do not match the purpose of the underlying reserves and cash flow needs may be regarded as an issue by CRA.

25. Brian White from consultants AON Hewitt and Steven Copeland and Ryan Domsey from investment manager Foyston Gordon & Payne, assisted the Committee in assessing the Investment Policy.
26. Some issues typically considered in assessing the Investment Policy are:
  - a) Risk - The Law Society has an ability to adopt a higher level of risk, however the Law Society's willingness to adopt a higher level of risk is very low. The current Investment Policy is generally in line with the Law Society's nature, goals and purpose.
  - b) Active versus Passive Management - The Law Society could consider passive investment management. Passive management aims to replicate the performance of a specified stock market index. This consideration is based on the difficulty active managers have experienced in adding value to Canadian bond returns, where we have the most exposure. However it is important for an investment manager to strive to exceed the relevant benchmark and to make tactical decisions on asset allocation when appropriate. As analyzed in the attached report on the returns achieved by the Investment Manager, their performance supports this decision.
  - c) Global Equities - Investing in global equities may increase expected returns without increasing expected risk, because of improved diversification. However the relatively small scale of the Law Society's investments means managing the currency risk can be expensive, reducing net investment returns. The general principle of reduced risk with geographic diversification appears muted in practice and the current economic climate lends itself to a defensive investment strategy. The current policy has demonstrated its effectiveness under volatile market conditions.
  - d) Asset Mix – the allocation between fixed income securities and equities is currently considered to be appropriate in the context of the paragraph on the Law Society's tax-exempt status above.
  - e) Investment Manager - Moving to a passive investment structure as in b) above may require a change in investment manager. AON Hewitt has noted that such a change could be disruptive and costly.

Recommendation

27. The draft policy is based on the Law Society's tax-exempt status and focuses on capital preservation rather than the pursuit of aggressive investment returns. The Law Society's fixed income portfolio currently has a relatively high yield compared to current rates available. Within this context, and after the proposed changes to the bond portfolio asset mix, the recommendation is to approve the revised Investment Policy.

28. This has the following advantages:
- a. Maintains the Law Society's orientation to fixed income investments reducing exposure to volatile equity markets.
  - b. Denominates the Law Society's investments in Canadian dollars eliminating exposure to foreign currency fluctuations.
  - c. Offers relatively low investment management fees for an actively management fixed income portfolio.
  - d. Does not force a liquidation of fixed income investments that currently have a relatively high yield and the reinvestment in lower yielding fixed income instruments.

LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA

INVESTMENT POLICY

To be Revised by Convocation
April 2015

Purpose

1. The Law Society, has adopted the following Investment Policy governing the management of the General Fund Long-Term Funds, the Compensation Fund Long-Term Funds and the Errors & Omissions Insurance Fund Long-Term Funds ("the Portfolios") and short-term investments. The Portfolios comprise the funds not required to finance the short-term obligations of the Law Society's operations. Descriptions of these Funds can be found in the Law Society's Annual Financial Statements.

Accountabilities and Responsibilities

2. Convocation

Convocation shall:

- review and approve the Investment Policy
- approve investment performance objectives
- approve the appointment and continuing retention of the Investment Manager and Custodian
- review the Portfolios' investment returns, and the administration of the Portfolios in the context of this policy. This shall be done on at least an annual basis

3. Audit & Finance Committee

The Audit & Finance Committee shall:

- review and recommend approval of the Investment Policy to Convocation
- review the Portfolios and monitor their performance
- review and recommend the appointment and continuing retention of the Investment Manager and Custodian
- review and recommend investment performance objectives
- periodically report to Convocation on the investment returns of the Portfolios, and the administration of the Portfolios. This shall be done on at least an annual basis.

4. Law Society Management

Law Society management, supplemented by professional assistance when required, has overall responsibility for:

- preparing and recommending changes to the Policy
- recommending the selection of the Investment Manager and Custodian
- recommending investment performance objectives
- monitoring the Portfolios to ensure compliance with legislative requirements and this policy
- periodically evaluating the Investment Manager and Custodian

- accounting for transactions in the Portfolios
- reviewing the Portfolios' investment returns and the administration of the Portfolios in the context of this policy. This shall be done on at least a quarterly basis.
- periodically report to Audit & Finance Committee on the investment returns of the Portfolios, and the administration of the Portfolios. This shall be done on at least an annual basis

5. Investment Manager

The Investment Manager directs the business of the Portfolios' purchases and sales, has full investment discretion subject to the Investment Policy, and has responsibility for:

- Managing the Portfolios in terms of this Investment Policy, and in the best interests of the Law Society
- Providing written notification to management of the Law Society of any violations of this Investment Policy
- Adhering to the best standards of industry practice
- Required communications as described in Section 35

6. Custodian

The Custodian shall:

- store and protect all ownership documentation for the Portfolios
- execute all transactions for the Portfolios as directed by the Investment Manager
- collect all income of the Portfolios
- provide monthly statements to the Law Society
- make all required filings to government, regulatory, taxation or other authorities and shall be one of the following:

- A bank listed in Schedule I or II of the Bank Act (Canada)
- A trust company that is incorporated under the laws of Canada, and that has shareholders' equity of not less than $10,000,000
- A company that is incorporated under the laws of Canada and that is an affiliate of a bank or trust company referred to above and has shareholders' equity, of not less than $10,000,000

Philosophy

7. The Law Society is of the belief that:

- superior rates of return over longer time periods will be achieved through active management of a broadly diversified portfolio of high quality securities
- high-risk securities, which could lead to excessive volatility and the possibility of a reduction in the capital value of the Portfolios in a depressed market, are to be avoided
- extreme positions in either individual securities or in an asset class are to be avoided

Business Characteristics

8. In order to establish an appropriate Investment Policy for the Portfolios, the following characteristics of the Law Society, relevant to the Portfolios, are noted.
- The Law Society is the governing body of Ontario's legal profession
  - Governance of the Law Society is regulated by The Law Society Act
  - The Law Society is a not-for-profit corporation and is not subject to income or capital taxes
  - The primary revenue source for both the General Fund and the Compensation Fund is member fees, mainly received between December and April of each year
  - The primary revenue source for the E&O Fund is premiums and levies from members received in the period November to January and then in quarterly increments
  - Total revenue for the Law Society for the year ended December 31, 2014 was $211 million
  - The General Fund finances the day-to-day operation of the Law Society.
  - The Compensation Fund is maintained to mitigate losses sustained by clients because of the dishonesty of a member. It is a discretionary fund, and claim payments have a maximum of $150,000
  - The Errors & Omissions Insurance Fund accounts for insurance related transactions between Lawyers' Professional Insurance Company, the Law Society and insured lawyers
  - Balances for investments at 31 December 2014 were:

CATEGORY	2014 ($mill)
Total Cash and Short-Term Investments	39.7
Errors & Omissions Insurance Fund - Long-Term Investments	29.1
General Fund – Long-Term Investments	15.1
Compensation Fund – Long-Term Investments	34.2
TOTAL	118.1

- Withdrawals from the Portfolios will depend on operating conditions and capital requirements and therefore the Portfolios should be sensitive to short-term volatility.

Objectives

9. The primary objective is to preserve and enhance the real capital base of the Portfolios.
10. The secondary objective is to generate investment returns to assist the Law Society in funding its programs.

11. Even with the guidelines outlined in this Policy, the investment returns from the Portfolios will vary from year to year, reflecting market and economic conditions, levels of inflation, government policies and many other factors which are beyond the control of the Investment Manager. These outside factors should not deter the Investment Manager from exercising due diligence and using its best efforts to achieve the long-term primary investment objective for the Portfolios as set out above, and the following benchmarks:
- By asset class
    - to outperform the appropriate market index return
  - By benchmark portfolio
    - To outperform the benchmark asset mix noted below (i.e., a portfolio consisting of 85% of the FTSE TMX Short-Term Bond Index total return, and 15% of the total return of the S&P/TSX Composite Index, over a four year moving average or complete market cycle)

Investment Manager

12. To achieve these objectives the Law Society will retain the services of a firm registered as Investment Counsel and Portfolio Manager with the Ontario Securities Commission to manage the investment Portfolios on a discretionary basis within the constraints outlined in this document. The Investment Manager is to be guided by the following:

Asset Mix

13. The following asset mix guidelines, based on market values, constitute the acceptable range of exposure for the various asset classes, which comprise each Portfolio:

	% of Total Fund
	Minimum	Benchmark Asset Mix	Maximum
Cash and Short-Term	0%	0%	15%
Bonds	60%	85%	95%
Total Fixed Income	75%	85%	95%
Canadian Equity	5%	15%	25%

Diversification

14. The investment risk of the Portfolios shall be reduced by maintaining a diversified selection of industries and companies which places primary emphasis on value, long-term growth, and safety of capital. All percentages are based on market values, except where indicated.

Short-Term Investments

15. Short-term investments with a maximum term to maturity at purchase of 364 days may be held in the Portfolios when appropriate as an alternative to bond and equity investments. Appropriate short-term investments are:
- (a) Treasury bills issued by the Government of Canada and provincial governments and their agencies
  - (b) Obligations of trust companies and Canadian and foreign banks chartered to operate in Canada, including bankers' acceptances
  - (c) Commercial paper issued by Canadian corporations with a rating of "R1" or better as established by The Dominion Bond Rating Service or equivalent rating by another recognized bond rating service, at the time of purchase.
16. No more than 8% of each of the portfolios may be invested in the securities of any one single issuer permitted in 15(b) and (c) above.
17. Where the Investment Manager operates a pooled money market fund, which meets the requirements set out in 15(a), (b) and (c), this pooled money market fund may be used as an alternative in order to achieve better rates and liquidity.

Bonds

18. Investment instruments allowed include:
- bonds, debentures, notes, non-convertible preferred stock, term deposits and guaranteed investment certificates
  - bonds of foreign issuers denominated in Canadian dollars
  - NHA-insured mortgage-backed securities or collateralized mortgage-backed securities
  - Marketable private placements of bonds.
19. Each bond portfolio may be invested within the following parameters:

Bond Holdings	Asset Mix
	Maximum	Target	Minimum
Federal and Federally Guaranteed Bonds	100%	46%	26%
Provincials, Provincially Guarantees and Municipals	38%	18%	0%
Total Corporate Issues	56%	36%	0%
Total BBB Issues with Corporate issues	18%	8%	0%
Cash or Money Market	5%	0%	0%

20. Investment in any one security or issuer shall not exceed 10% of each Bond portfolio with the exception of Government of Canada and provincial government bonds and their guarantees.

21. In line with the benchmark portfolio of the FTSE TMX Short Term Bond Index, the normal Duration range for the bond portfolio administered under this policy should be between 1 and 5 years. The Duration of a portfolio is a measure of the portfolio's sensitivity to changes in the general level of interest rates (Duration multiplied by change in interest rates gives change in value of bond portfolio).
22. The emphasis within the bond portfolio will be on quality, with a minimum rating "BBB" for bonds and debentures or "P2" for preferred shares by The Dominion Bond Rating Service or equivalent rating by another recognized bond rating service, at the time of purchase.
23. In the event of a downgrade below "BBB" for bonds and debentures, "P2" for preferred shares or "R-1" for short-term investments, the Investment Manager will advise of an appropriate course of action.
24. In cases where the recognized bond rating agencies do not agree on the credit rating, the bond will be classified according to the methodology used by FTSE TMX, which states:
  - If two agencies rate a security, use the lower of the two ratings
  - If three agencies rate a security, use the most common; and
  - If all three agencies disagree, use the middle rating.
25. In the event that an individual bond, debenture, short-term investment or preferred share is no longer rated by a recognized bond rating agency, that security will no longer be considered to be investment grade and the Investment Manager will place the asset on a watch list subject to monthly review by the Investment Manager with the Law Society until such time as the security matures, is sold or until it is upgraded to a level consistent with the purchase quality standards as expressed in the guidelines listed above. The Manager may not infer a rating for an individual unrated security from ratings of other securities issued by the same issuer.

Equities

26. The intent is to provide a diversified selection of Canadian common stocks, also allowing any of the following, provided that they are listed on a recognized stock exchange:
  - Convertible preferred stock and convertible debentures
  - Real estate investment trusts ("REITs").
27. The market value of any one issuer cannot represent more than 10% of the market value of the total Portfolios, or that equity's weight in the S&P/TSX Composite Index, whichever is greater.

Other Investments

28. Investments in open or closed-ended pooled or mutual funds are permitted provided that the assets of such funds are permissible investments under this Policy.

29. Deposit accounts of the custodian or Schedule 1 banks can be used to invest surplus cash holdings.
30. With the exception of rights, warrants and special warrants or instruments used for exposure purposes, no derivative investments will be permitted without the prior written approval of the Audit & Finance Committee.
31. No venture capital financing or non-conventional investments will be permitted without the prior written approval of the Audit & Finance Committee.
32. In the event any investment has no active market, the Investment Manager will advise of an appropriate course of action for the valuation of that investment.

Discretion

33. The Investment Manager is to have full discretion in the management of the assets of the Portfolios, selecting the appropriate asset mix, and the individual securities, within the guidelines set out herein.

Delegation of Voting Rights

34. The Investment Manager has been delegated the responsibility of exercising all voting rights acquired through the Portfolios' investments. The Investment Manager will exercise acquired voting rights with the intent of fulfilling the investment policies and objectives of the Fund. The Investment Manager is expected to act in good faith and to exercise the voting rights in a prudent manner that will maximize returns for the Portfolios, and to act against any proposal which will increase the risk level or reduce the investment value of the relevant security.

Communications

35. The Communications process between the Investment Manager and Law Society Management is flexible, but at a minimum will include the following:
  - monthly transaction statements
  - a quarterly written summary listing of all portfolio transactions from the Investment Manager
  - a complete quarterly portfolio listing
  - a quarterly written assessment of the North American economies and the financial markets, and impact on the Portfolios
  - annual investment meetings with the Investment Manager. The agenda at these meetings would include an overview of the economy and the outlook for the financial markets, the current investment strategy, and a review of the performance results
  - an annual review of the Investment Policy and the Portfolios' quality and diversification guidelines.

- immediate notification of change with respect to the organization, investment professionals or investment process.

36. Any time that the Investment Manager is not in compliance with this policy, they are required to advise the Chief Financial Officer of the Law Society immediately, detailing the breach and recommending a course of action to remedy the situation.

Standard of Professional Conduct

37. All investment activities of the Investment Manager and their employees shall be conducted in accordance with the Code of Ethics and Standards of Professional Conduct of the CFA Institute.

The Investment Manager will manage the Portfolios with the care, diligence and skill that an investment manager of ordinary prudence would use in dealing with institutional assets. The Investment Manager will also use all relevant knowledge and skill that it possesses or ought to possess as a prudent expert in investment management.

Securities Lending

38. No lending of securities is permitted.

Borrowing

39. The Portfolios shall not borrow money.

Conflicts of Interest – Investment Policy

40. Conflict of interest standards apply to all members of Convocation, Law Society management and the Investment Manager, as well as to all Agents employed by the Law Society, in the execution of their fiduciary responsibilities.

41. An 'Agent' is defined to mean a company, organization, association or individual, as well as its employees, retained by the Law Society to provide specific services with respect to the administration and management of the Law Society's investment assets.

42. In carrying out their fiduciary responsibilities, these parties must act at all times in the best interests, and for the benefit, of the Law Society. All parties must act in the manner that a "prudent person" would in matters related to the investment strategy and portfolio management.

43. No affected person shall accept a gift or gratuity or other personal favour, other than one of nominal value, from an individual with whom the person deals in the course of performance of his or her duties and responsibilities.

44. In the execution of their duties, all of the parties listed in Section 40 above shall disclose any material conflict of interest relating to them, or any material ownership of securities, which could impair their ability to render unbiased decisions, as it relates to the administration of the investment assets.
45. Further, it is expected that none of the parties listed in Section 40 above shall make any personal financial gain (direct or indirect) because of their fiduciary position. However, normal and reasonable fees and expenses incurred in the discharge of their responsibilities are permitted if documented and approved by the Law Society.
46. It is incumbent on any party affected by this Policy who believes that he/she may have a material conflict of interest, or who is aware of any conflict of interest, to notify the CEO or the CFO of the Law Society. Disclosure should be made promptly after the affected person becomes aware of the conflict. The CEO or CFO, in turn, will decide what action is appropriate under the circumstances but, at a minimum, will table the matter at the next regular meeting of the Audit & Finance Committee.
47. No affected person who has or is required to make a disclosure as contemplated in this Policy shall participate in any discussion, decision or vote relating to any proposed investment or transaction in respect of which he or she has made or is required to make disclosure.

Changes to Policy

48. This Investment Policy may only be changed by Convocation on the specific recommendation of the Audit & Finance Committee.

FOR DECISION

INVESTMENT MANAGER AND CUSTODIAN*Motion:

29. That Convocation approve the continued retention of the Investment Manager, Foyston Gordon & Payne and the Custodian, CIBC Mellon Global Securities Services Company.

Investment Manager

30. Foyston Gordon & Payne ("FGP") has been the Law Society's investment manager since 2003.
31. The Investment Monitoring Report as at December 31, 2014 from AON Hewitt, assessing the investing performance of FGP forms part of this material. The Report indicates that the gross return of the portfolio over the most recent four year period outperformed the benchmark by 1.1% and does not disclose any issues. AON Hewitt has also noted that FGP is well qualified to apply the provisions of the Law Society's investment policy with its emphasis on fixed income investments.
32. The Law Society currently enjoys a favourable management fee on the portfolio under management at FGP. In addition, FGP currently provides investment management services for the Law Society Foundation at no cost.

Custodian

33. Core custody services include safekeeping of securities, transaction settlements, and administering corporate actions. CIBC Mellon Global Securities Services Company has been the Law Society's investment custodian since 2001. Other options were last assessed in the custodial services marketplace five years ago but there is little incentive to redo this as the marketplace for investment custodians is limited and RBC Investor Services is the only viable competition.

34. Custodial fees are under $2,000 per month so there is currently little prospect of significant savings. We are satisfied with the custodial services and there is no difference in the financial and other security risk of the two institutions, leading to a conclusion to remain with CIBC Mellon.

Negative asset class performance within Canadian equities, an overweight to Canadian equities and an underweight to Canadian fixed income detracted value from the overall portfolio over the six month period.

FGP Canadian equities underperformed the Index due to negative stock picks in Energy, Industrials, Consumer Discretionary and Telecommunications. An underweight to Health Care and Industrials, as well as an overweight to Energy also detracted value from the Fund. Strong stock picks in Materials along with an overweight to Consumer Discretionary and an underweight to Materials provided a partial offset to the Fund's overall negative performance.

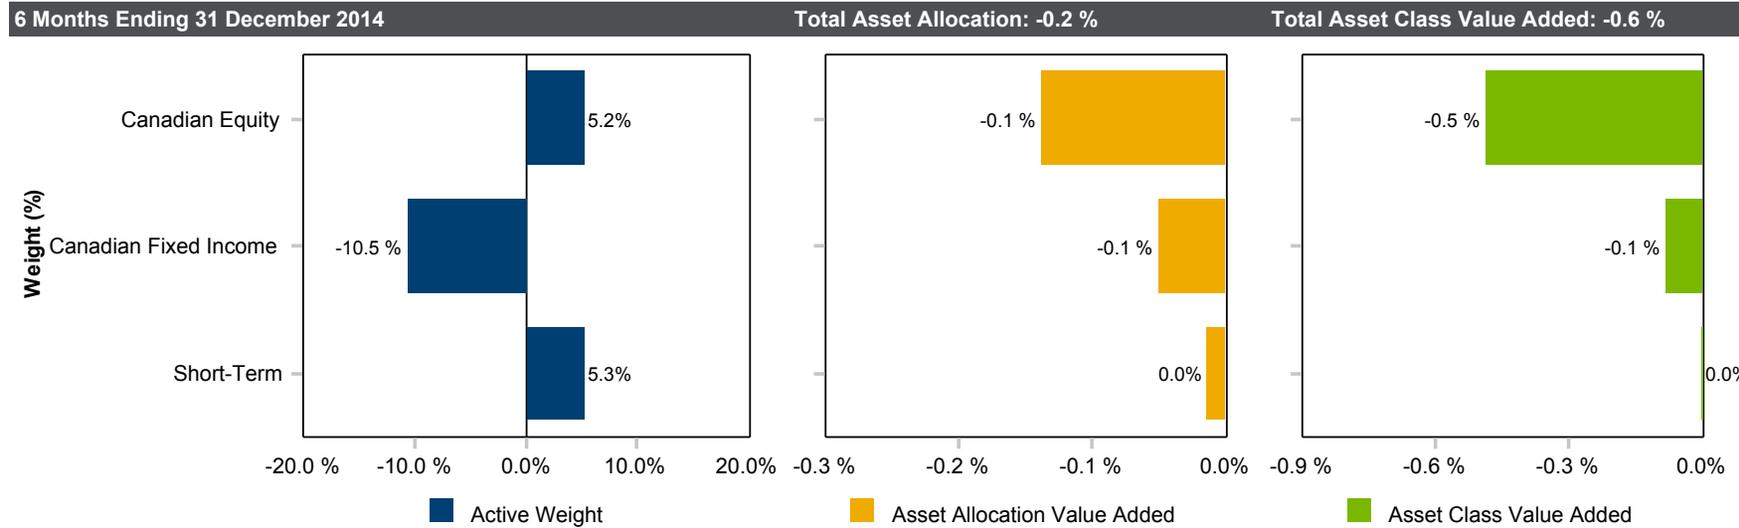

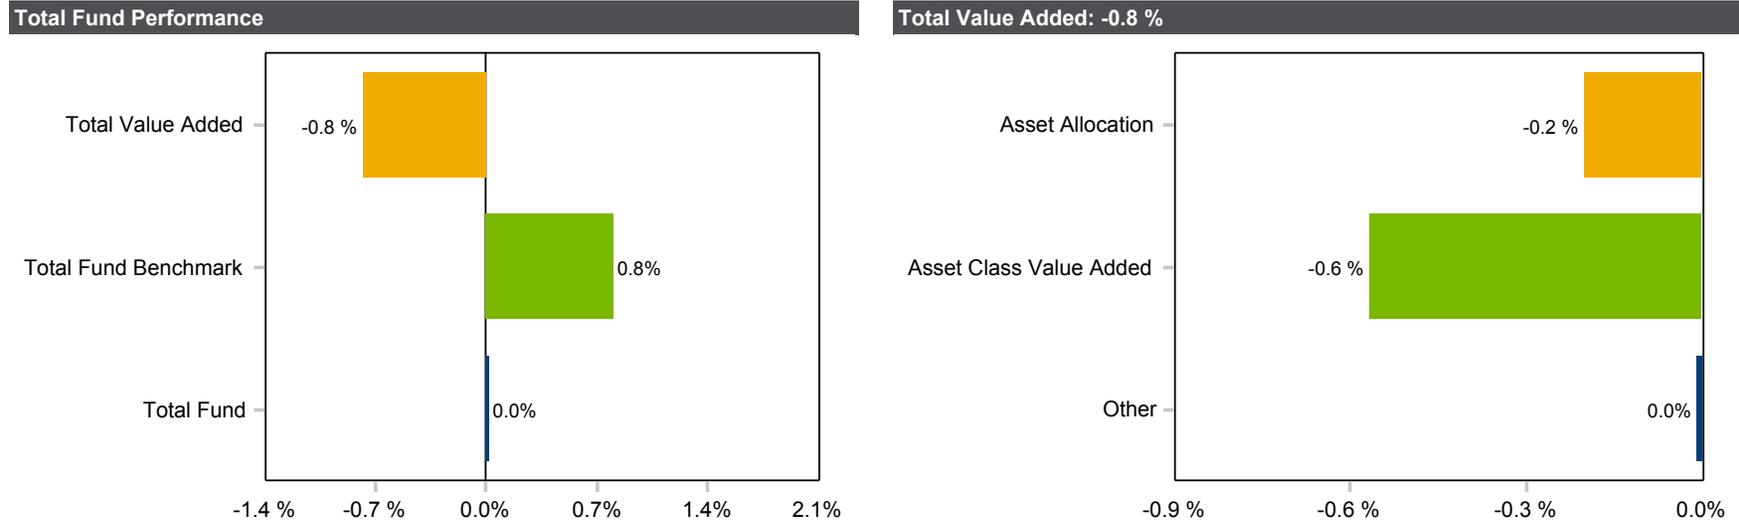

Fixed income underperformance was mainly due to its underweight in the provincials and a slightly lower than Index duration, as yields continued to fall during the period.

Negative asset class performance within Canadian equities, an overweight to Canadian equities and an underweight to Canadian fixed income detracted value from the overall portfolio over the six month period.

FGP Canadian equities underperformed the Index due to negative stock picks in Energy, Industrials, Consumer Discretionary and Telecommunications. An underweight to Health Care and Industrials, as well as an overweight to Energy also detracted value from the Fund. Strong stock picks in Materials along with an overweight to Consumer Discretionary and an underweight to Materials provided a partial offset to the Fund's overall negative performance.

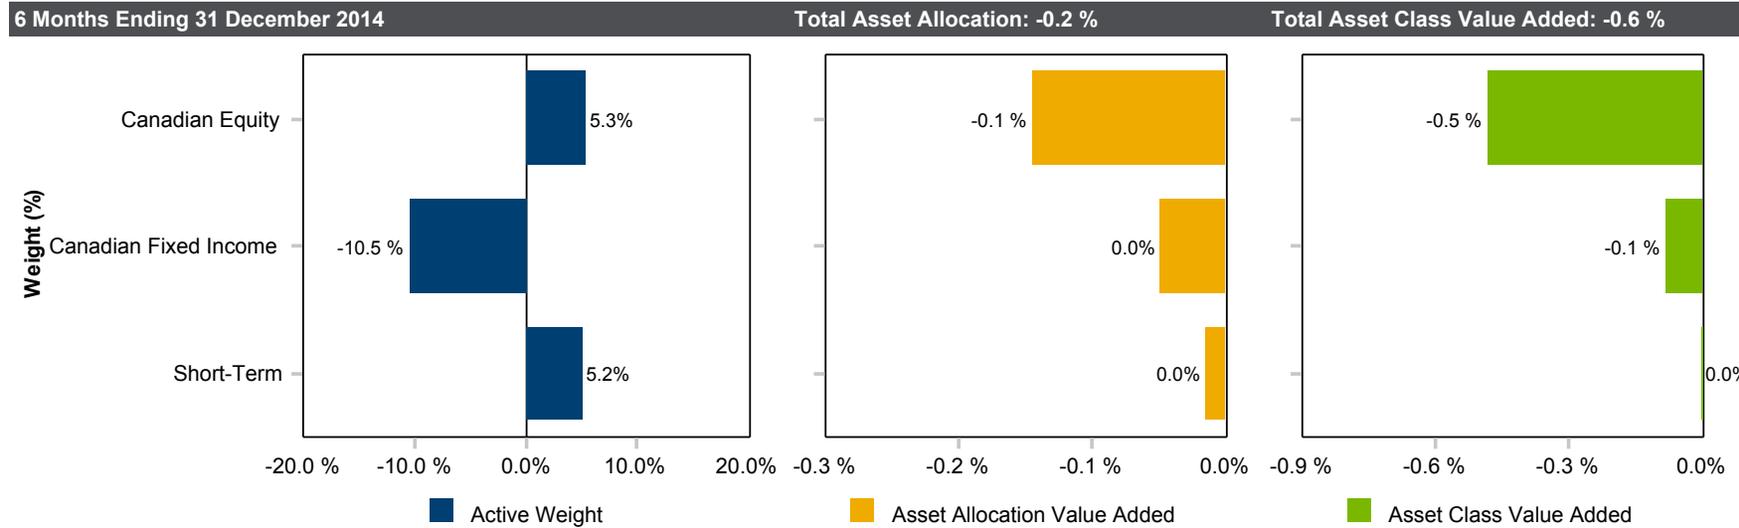

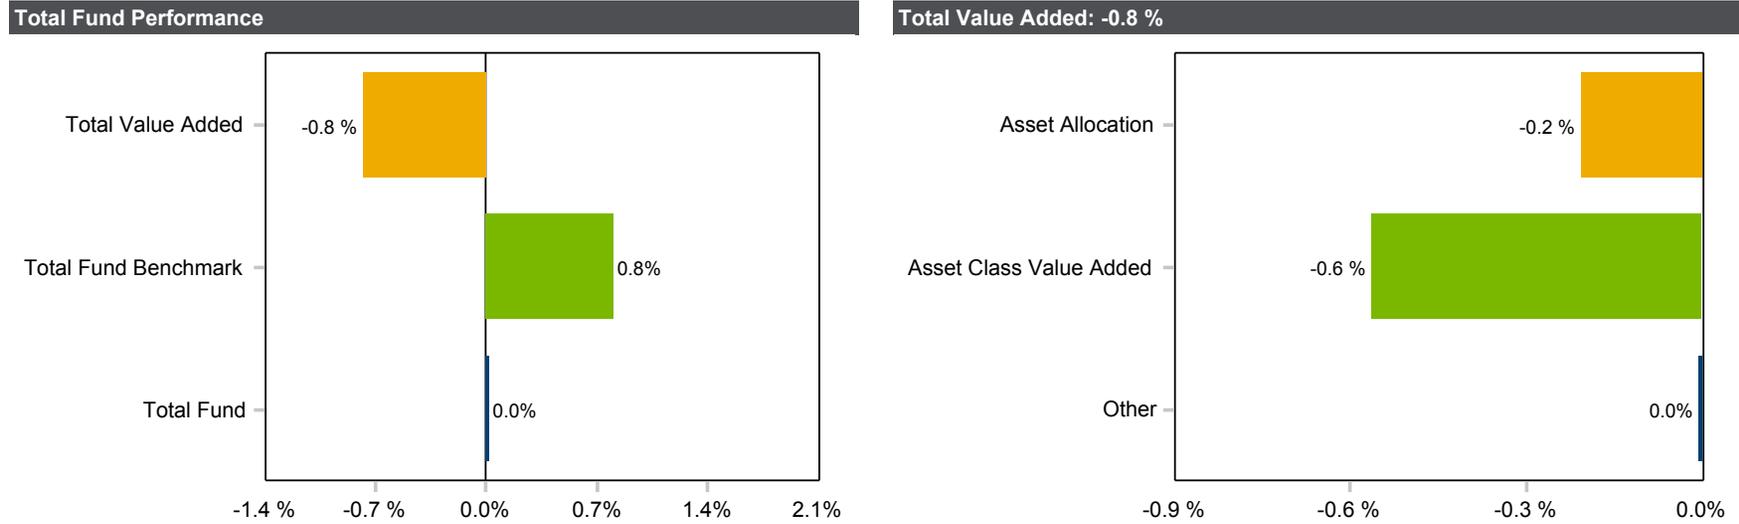

Fixed income underperformance was mainly due to its underweight in the provincials and a slightly lower than Index duration, as yields continued to fall during the period.

Summary of Investment Objectives

The investment policy contains specific performance objectives for the fund and for the investment manager.

Investment rates of return are reported on a calendar basis and include realized and unrealized capital gains and losses, plus income.

Returns are calculated on a time-weighted basis and are compared to the objectives described below in order to assess the performance of the investment manager.

The primary objective is to outperform a benchmark portfolio over moving four-year periods. The specific benchmark weights are provided on the following page.

Management Mandates: Active management of the asset allocation
Active management of the asset classes

Appendix C - Capital Markets Environment

Capital Markets Environment

Capital Markets Environment

As of 31 December 2014

Outlook for Oil Prices

Summary

- The halving of oil prices since June is more supply than demand driven.
- At these levels, oil prices are too low to be sustainable.
- Prices will rebound, but only after production is cut. The timing of a production cut is highly uncertain. Even so, oil futures markets are being too pessimistic.
- Weaker oil prices will boost the global economy modestly in 2015.
- Lower oil prices completed the 'perfect storm' in the bond market. Lower oil is sentimentally good for bonds, but provides no lasting fundamental support.
- We do not expect low oil prices will impact global equity markets negatively.

Supply not Demand is the Issue

Crude oil prices have fallen substantially in the past few weeks, falling by half since their June highs.

The increase in the supply outside of the OPEC, in particular the increase in US shale oil production, is the key driver contributing to the fall in oil prices. The supply-demand imbalance became noticeable through the middle of the year (see chart above).

Capital Markets Environment

Capital Markets Environment

As of 31 December 2014

OPEC

The OPEC announcement on November 25, refusing to reduce production, caused further price declines, highlighting the absence of a market stabilizer.

The unwillingness to cut output appears to be a concerted attempt to hurt higher cost capacity outside OPEC. New production coming from Canadian oil sands or expensive off shore fields like the Kashagan (Caspian sea) have costs 4-5 times Saudi Arabia's estimated $15-$20/barrel. Even US shale oil average costs are somewhere in the mid to upper $50s/barrel.

Are the Price Decreases Sustainable?

Whatever the true 'marginal cost' of oil production globally, the lowest levels generally quoted by experts are around $80/barrel. Current prices are therefore substantially below the level needed to balance supply and demand. Inevitably supply will fall in response to current low prices (with demand possibly also moving a little higher even though weakness in demand has not been the problem), eventually taking prices higher once again.

However, the classic conundrum with commodities, and the feature that causes high intrinsic volatility, is that price changes are followed by long lags before supply responses come through – a multi-year process, but with little visibility on duration.

As a result, prices could fall further and the timing of a recovery in oil prices is very uncertain.

Lower Oil Prices Will Have a Positive Impact on the Economy

What will be the effect of these lower prices on economic activity? The general consensus is that the boost to consumer purchasing power will help economic activity. Consumers will spend more of their gains - and more quickly than producers will cut back spending. At a country level, oil importing countries gain (think Europe, much of Asia and even the U.S. which remains a net importer). Oil producers (Canada, Russia, Mexico, the OPEC block, and to an extent the UK) lose.

All told, we do expect a modest boost to global economic activity in 2015 on the reasonable view that the oil price holds somewhere near current levels for at least the first half of 2015.

Review of Financial Markets

- Commodity prices declined further in the last quarter, in particular oil prices, causing a loss of 11.6% for the S&P GSCI Light Energy Index. The S&P/TSX fell as well (-1.5%) due to the underperformance of the Energy and Material sectors. Canadian equity investors benefitted from the depreciation of the Canadian dollar versus the U.S. dollar which increased the return of the S&P 500 from 4.9% to 8.8% when expressed in Canadian dollars. In international equity markets, returns ranged from -1.0% for the MSCI Emerging Markets Net to 4.7% for the MSCI World Index. The FTSE TMX Long Term Bond Index (which can be considered a proxy for pension solvency liabilities) returned 5.3% while the FTSE TMX Universe Bond Index gained 2.7%. The FTSE EPRA/NAREIT Developed posted a comfortable return of 12.0%.

Financial Markets Performance Review
3-Month Period Ending 31 December 2014

.....

- For the year 2014, all major indices posted positive returns with the exception of the S&P GSCI Light Energy Index which lost 12.8%. The best performing indices were the FTSE EPRA/NAREIT Developed (26.3%), the S&P 500 (23.9%) and the FTSE TMX Canada Long Term Bond Index (17.5%). The MSCI EAFE underperformed other equity indices with a return of 3.7%, while hedge funds, represented by the HFR Funds of Funds Composite Index, gained a meager 3.2%.

Capital Markets Environment

Capital Markets Environment

As of 31 December 2014

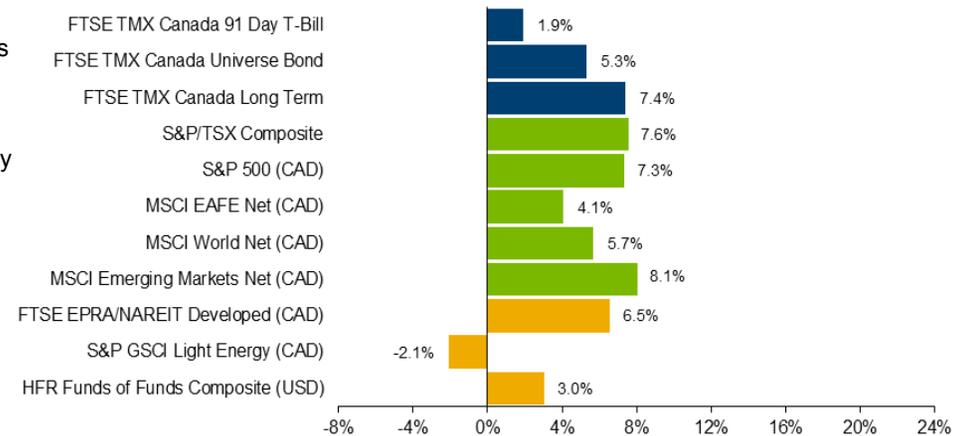

- The S&P 500 Index (CAD) posted the best return for the four-year period ending December 31, 2014, with a return of 20.1%. Strong returns were also earned in global equities (14.1%) and in global listed real estate (14.3%). Long-term bonds returned 8.2% which is higher than the S&P/TSX Index (5.1%). Trailing the other categories were commodities with a negative return of -5.2%.

Appendix D - Description of Market Indices and Statistics

Description of Market Indices and Statistics

Index Definitions

S&P/TSX Composite

S&P/TSX Composite Index comprises approximately 71 percent of market capitalization for Canadian-based, Toronto Stock Exchange listed companies. It is calculated on a float market capitalization and is the broadest Canadian equity index available. The index also serves as the premier benchmark for Canadian pension funds and mutual market funds.

S&P 500

Standard and Poor's 500 Composite Stock Index consists of the largest 500 companies in the United States chosen for market size, liquidity and industry group representation. It is a market-value weighted index, with each stock's weight in the index proportionate to its market value. For the purposes of this report, the S&P 500 Index returns are converted from U.S. dollars into Canadian dollars, and therefore reflect currency gains or losses.

FTSE TMX Universe Bond (formerly DEX Universe Bond)

The FTSE TMX Universe Bond Index covers all marketable Canadian bonds with term to maturity of more than one year. The Universe contains approximately one thousand marketable Canadian bonds with an average term of 10.1 years and an average duration of 7.1 years. The purpose of the index is to reflect the performance of the broad "Canadian Bond Market" in a similar manner to the S&P/TSX Composite Index.

FTSE TMX 91-Day T-Bill (formerly DEX 91-Day T-Bill)

Canada Treasury Bills represent the highest quality short-term instruments available. The index is constructed by selling and repurchasing Government of Canada T-Bills with an average term to maturity of 91 days. The 91-Day Treasury Bill Index is calculated and marked to market daily.

Description of Market Indices and Statistics*Statistic Definitions*As of 31 December 2014*Active Return

Arithmetic difference between the portfolio return and the benchmark return over a specified time period.

Active Weight

The difference between the portfolio weight and the benchmark weight, where the weight is based on the beginning of period weights for the sector/region/asset class for a certain periodicity (monthly or quarterly, depending upon the reporting frequency), adjusted by the relative return for the sector/region/asset class.

Annualized Value Added

A portfolio's excess return over a benchmark, annualized as it is recorded.

Asset Allocation

The value added or subtracted by under or over weighting sectors/regions/asset classes versus the benchmark weights. Asset allocation measures the impact on performance attributed only to the sector/region/asset class weighting decisions by the manager. It assumes that the manager holds the same securities in each sector/region/asset class and in the same proportion as in the benchmark. Any differences in return can be attributed to differences in sector weights between the manager's fund and the benchmark.

Batting Average

The frequency, expressed in percentage terms, of the portfolio's return equaling or exceeding the benchmark's return.

Beta

A measure of the sensitivity of a portfolio to the movements in the market. It is a measure of a portfolio's non-diversifiable or systematic risk.

Correlation

Also called coefficient of correlation, it is a measure of the co-movements of two sets of returns. Indicates the degree in which two sets of returns move in tandem.

Cumulative Added Value

The geometrically linked excess return of a portfolio over a benchmark.

Down Market Capture

The portfolio's average return as a percentage of the benchmark return, during periods of negative benchmark return. Lower values indicate better portfolio performance.

Downside Risk

A measure similar to standard deviation, but focuses only on the negative movements of the return series. It is calculated by taking the standard deviation of the negative quarterly set of returns. The higher the factor, the riskier the portfolio.

Description of Market Indices and Statistics

Statistic Definitions

As of 31 December 2014

Duration

A measure of a bond portfolio's sensitivity to movements in interest rates.

EPS

Earnings Per Share

Excess Return

Arithmetic difference between the managers return and the risk-free return over a specified time period.

Excess Risk

A measure of the standard deviation of a portfolio's performance relative to the risk free return.

Information Ratio

Measured by dividing the active rate of return by the tracking error. The higher the Information Ratio, the more value-added contribution by the manager.

Return

Compounded rate of return for the period.

R-Squared

The percentage of a portfolio's performance explained by the behaviour of the appropriate benchmark. High R-Square means a higher correlation of the portfolio's performance to the appropriate benchmark.

Security Selection

The value added or subtracted by holding securities at weights which differ from those in the benchmark, including securities not in the benchmark or a zero weight. The security selection return assumes the manager weights for each sector/region/asset class in the portfolio are in the same proportion as in the overall benchmark, and excess returns are due to security selection. That is, differences in returns between the manager's fund and the benchmark are attributed to the securities the manager has chosen.

Sharpe Ratio

Represents the excess rate of return over the risk free return divided by the standard deviation of the excess return. The result is the absolute rate of return per unit of risk. The higher the value, the better the portfolio's historical risk-adjusted performance.

Simple Alpha

The difference between the portfolio's return and the benchmark's return.

Description of Market Indices and Statistics*Statistic Definitions*As of 31 December 2014*Standard Deviation

A statistical measure of the range of a portfolio's performance, the variability of a return around its average return over a specified time period.

Tracking Error

A measure of the standard deviation of a portfolio's performance relative to the performance of an appropriate benchmark.

Treynor Ratio

Similar to Sharpe ratio, but focuses on beta rather than excess risk (standard deviation). Represents the excess rate of return over the risk free rate divided by the beta. The result is the absolute rate of return per unit of risk. The higher the value, the better the portfolio's historical risk-adjusted performance.

Up Market Capture

The portfolio's average return as a percentage of the benchmark return, during periods of positive benchmark return. Higher values indicate better portfolio performance.

Executive Summary

Latest Thinking

During the last quarter, we have produced papers on the following topics. Although these topics may not be directly applicable to your Fund, they may be of general interest and provide some insight into Aon Hewitt's global research. For copies of the papers, or for more details, please contact your Aon Hewitt Investment Consultant.

Topic	Summary
Sustainable Investing – Opportunity or Obstacle?	Is the future of institutional investing sustainable? Should pension plans, foundations and endowments include sustainable investing policies in their investment policy statements? What do stakeholders think about sustainable investing? How can we access sustainable investing strategies? These are all questions that Canadian fiduciaries are asking. The answers are unique to each investor. A short paper discusses the definition of sustainable investing, the presence of such funds in Canada, as well as details on divestment and implementation.
Opportunistic Strategies for Navigating a Changing Credit Landscape	The global financial crisis continues to cast a long shadow on the credit markets, causing structural shifts in the way many businesses and consumers obtain credit. As banks cut back on lending, certain industries, individual companies and consumer groups previously reliant on bank financing have found their access to credit hampered. We believe that a diversified, global approach to credit that incorporates a variety of strategies poised to benefit from dislocations caused by this trend offers investors the potential to earn attractive returns in an otherwise low-yielding environment. This paper provides a background on the situation which has developed over the past few years and details the various funds that are able to take advantage of the current environment.
A Holistic Approach to Equity Investing	Many institutional investors are increasing their allocations to alternative investments, including hedge funds and private equity. The capital markets offer a combination of low expected returns and heightened risks in the current market environment, prompting a search for new solutions. We continue to see reduced upside in global equity markets as well as significant risks to be recognized and managed – in this environment, investors are attracted to approaches with the potential to earn continued strong returns and thrive outside a bull market. A detailed paper discusses the benefits of equity alternatives and why you should consider them as part of your wider equity allocation.

Latest Thinking

Topic	Summary
Opportunistic Deep Value Investing: A Multi-Asset Class Approach	In recent years, the capital markets offered an abundance of "deep value" investing opportunities that subsequently yielded outsized returns relative to broad equity and bond market benchmarks. Despite the rich opportunity set, for a variety of reasons many investors did not participate in these high-performing investments. We embarked on our research of deep-value investing with these investors in mind, hoping to lay a foundation for approaching these investments in advance of the next deep-value investing cycle and to broaden the use of this strategy in portfolios where it is appropriate. This detailed paper highlights the benefits of deep value investing, when it may be appropriate to invest in these strategies, the main drawbacks and risks and how these can be mitigated as well as our abilities to help find solutions for your specific fund.

Aon Hewitt Inc. reconciles the rates of return with each investment manager quarterly. Aon Hewitt Inc. calculates returns from the custodian/trustee statements while the managers use different data sources. Occasionally discrepancies occur because of differences in computational procedures, security prices, "trade date" versus "settlement date" accounting, etc. We monitor these discrepancies closely and find that they generally do not tend to persist over time. However, if a material discrepancy arises or persists, we will bring the matter to your attention after discussion with your money manager.

CHEQUE SIGNING AUTHORITY

Motion:

35. That Convocation approve a new banking resolution.
36. The new resolution updates the old titles of Managers of Trustee Services and Manager of the Compensation Fund with the new combined role of Manager of Trustee Services and Compensation Fund and replaces the old role of Unclaimed Trust Fund Officer with the new role of Forensic Auditor, Trustee Services.
37. As detailed in the accompanying banking resolution, the authorized signing officers of the Law Society are:
- the Treasurer
  - the Chairs of the Audit & Finance Committee
  - the Vice-Chair of the Audit & Finance Committee
  - designated Bencher(s)
  - the Chief Executive Officer (“CEO”)
  - the Chief Financial Officer (“CFO”)
  - the Director, Policy
  - Senior Manager, Finance
  - Officers of Trustee Services and the Compensation Fund for accounts specific to their department.
38. Paul Schabas and John Callaghan are the designated bencher signing officers due to their proximity to Osgoode Hall.
39. With the merging of the Trustee Services and Compensation Fund departments and the retirement of two employees, the signing officers for bank accounts used in support of Trustee Services operations require updating. The positions of Trustee Services Manager and the Compensation Fund Manager were combined into one position of Trustee Services and Compensation Fund Manager. The responsibilities of the signing officer previously handled by the Unclaimed Trust Fund Officer are now handled by the role of Forensic Auditor, Trustee Services.

Key Point Summary

- The 2014 financial statements of LAWPRO received an unqualified opinion from its external auditor.
- The financial statements in this report were prepared in accordance with both new and revised International Financial Reporting Standards. For more details regarding the accounting policies the Company has established under these accounting standards, see note 2 of the financial statements.
- LAWPRO's net income for the year ended December 31, 2014 was $17.1 million compared to an income of $5.9 million in 2013. Net premiums earned increased by $8.4 million to $114.9 million in 2014. Investment income for 2014 was $26.5 million, an increase of $10.3 million from 2013.
- Investment income for 2014 was impacted by $7.6 million of realized gains from regular trading during the year, a $2.4 million increase in unrealized gains on the Company's asset-liability matched portfolio, and a $0.9 million impairment expense relating to some equities that have experienced a significant or prolonged decline in value, compared to $5.6 million in realized gains, a $5.9 million decrease in unrealized gains, and a $0.9 million impairment expense in 2013.
- In total, during 2014 LAWPRO earned a comprehensive income of $18.8 million which includes an increase in unrealized gains on its surplus investments of $2.3 million and a remeasurement loss on its defined benefit pension plan of $0.6 million, compared to a comprehensive income of $18.6 million during 2013 which includes an increase in unrealized gains on its surplus investments of $12.2 million and a remeasurement income on its defined benefit pension plan of $0.5 million.
- As a result of its comprehensive income, the Company increased its shareholder's equity by $18.8 million in 2014 compared to an increase of $18.6 million in 2013.
- LAWPRO is in compliance with all regulatory requirements regarding solvency and filing of financial information. A summary of LAWPRO's position with respect to insurance ratios at year-end is included on pages 50-51.
- Assets recorded in LAWPRO's financial statements are sufficient to discharge its claim liabilities at December 31, 2014. Investment assets, inclusive of cash and cash equivalent holdings and investment income due and accrued, total $616.7 million. These funds have been invested in accordance with the Company's investment policy. Investment managers have submitted letters of compliance with investment policies (pages 52 and 53).

- There were 24,919 full-time equivalent lawyers covered under the Ontario Mandatory Professional Liability Program at December 31, 2014, an increase of approximately 3% over 2013. The base annual premium per lawyer remained flat at $3,350 in 2014. The $8.4 million increase in earned premiums from 2013 to 2014 is attributable to a $5.0 million premium contribution from the Errors & Omissions Insurance Fund in 2014 ($nil for 2013), as well as an increase in the number of insured lawyers purchasing insurance coverage in 2014.
- Revenues from transaction levies and claims history surcharge levies amounted to $26.6 million in 2014 compared to $26.3 million in 2013 for the Ontario Program. While generally in line with the 2013 results, the current year transaction levy revenue was $1.5 million under budget expectations. As a result, an additional $1.5 million of premium revenue was charged to the Errors & Omissions Insurance Fund in 2014, pursuant to LAWPRO's insurance arrangement with the Law Society of Upper Canada.
- The number of claims reported on the Ontario mandatory errors and omissions insurance program during 2014 was 2,572, slightly higher than the level experienced in 2013, bringing the number of open claim files to 3,813. Claims relating to prior years developed favourably in the aggregate, resulting in a reduction in previously established net claims liabilities of $19.0 million for LAWPRO in 2014. However, this result was offset somewhat by an increase in the current year losses incurred. The current fund year claims estimate is just under $100 million for 2014, even higher than the adverse environment established in the 2007 through 2013 fund years.
- As a result of the positive 2014 results, LAWPRO may expect to undergo the regulatory and accounting changes anticipated in the next 12 to 36 months with slightly more margin for absorption than may otherwise have been expected. In particular, significant changes to the calculation of the Minimum Capital Test have been released by the regulator for 2015. Many of these changes will have an adverse impact on LAWPRO's test results, similar to the insurance industry overall. Also, anticipated changes to various accounting standards, such as for insurance contracts under the next phase of IFRS, as well as the accounting for investments, could have an adverse impact on the Company's financial position and/or regulatory capital. Having the increase in shareholder's equity effective December 31, 2014 is positive in assisting with both of these issues.

To the Shareholder of Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company

We have audited the accompanying financial statements of Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company, which comprise the statement of financial position as at December 31, 2014, and the statements of profit or loss, comprehensive income, changes in equity and cash flows for the year then ended, and a summary of significant accounting policies and other explanatory information.

Management's Responsibility for the Financial Statements

Management is responsible for the preparation and fair presentation of these financial statements in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards, and for such internal control as management determines is necessary to enable the preparation of financial statements that are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error.

Auditor's Responsibility

Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit. We conducted our audit in accordance with Canadian generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we comply with ethical requirements and plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free from material misstatement.

An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. The procedures selected depend on the auditor's judgment, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements, whether due to fraud or error. In making those risk assessments, the auditor considers internal control relevant to the entity's preparation and fair presentation of the financial statements in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity's internal control. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of accounting estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the financial statements.

We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinion.

Opinion

In our opinion, the financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company as at December 31, 2014, and its financial performance and its cash flows for the year then ended in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards.

Appointed Actuary's Report

Eckler

I have valued the policy liabilities including reinsurance recoverables of Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company for its statement of financial position as at December 31, 2014, and their changes in its statement of profit or loss for the year then ended, in accordance with accepted actuarial practice in Canada, including selection of appropriate assumptions and methods.

In my opinion, the amount of the policy liabilities makes appropriate provision for all policy obligations, and the financial statements fairly present the results of the valuation.

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

1. Nature of Operations

Lawyers' Professional Indemnity Company (the "Company") is an insurance company, incorporated on March 14, 1990 under the Corporations Act (Ontario) and licensed to provide lawyers professional liability insurance in Ontario and title insurance in all provinces and territories in Canada. The Company is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Law Society of Upper Canada (the "Law Society"), which is the governing body for lawyers in Ontario. The Company's registered office is located at 250 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

2. Basis of Preparation and Significant Accounting Policies

These financial statements have been prepared under the Insurance Act (Ontario) and related regulations which require that, except as otherwise specified by the Company's primary insurance regulator, the Financial Services Commission of Ontario ("FSCO"), the financial statements of the Company are to be prepared in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards ("IFRS") as issued by the International Accounting Standards Board ("IASB").

These financial statements have been prepared in accordance with accounting standards issued and effective on or before December 31, 2014. None of the accounting requirements of FSCO represent exceptions to IFRS. These financial statements were authorized for issuance by the Company's Board of Directors on February 25, 2015.

The significant accounting policies used in the preparation of these financial statements are summarized below. These accounting policies conform, in all material respects, to IFRS.

Basis of measurement

The financial statements have been prepared under the historical cost basis, except for certain financial instruments that are measured at the end of each reporting period, as explained in the accounting policies below. Historical cost is generally based on the fair value of the consideration given for goods and services.

Fair value is the price that would be received to sell an asset or paid to transfer a liability in an orderly transaction between market participants at the measurement date, regardless of whether that price is directly observable or estimated using another valuation technique. In estimating the fair value of an asset or liability, the Company takes into account the characteristics of the asset or liability that market participants would likely take into account when pricing the asset or liability at the measurement date. A fair value measurement of a non-financial asset takes into account a market participant's ability to generate economic benefits by using the asset in its highest and best use or by selling it to another market participant that would use the asset in its highest and best use. Fair value for measurement and/or disclosure purposes in these financial statements is determined on such a basis, except for example, lease transactions that are within the scope of IAS 17 "Leases", and measurements that have some similarities to fair value but are not fair value, such as value in use in IAS 36 "Impairment of Assets".

The valuation process includes utilizing market driven fair value measurements from active markets where available, considering other observable and unobservable inputs and employing valuation techniques which make use of current market data. Considerable judgement may be required in interpreting market data used to develop the estimates of fair value. Accordingly, the estimates presented in these financial statements are not necessarily indicative of the amounts that would be realized in a current market exchange.

Notes to Financial Statements

Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

The Company utilizes a fair value hierarchy to categorize the inputs used in valuation techniques to measure fair value, which prioritizes these inputs into three broad levels. The level in the fair value hierarchy within which the fair value measurement is categorized in its entirety is determined on the basis of the lowest level input that is significant to the fair value measurement in its entirety. For this purpose, the significance of an input is assessed against the fair value measurement in its entirety. The three levels of the fair value hierarchy are:

Level 1 – Quoted market prices in active markets

Inputs to Level 1, the highest level of the hierarchy, reflect fair values that are quoted prices (unadjusted) in active markets for identical assets and liabilities. An active market is considered to be one in which transactions for the asset or liability occur with sufficient frequency and volume to provide pricing information on an ongoing basis. Level 1 assets and liabilities include debt and equity securities, quoted unit trusts and derivative contracts that are traded in an active exchange market, as well as certain government and agency mortgage-backed debt securities that are highly liquid and are actively traded in over-the-counter markets.

Level 2 – Modelled with significant observable market inputs

Inputs to Level 2 fair values are inputs, other than quoted prices within Level 1 prices, that are observable or can be corroborated by observable market data for substantially the full term of the assets or liabilities. Level 2 inputs include: quoted prices for similar (i.e. not identical) assets and liabilities in active markets; quoted prices for identical or similar assets and liabilities in markets that are not active, the prices are not current, or price quotations vary substantially either over time or among market makers, or in which little information is released publicly; inputs other than quoted prices that are observable for the asset or liability (for example, interest rates and yield curves observable at commonly quoted intervals, volatilities, prepayment spreads, loss severities, credit risks, and default rates); and inputs that are derived principally from, or corroborated by, observable market data by correlation or other means (market corroborated inputs). Valuations incorporate credit risk by adjusting the spread above the yield curve for government treasury securities for the appropriate amount of credit risk for each issuer, based on observed market transactions. To the extent observed market spreads are either not used in valuing a security, or do not fully reflect liquidity risk, the valuation methodology reflects a liquidity premium. Examples of these are securities measured using discounted cash flow models based on market observable swap yields, and listed debt or equity securities in a market that is inactive. This category generally includes government and agency mortgage-backed debt securities and corporate debt securities.

Level 3 – Modelled with significant unobservable market inputs

Inputs to Level 3 are unobservable, supported by little or no market activity, and are significant to the fair value of the assets or liabilities. Unobservable inputs may have been used to measure fair value to the extent that observable inputs are not available, thereby allowing for situations in which there is little, if any, market activity for the asset or liability at the measurement date (or market information for the inputs to any valuation models). As such, unobservable inputs reflect the assumptions the business unit considers that market participants would use in pricing the asset or liability. Where estimates are used, these are based on a combination of independent third-party evidence and internally developed models, calibrated to market observable data where possible. Level 3 assets and liabilities generally include certain private equity investments, certain asset-backed securities, highly structured, complex or long-dated derivative contracts, and certain collateralized debt obligations where independent pricing information was not able to be obtained for a significant portion of the underlying assets.

Use of estimates and judgments made by management

The preparation of financial statements requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the reported amounts of assets and liabilities and disclosure of contingent assets and liabilities at the date of the financial statements and the reported amounts of revenues and expenses during the reporting period. Actual results could differ from these estimates and changes in estimates are recorded in the reporting period in which they are determined. Key estimates are discussed in the following accounting policies and applicable notes.

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

Property and equipment	Note 7
Unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	Note 9
Employee future benefits	Note 13

Financial instruments – recognition and measurement

Financial assets are classified as fair value through profit or loss ("FVTPL"), available-for-sale, held to maturity or loans and receivables. Financial liabilities are classified as FVTPL or as other financial liabilities. These classifications are determined based on the characteristics of the financial assets and liabilities, the company's choice and/or the company's intent and ability. As permitted under the IFRS standards, a company has the ability to designate any financial instrument irrevocably, on initial recognition or adoption of the standards, as FVTPL provided certain criteria are met.

The Company's financial assets and liabilities are measured on the statement of financial position at fair value on initial recognition and are subsequently measured at fair value or amortized cost depending on their classification as indicated below.

Transaction costs for FVTPL investments are expensed in the current period, and for all other categories of investments are capitalized and, when applicable, amortized over the expected life of the investment. The Company accounts for the purchase and sale of securities using trade date accounting. Realized gains or losses on disposition are determined on an average cost basis.

The effective interest method is used to calculate amortization/accretion of premiums or discounts on fixed income securities over the relevant period. The effective interest rate is the rate that exactly discounts estimated future cash receipts (including all fees and points paid or received that form an integral part of the effective interest rate, transaction costs and other premiums or discounts) through the expected life of the fixed income security, or, where appropriate, a shorter period, to the net carrying amount on initial recognition.

Financial assets at fair value through profit or loss

Financial assets at FVTPL are measured at fair value in the statement of financial position with realized gains and losses and net changes in unrealized gains and losses recorded in net investment income along with dividends and interest earned.

The Company maintains an investment portfolio, referred to as the cash-flow matched portfolio, which is designated as FVTPL. This portfolio is invested with the primary objective of matching the cash inflows from fixed income investment securities with the expected timing and magnitude of future payments of claims and adjustment expenses. The cash-flow matched portfolio represents a significant component of the Company's risk management strategy for meeting its claims obligations. The designation of the financial assets in the cash-flow matched investment portfolio as FVTPL is intended to significantly reduce the measurement or recognition inconsistency that would otherwise arise from measuring assets, liabilities, and gains and losses under different accounting methods. Interest rate movements cause changes in the values of the investment portfolio and of discounted estimated future claims liabilities. As the changes in values of the matched portfolio and of the discounted estimated future claims liabilities flow through profit or loss, the result is an offset of a significant portion of these changes.

Cash and cash equivalents are also classified as FVTPL. Cash and cash equivalents consist of cash on deposit and short-term investments that mature in three months or less from the date of acquisition. The net gain or loss recognized incorporates any interest earned on the financial asset.

Available-for-sale financial assets

Financial assets classified as available-for-sale are measured at fair value in the statement of financial position. Net interest income, including amortization of premiums and the accretion of discounts, are recorded in investment income in profit or loss. Dividend income on common and preferred shares is included in investment income on the ex-dividend date. Changes in fair value of available-for-sale fixed income securities resulting from changes to foreign exchange rates are recognized in net investment income as incurred. Changes in the fair value of available-for-sale fixed income securities related to the underlying investment in its issued currency, as well as all elements of fair value changes of available-for-sale equity securities, are recorded to unrealized gains and losses in accumulated other comprehensive income ("AOCI") until disposition or impairment is recognized, at which time the cumulative gain or loss is reclassified to net investment income in profit or loss. When a reliable estimate of fair value cannot be determined for equity securities that do not have quoted market prices in an active market, the security is valued at cost.

Financial assets in the Company's surplus portfolio (consisting of all investments outside the cash-flow matched portfolio), including fixed income securities and equities, are designated as available-for-sale.

Other financial assets and liabilities

The Company has not designated any financial assets as held to maturity. Loans and receivables and other financial liabilities are carried at amortized cost using the effective interest rate method. Given the short term nature of other financial assets and other financial liabilities, amortized cost approximates fair value.

Property and equipment

Property and equipment are recorded in the statement of financial position at cost less accumulated amortization. Amortization is charged to operating expense on a straight-line basis over the estimated useful lives of the assets as follows:

Furniture and fixtures	5 years
Computer equipment	3 years
Computer software	1 to 3 years
Leasehold improvements	Term of lease

An item of property and equipment is derecognized upon disposal or when no future economic benefits are expected to arise from the continued use of the asset. Any gain or loss arising from the disposal or retirement of an item of property and equipment is determined as the difference between the sales proceeds and the carrying amount of the asset and is recognized immediately in profit or loss.

Intangible Assets

Intangible assets with finite useful lives that are acquired separately are carried at cost, less any applicable accumulated amortization and accumulated impairment losses. Once an acquired intangible asset is available for use, amortization is recognized on a straight-line basis over its estimated useful life. The estimated useful life and amortization method are reviewed at the end of each reporting period, with the effect of any changes in estimate being accounted for on a prospective basis.

An intangible asset is derecognized on disposal, or when no future economic benefits are expected from its use or disposal. Gains and losses arising from derecognition of an intangible asset, measured as the difference between the net disposal proceeds and the carrying cost of the asset, are recognized in profit and loss when the asset is derecognized.

Impairment

Financial Assets

Available-for-sale financial assets are tested for impairment on a quarterly basis. Objective evidence of impairment for fixed income securities includes financial difficulty of the issuer, bankruptcy or defaults and delinquency in payments of interest or principal. Objective evidence of impairment for equities includes a significant or prolonged decline in fair value of the equity below cost or changes with adverse effects that have taken place in the technological, market, economic or legal environment in which the issuer operates that indicates the cost of the security may not be recovered. In general, an equity security is considered impaired if the decline in fair value relative to cost has been either at least 25% for a continuous nine-month period or more than 40% at the end of the reporting period, or been in an unrealised loss position for a continuous period of 18 months.

Where there is objective evidence that an available-for-sale asset is impaired, the loss accumulated in AOCI is reclassified to net investment income. Once an impairment loss is recorded to profit or loss, the loss can only be reversed into income for fixed income securities to the extent a subsequent increase in fair value can be objectively correlated to an event occurring after the loss was recognized. Following impairment loss recognition, further decreases in fair value are recorded as an impairment loss to profit or loss, while a subsequent recovery in fair value for equity securities, and fixed income securities that do not qualify for loss reversal treatment, are recorded to other comprehensive income ("OCI"). Interest continues to be accrued, but at the effective rate of interest based on the fair value at impairment, and dividends of equity securities are recognized in income when the Company's right to receive payment has been established.

Non-Financial Assets

At the end of each reporting period, the Company reviews the carrying amount of its property and equipment, intangible assets and other non-financial assets to determine whether there is any indication that those assets have suffered an impairment loss. If any indication exists, the recoverable amount of the asset is estimated in order to determine the extent of the impairment loss, if any. When it is not possible to estimate the recoverable amount of an individual asset, the Company estimates the recoverable amount of the cash-generating unit to which the asset belongs. Intangible assets not yet available for use are tested for impairment at least annually, and whenever there is an indication that the asset may be impaired.

Recoverable amount is the higher of fair value less costs of disposal and value in use. In assessing value in use, the estimated future cash flows are discounted to their present value using a pre-tax discount rate that reflects current market assessments of the time value of money and the risks specific to the asset for which the estimates of future cash flows have not been adjusted. If the recoverable amount of an asset (or cash-generating unit) is estimated to be less than its carrying amount, the carrying amount of the asset (or cash-generating unit) is reduced to its recoverable amount. An impairment loss is recognized immediately in profit or loss. If an impairment loss subsequently reverses, the carrying amount of the asset (or cash-generating unit) is increased to the revised estimate of its recoverable amount, but so that the increased carrying amount does not exceed the carrying amount that would have been determined had no impairment loss been recognized for the asset (or cash-generating unit) in prior years. A reversal of impairment loss is recognized immediately in profit or loss.

Foreign currency translation

The Canadian dollar is the functional and presentation currency of the Company. Transactions in foreign currencies are translated into Canadian dollars at rates of exchange at the time of such transactions. Monetary assets and liabilities are translated at current rates of exchange, with all translation differences recognized in investment income in the current period. Non-monetary assets and liabilities are translated at the date the fair value is determined, with the translation differences recognized in AOCI until disposition or impairment of the underlying asset or liability.

Premium-related balances

The Company issues two types of professional liability policies: a primary lawyer's errors and omissions policy and an excess policy increasing the insurance coverage limit to a maximum of $9 million per claim/$9 million in the aggregate above the $1 million per claim/$2 million aggregate levels provided by the primary policy; and a title insurance policy. Insurance policies written under the professional liability insurance program are effective on a calendar year basis. Professional liability insurance premium income is earned on a pro rata basis over the term of coverage of the underlying insurance policies, which is generally one year, except for policies for retired lawyers, which have terms of up to five years. Title insurance premiums are earned at the inception date of the policies.

Unearned premiums reported on the statement of financial position represent the portion of premiums written that relate to the unexpired risk portion of the policy at the end of the reporting period.

Premiums receivable are recorded in the statement of financial position as amounts due from insureds, net of any required provision for doubtful amounts. Premiums received from insureds in advance of the effective date of the insurance policy are recorded as amounts due to insureds in the statement of financial position.

The Company defers policy acquisition expenses, primarily premium taxes on its written professional liability insurance premiums, to the extent these costs are considered recoverable. These costs are expensed on the same basis that the related premiums are earned. The method to determine recoverability of deferred policy acquisition expenses takes into consideration future claims and adjustment expenses to be incurred as premiums are earned and anticipated net investment income. Deferred policy acquisition expenses are not material at year-end, and therefore the Company's policy is to not recognize an asset on the statement of financial position.

Unpaid claims and adjustment expenses

The provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses includes an estimate of the cost of projected final settlements of insurance claims incurred on or before the date of the statement of financial position, consisting of case estimates prepared by claims adjusters and a provision for incurred but not reported claims ("IBNR") calculated based on accepted actuarial practice in Canada as required by the Canadian Institute of Actuaries ("CIA"). These estimates include the full amount of all expected expenses, including related investigation, settlement and adjustment expenses, net of any anticipated salvage and subrogation recoveries. The professional liability insurance policy requires insureds to pay deductibles to the maximum extent of $25,000 on each individual claim, subject to an additional $10,000 for certain claims involving an administrative dismissal. Expected deductible recoveries on paid and unpaid claims are recognized net of any required provision for uncollectible accounts at the same time as the related claims liability.

The provision takes into consideration the time value of money using discount rates based on the estimated market value based yield to maturity of the underlying assets backing these liabilities, with reductions for estimated investment-related expense and credit risk. A provision for adverse deviations ("PfAD") is then added to the discounted liabilities, to allow for possible deterioration of experience in claims development, recoverability of reinsurance balances and investment risk, in order to generate the actuarial present value.

These estimates of future claims payments and adjustment expenses are subject to uncertainty and are selected from a wide range of possible outcomes. All provisions are periodically reviewed and evaluated in light of emerging claims experience and changing circumstances. The resulting changes in estimates of the ultimate liability are reported as net claims and adjustment expenses in the reporting period in which they are determined.

Reinsurance

In the normal course of business, the Company enters into per claim and excess of loss reinsurance contracts with other insurers in order to limit its net exposure to significant losses. Amounts relating to reinsurance in respect of the premiums and claims-related balances in the statements of financial position and profit or loss are recorded separately.

Notes to Financial Statements

Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

Premiums ceded to reinsurers are presented before deduction of broker commission and any premium-based taxes or duty. Amounts recoverable from reinsurers are estimated and recognized in a manner consistent with the Company's method of determining the underlying provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses covered by the reinsurance contract. Amounts recoverable from reinsurers are assessed for indicators of impairment at the end of each reporting period. An impairment loss is recognized and the amount recoverable from reinsurers is reduced by the amount by which the carrying value exceeds the expected recoverable amount under the impairment analysis.

Ceding commissions, which relate to amounts received from the Company's reinsurers on the placement of its reinsurance contracts, is earned into income on a pro rata basis over the contract period.

Income taxes

Income tax expense is recognized in profit or loss and the statement of profit or loss and other comprehensive income. Current tax is based on taxable income which differs from profit or loss as reported in the statement of profit or loss and statement of profit or loss and other comprehensive income because of items of income or expense that are taxable or deductible in other years and items that are never taxable or deductible. Current tax includes any adjustments in respect of prior years.

Deferred tax assets are generally recognized for all deductible temporary income tax differences to the extent that it is probable that taxable profits will be available against which those deductible temporary differences can be utilized. Deferred tax liabilities are generally recognized for all taxable temporary differences. Deferred tax assets and liabilities are determined based on the enacted or substantively enacted tax laws and rates that are anticipated to apply in the period of realization. The measurement of deferred tax assets and liabilities utilizes the liability method, reflecting the tax consequences that would follow from the manner in which the Company expects to recover or settle the carrying amount of the related assets and liabilities. The carrying amount of the deferred tax asset is reduced to the extent that it is no longer probable that sufficient taxable profits will be available to allow all or part of the asset to be recovered.

Income tax assets and liabilities are offset when the income taxes are levied by the same taxation authority and there is a legally enforceable right to offset current tax assets with current tax liabilities.

Employee benefits

The Company maintains a defined contribution pension plan for its employees as well as a supplemental defined benefit pension plan for certain designated employees, which provides benefits in excess of the benefits provided by the Company's defined contribution pension plan. For the supplemental defined benefit pension plan, the benefit obligation is determined using the projected unit credit method. Actuarial valuations are carried out at the end of each annual reporting period using management's assumptions on items such as discount rates, expected asset performance, salary growth and retirement ages of employees. The discount rate is determined based on the market yields of high quality, mid-duration corporate fixed income securities.

Defined contribution plan expenses are recognized in the reporting period in which services are rendered. Regarding the supplemental defined benefit pension plan, remeasurements comprising actuarial gains and losses, the effect of the changes to the asset ceiling (if applicable) and the return on plan assets (excluding net interest cost), is reflected immediately in the statement of profit or loss and other comprehensive income with a charge or credit recognized in OCI in the period in which they occur. Remeasurements recognized in OCI are transferred immediately to retained earnings and will not be reclassified to profit or loss. Past service cost is recognized in profit or loss in the period of a plan amendment. Net interest is calculated by applying the discount rate at the beginning of the period to the net defined benefit liability or asset. Defined benefit costs are categorized as follows: service cost (including current service, past service cost, as well as gains or losses on curtailments and settlements), net interest expense or income, and remeasurements. The Company presents the first two components of defined benefit cost as part of operating expenses in the statement of profit or loss.

Notes to Financial Statements

Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

The retirement benefit obligation recognized in the statement of financial position represents the actual deficit or surplus in the Company's defined benefit pension plan. Any surplus resulting from this calculation is limited to the present value of any economic benefits available in the form of refunds from the plan or reductions in future contributions to the plan.

3. Application of New and Revised IFRSs Relevant to the Company

In the current year, the Company has applied a number of new and revised IFRSs issued by the IASB that are mandatorily effective for an accounting period that begins on or after January 1, 2014.

a) Amendments to IAS 32 "Offsetting Financial Assets and Financial Liabilities"

The Company has applied the amendments to IAS 32 for the first time in the current year, and they have been applied retrospectively. The amendments clarify the requirements relating to the offset of financial assets and financial liabilities. Specifically, the amendments clarify the meaning of "currently has a legal enforceable right of offset" and "simultaneous realisation and settlement". The application of the amendments to IAS 32 has not had any material impact on the amounts recognized or disclosed in the financial statements.

b) IFRIC 21 "Levies"

The Company has applied IFRIC 21 for the first time in the current year, and it has been applied retrospectively. IFRIC 21 "Levies" was issued to introduce an interpretation of IAS 37 "Provisions, Contingent Liabilities and Contingent Assets" on the accounting for levies (except income taxes) imposed by governments, government agencies and similar bodies. IFRIC 21 defines a levy, and clarifies that the obligating event that gives rise to a liability to pay a levy is the activity described in the relevant legislation that triggers the payment of the levy. The interpretation provides guidance on how many different levy arrangements should be accounted for, in particular, it clarifies that neither economic compulsion nor the going concern basis of financial statement preparation implies that an entity has a present obligation to pay a levy that will be triggered by operating in a future period. The liability to pay a levy is recognized progressively if the obligating event occurs over a period of time. The application of IFRIC 21 has not had any material impact on the amounts recognized or disclosed in the financial statements.

4. New and Revised IFRSs Issued but not yet Effective

The Company has not applied the following new and revised IFRSs that have been issued but are not yet effective:

a) IFRS 9 "Financial Instruments"

IFRS 9, issued in November 2009 as part of a three-phase project to replace IAS 39 "Financial Instruments: Recognition and Measurement", introduced new requirements for the classification and measurement of financial assets. IFRS 9 was subsequently amended in October 2010 to include requirements for the classification and measurement of financial liabilities and for derecognition, and in November 2013 to include the new requirements for general hedge accounting. Another revised version of IFRS 9 was issued in July 2014 mainly to include impairment requirements for financial assets as well as limited amendments to the classification and measurements by introducing fair value through other comprehensive income ("FVOCI") measurement category for certain simple debt instruments.

Notes to Financial Statements

Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

Pursuant to IFRS 9, all recognized financial assets that are within the scope of IAS 39 are required to be subsequently measured at amortized cost or fair value. Specifically, debt instruments that are held within a business model whose objective is to collect the contractual cash flows, and that have contractual cash flows that are solely payments of principal and interest on the principal outstanding are generally measured at amortized cost. Debt instruments that are held within a business model whose objective is achieved both by collecting contractual cash flows and selling financial assets, and that have contractual terms that give rise on specified dates to cash flows that are solely payments of principal and interest on the principal amount outstanding, are measured at FVOCI. All other debt securities, as well as equity securities, are measured at FVTPL. Entities may make an irrevocable election to present subsequent changes in the fair value of an equity security in OCI, with only dividend income generally recognized in profit or loss. In addition, under the fair value option, entities may elect for amortized cost or FVOCI debt securities to be designated as FVTPL.

With regard to the measurement of financial liabilities designated as FVTPL, IFRS 9 requires that the amount of change in the fair value of the financial liability that is attributable to changes in the credit risk of that liability is to be recognized in OCI, unless the recognition of the effects of changes in the liability's credit risk in OCI would create or enlarge an accounting mismatch in profit or loss. Under IAS 39, the entire amount of the change in the fair value of the financial liability designated as FVTPL is recognized in profit or loss.

With regards to debt securities measured at amortized cost or FVOCI, IFRS 9 requires an expected credit loss model for determining impairment, as opposed to an incurred credit loss model under IAS 39. The expected credit loss model requires an entity to account for expected credit losses and changes in those expected credit losses at each reporting date to reflect changes in credit risk since initial recognition. In other words, it is no longer necessary for a credit event to have occurred before impairment losses are recognized. Under IFRS 9, impairment is not considered for equity securities.

IFRS 9 as revised (2014) is effective for annual periods beginning on or after January 1, 2018. The Company anticipates that the application of IFRS 9 in the future may have a material impact on amounts reported in respect of the Company's financial assets. However, it is not practicable to provide a reasonable estimate of the effect of IFRS 9 until the Company undertakes a detailed review.

b) Amendments to IAS 19 “Defined Benefit Plans: Employee Contributions”

The amendments to IAS 19 clarify how an entity should account for contributions made by employees or third parties to defined benefit plans, based on whether those contributions are dependent of the number of years of service provided by the employee. For contributions that are independent of the number of years of service, the entity may either recognize the contributions as a reduction in the service cost in the period in which the related service is rendered, or attribute them to the employees' periods of service using the projected unit credit method; whereas for contributions that are dependent on the number of years of service, the entity is required to attribute them to the employees' periods of service. These amendments are effective for accounting periods beginning on or after July 1, 2014. The Company does not anticipate a significant impact from the implementation of these amendments.

c) Impairment Analysis

Management performs a quarterly analysis of the Company's available-for-sale investments to determine whether there is objective evidence that the estimated cash flows of the investments have been affected. The analysis includes the following procedures as deemed appropriate by management:

- identifying all security holdings in unrealized loss positions that have existed for a length of time that management believes may impact the recoverability of the investment;
- identifying all security holdings in unrealized loss positions that have an unrealized loss magnitude that management believes may impact the recoverability of the investment;
- reviewing the trading range of certain investments over the preceding calendar period;
- assessing whether any credit losses are expected for those investments. This assessment includes consideration of, among other things, all available information and factors having a bearing upon collectability such as changes to credit rating by rating agencies, financial condition of the issuer, expected cash flows and value of any underlying collateral;
- assessing whether declines in fair value for any fixed income securities represent objective evidence of impairment based on their investment grade credit ratings from third party security rating agencies;
- assessing whether declines in fair value for any fixed income securities with non-investment grade credit rating represent objective evidence of impairment based on the history of its debt service record; and
- obtaining a valuation analysis from third party investment managers regarding the intrinsic value of these holdings based on their knowledge, experience and other market based valuation techniques.

As a result of the impairment analysis performed by management, $857,061 in write-downs to various equity securities were required for the year ended December 31, 2014 (2013: $850,680).

The movements in cumulative impairment write-downs on available-for-sale investments for the years ended December 31 were as follows:

9. Provision for Unpaid Claims and Adjustment Expenses

a) Nature of unpaid claims and adjustment expenses

The determination of the provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses is a complex process based on known facts, interpretations and judgment and is influenced by a variety of factors. These factors include the Company's own experience with similar cases and historical trends involving claim payment patterns, loss payments, pending levels of unpaid claims and adjustment expenses, product mix and concentration, claims severity and claim frequency patterns.

Other factors include the continually evolving and changing regulatory and legal environment, actuarial studies, professional experience and expertise of the Company's claim departments' personnel and independent adjusters retained to handle individual claims, the quality of the data used for projection purposes, existing claims management practices including claims handling and settlement practices, the effect of inflationary trends on future claims settlement costs, investment rates of return, court decisions and economic conditions. In addition, time can be a critical part of the provision determination, since the longer the span between the incidence of a loss and the settlement of the claim, the more potential for variation in the ultimate settlement amount. Accordingly, short-tailed claims, such as property claims, tend to be more reasonably predictable than long-tailed claims, such as professional liability and title claims.

The process of establishing the provision relies on the judgment and opinions of a large number of individuals, on historical precedents and trends, on prevailing legal, economic, social and regulatory trends and on expectations as to future developments. The provision reflects expectations of the ultimate cost of resolution and administration of claims based on an assessment of facts and circumstances then known, together with a review of historical settlement patterns, estimates of trends in claims severity and frequency, legal theories of liability and other factors.

Consequently, the measurement of the ultimate settlement costs of claims to date that underlies the provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses, and any related recoveries for reinsurance and deductibles, involves estimates and measurement uncertainty. The amounts are based on estimates of future trends in claim severity and other factors which could vary as claims are settled. Variability can be caused by several factors including the emergence of additional information on claims, changes in judicial interpretation, significant changes in severity or frequency of claims from historical trends, and inclusion of exposures not contemplated at the time of policy inception. Ultimate costs incurred could vary from current estimates. Although it is not possible to measure the degree of variability inherent in such estimates, management believes that the methods of estimation that have been used will produce reasonable results given the current information.

b) Methodologies and assumptions

The best estimates of future claims payments and adjustment expenses are determined based on one or more of the following actuarial methods: the Adler-Kline method, the chain ladder method, the frequency and severity method and the expected loss ratio method. Considerations in the choice of methods to estimate ultimate claims include, among other factors, the line of business, the number of years of experience and the relative maturity of the experience, and as such, reflect methods for lines of business with long settlement patterns and which are subject to the occurrence of large claims.

Each method involves tracking claims data by "policy year", which is the year in which such claims are made for the Company's professional liability policies, and the year in which such policies were written for its title policies. Claims paid and reported, gross and net of reinsurance recoveries and net of salvage and subrogation, are tracked by lines of business, policy years and development periods in a format known as claims development triangles.

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

A description of each of these methods is as follows:

i. Adler-Kline method

This is a form of frequency and severity method which involves estimation of the closing pattern for current open and estimated unreported claims, which is combined with estimates of the average severity across successive intervals of percentage claims closed, based on consideration of historical claim settlement patterns and average amounts paid on closed claims.

ii. Chain ladder method

The distinguishing characteristic of this form of development method is that ultimate claims for each policy year are projected from recorded values assuming the future claim development is similar to the prior years' development.

iii. Frequency and severity method

This method assumes that, for each identified homogenous claims type group, claims count reported to date will develop to ultimate in a similar manner to historical patterns, and settle at predictable average severity amounts. This method involves applying the developed estimated ultimate claims count to selected estimated ultimate average claim severities.

iv. Expected loss ratio method

Using the expected loss ratio method, ultimate claims projections are based upon a priori measures of the anticipated claims. An expected loss ratio is applied to the measure of exposure to determine estimated ultimate claims for each year. This method is commonly used in lines of business with a limited experience history.

Claims data includes external claims adjustment expenses, and for a portion of the portfolio includes internal claims adjustment expenses ("IAE"). A provision for IAE has been determined based on the Mango-Allen claim staffing technique, a transaction-based method which utilizes expected future claims handler workload per claim per handler, claims closure rates and ultimate claims count. The IAE provision is included in the IBNR balances.

The provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses is discounted using an interest rate based on the estimated market value based yield to maturity, inherent credit risk and related investment expense of the Company's fixed income securities supporting the provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expense as at December 31, 2014, which was 1.95% (December 31, 2013: 2.69%). Reinsurance recoverable estimates and claims recoverable from other insurers are discounted in a manner consistent with the method used to establish the related liability. Based on published guidance from the CIA, as at December 31, 2014 the PfAD was calculated at 15% (December 31, 2013: 15%) of the net discounted claim liabilities, 1.5% (December 31, 2013: 1.5%) of the ceded discounted claim liabilities, and a 0.50% reduction to the discount rate (December 31, 2013: 0.50%).

As the provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses is recorded on a discounted basis and reflects the time value of money, its carrying value is expected to provide a reasonable basis for the determination of fair value. However, determination of fair value also requires the practical context of a buyer and seller, both of whom are willing and able to enter into an arm's length transaction. In the absence of such a practical context, the fair value is not readily determinable.

The following table shows unpaid claims and adjustment expenses on an undiscounted basis and a discounted basis:

	December 31, 2014		December 31, 2013
	Undiscounted	Discounted	Undiscounted	Discounted
Unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	$ 426,622	468,493	417,231	447,912

Details of the provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses, by line of business, are summarized as follows:

	December 31, 2014			December 31, 2013
	Gross	Ceded	Net	Gross	Ceded	Net
Professional liability	$ 453,626	(44,814)	408,812	430,823	(40,348)	390,475

The provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses by case reserves and IBNR are as follows:

	December 31, 2014			December 31, 2013
	Gross	Ceded	Net	Gross	Ceded	Net
Case reserves	$ 287,235	(3,056)	284,179	269,525	(3,473)	266,052

Total	$ 468,493	(44,900)	423,593	447,912	(40,487)	407,425

An evaluation of the adequacy of claims liabilities is completed at the end of each financial quarter. This evaluation includes a re-estimation of the liability for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses compared to the liability that was originally established. As adjustments to estimated claims liabilities become necessary, they are reflected in current operations.

c) Changes in methodologies or basis of selection of assumptions

Based on the Company's actuarial valuation process, at each valuation the Company's claims data is analyzed to determine whether the current methodologies and basis of selection of actuarial assumptions continue to be appropriate for the determination of the IBNR provision. As a result, the Company revised the basis of selection of some key assumptions used in its actuarial valuation methods as at December 31, 2014 and December 31, 2013.

In 2014, the Company updated the methodologies and basis of selection of key assumptions used in determining its provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses to ensure they appropriately reflect emerging experience and changes in risk profile, which resulted in a change to projected net cash outflows and, therefore, to the provision. In addition, as at December 31, 2014, an amount of $2,303,584 was added explicitly to the IBNR provision to account for a group of related claims. The net impact of these changes was a $4,979,000 decrease in the provision, before reinsurance, as at December 31, 2014, which included a net decrease of $5,378,629 relating to severity assumptions and an increase of $399,629 relating to claim frequency assumptions. This total impact has been allocated by policy year as a $2,607,000 decrease related to the current year and a $2,372,000 decrease related to the prior years, and by line of business as a $4,135,119 net decrease to professional liability and an $843,881 net decrease to title.

In 2013, the Company performed a detailed re-evaluation of the methodologies and basis of selection of key assumptions used in determining its provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses to ensure they appropriately reflect emerging experience and changes in risk profile. Changes to the actuarial methods and assumptions resulted in a change to projected net cash outflows and, therefore, to the provision. The net impact of the changes in the basis of selection of assumptions and model enhancements was an $11,417,969 decrease in the provision, before reinsurance, as at December 31, 2013, which included a net decrease of $11,609,994 relating to severity assumptions, and an increase of $192,025 relating to claim frequency assumptions. This total impact has been allocated by policy year as a $4,925,517 decrease related to the current year and a $6,492,452 decrease related to the prior years and by line of business as a $12,136,482 net decrease to professional liability and a $718,513 increase to title.

d) Loss development tables

The tables on the following pages show the development of claims, excluding IAE, by policy year over a period of time. The first table reflects development for gross claims, which excludes any reductions for reinsurance recoverables. The second table reflects development for net claims, which is gross claims less reinsurance recoverables. The top triangle in each table shows how the estimates of total claims for each policy year develop over time as more information becomes known regarding individual claims and overall claims frequency and severity. Claims are presented on an undiscounted basis in the top triangle. The bottom triangle in each table presents the cumulative amounts paid for claims and external loss adjustment expenses for each policy year at the end of each successive year. At the bottom of each table, the provision for IAE as well as the effect of discounting and the PfAD, as at December 31, 2014, is presented based on the net amounts of the two triangles.

10. Unearned Premiums

The following changes have occurred in the provision for unearned premiums during the years ended December 31:

	2014	2013
Balance, as at January 1	$ 749	723
Net premiums written during the year	114,920	106,510
Less: Net premiums earned during the year	(114,900)	(106,484)
Increase (decrease) in unearned premiums	20	26
Balance, as at December 31	$ 769	749

The estimates for unearned premium liabilities have been actuarially tested to ensure that they are sufficient to pay for future claims and expenses in servicing the unexpired policies as of the valuation dates.

11. Reinsurance

The Company's reinsurance program consists of a 90% quota share cession on its excess professional liability policies (2013: 90%), and a $10 million in excess of $5 million per occurrence clash reinsurance arrangement which provides protection for single events that bring about multiple professional liability and/or title claims with an additional $20 million in excess of $15 million per occurrence relating to class action proceedings (2013: $20 million in excess of $15 million). Reinsurance does not relieve the Company of its primary liability as the originating insurer. In the event that a reinsurer is unable to meet obligations assumed under reinsurance agreements, the Company is liable for such amounts. Reinsurance treaties typically renew annually and the terms and conditions are reviewed by senior management and reported to the Company's Board of Directors. Reinsurance agreements are negotiated with reinsurance companies that have an independent credit rating of "A-" or better and that the Company considers creditworthy. Based on current information on the financial health of the reinsurers, no provision for doubtful debts has been made in the financial statements in respect of reinsurers.

12. Related Party Transactions

Pursuant to a service agreement effective January 1, 1995, and as amended effective September 30, 2009, the Company administers the Errors and Omissions Insurance Fund (the "Fund") of the Law Society and provides all services directly related to the operations and general administration of the Fund in consideration for the Law Society insuring its mandatory professional liability insurance program with the Company.

The insurance policy under the mandatory professional liability insurance program of the Law Society is written by the Company and is effective on a calendar year basis. The insurance policy is renewed effective January 1 each year subject to the Law Society's acceptance of the terms of renewal submitted by the Company. The annual policy limits for each of the years effective January 1, 1995 to December 31, 2014 are $1 million per claim and $2 million in aggregate per member. Under the insurance policy that was in force between July 1, 1990 and December 31, 1994, the Company was responsible for claims in excess of the Law Society and member deductibles. The provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses is net of amounts relating to policies for years prior to 1995 that are payable by the Law Society.

Notes to Financial Statements

Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

For the year ended December 31, 2014, $110,871,667 of the gross premiums written related to mandatory insurance coverage provided to the Law Society and its members (2013: $102,093,412). As at December 31, 2014, the Company had a balance due from the Law Society of $6,622,607 (December 31, 2013: $2,896 due to Law Society).

For the year ended December 31, 2014, the Company contributed to the Law Society $231,194 in regards to a wellness program to be made available to the insureds of the Company's primary liability policy (2013: $210,230). This expenditure is included in operating expenses (see note 15).

The total compensation to Company personnel classified as key management, being those having authority and responsibility for planning, directing and controlling the activities of the Company, directly or indirectly, including directors of the Company, is as follows:

	2014	2013
Short-term compensation and benefits	$ 3,372	3,163
Post employment benefits	246	251
	$ 3,618	3,414

13. Employee Benefits

The Company has a defined contribution pension plan which is available to all its employees upon meeting the eligibility requirements. Each employee is required to contribute 4.5% of yearly maximum pensionable earnings, and 6% in excess thereof, of an employee's annual base earnings. Under the plan, the Company matches all employee contributions. In 2014, the Company made payments of $641,012 (2013: $603,836) and recorded pension expense of $675,910 (2013: $630,402).

The Company also has a supplemental defined benefit pension plan, which provides pension benefits on a final salary or fixed schedule basis, depending on certain criteria. Measurements and funding requirements of this plan are based on valuations prepared by an external actuary. For reporting purposes the plan is measured using the projected unit credit method, which involves calculating the actuarial present value of the past service liability to members including an allowance for their projected future earnings. Funding requirements for the plan are determined using the solvency method, which utilizes the estimated cost of securing each member's benefits with an insurance company or alternative buy-out provider as at the valuation date. The valuation methods are based on a number of assumptions, which vary according to economic conditions, including prevailing market interest rates, and changes in these assumptions can significantly affect the measurement of the pension obligations.

Funding for the supplemental plan commenced in 2005, with no payments made in 2014 (2013: $248,402) and recorded pension expenses of $11,865 in 2014 (2013: $59,671). Funding requirements are reviewed annually with an actuarial valuation for funding purposes effective as at December 31. As the Company's defined benefit pension plan qualifies as a "retirement compensation arrangement" pursuant to the Income Tax Act, half of any required annual contribution to the plan is remitted to the Canada Revenue Agency, held in a refundable tax account and refunded in prescribed amounts as actual benefit payments are made to the participants. The most recent actuarial valuation for funding purposes was performed effective December 31, 2013. Management's preliminary estimate is that no contribution is required to the plan during the year ending December 31, 2015.

The assets of both pension plans are held separately from those of the Company in funds under the control of trustees.

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

The defined benefit pension plan exposes the Company to risks such as: investment risk, interest rate risk, longevity risk and salary risk.

Investment risk	The present value of the defined benefit plan liability is calculated using a discount rate determined by reference to high quality mid-duration corporate bond yields; if the return on plan assets is below this rate, it will create a plan deficit. Currently the plan has a relatively balanced investment in equity and fixed income securities. Due to the long-term nature of the plan liabilities, the Company considers it appropriate that a reasonable portion of the plan assets should be invested in equity securities to leverage the return generated by the fund.
Interest rate risk	A decrease in the market interest rate will increase the plan obligation; however, this will be partially offset by an increase in the return of the plan's fixed income securities.
Longevity risk	The present value of the defined benefit plan obligation is calculated by reference to the best estimate of the mortality of plan participants both during and after their employment. An increase in the life expectancy of the plan participants will increase the plan's obligation.
Salary risk	The present value of the defined benefit plan liability is calculated by reference to the future salaries of plan participants. As such, an increase in the salary of the plan participants will increase the plan's obligation.

The following represents the assets and liabilities associated with pension benefits measured using values as at December 31:

Defined benefit plan obligation

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

The defined benefit plan assets arise primarily from employer contributions that are originally allocated equally between deposits with the Government of Canada and investments in the units of a balanced pooled fund. The fair values of the above equity and fixed income securities are derived based on quoted market prices in active markets. The plan assets contain the following financial instrument allocation:

	December 31, 2014	December 31, 2013
Equity securities	33.21%	36.42%
Fixed income securities	17.32%	16.48%
Cash and cash equivalents	4.55%	1.31%
Refundable-tax account	44.92%	45.79%
	100%	100%

Reconciliation of funded status surplus of the benefit plans to the amounts recorded in the financial statements is as follows:

	December 31, 2014	December 31, 2013
Fair value of plan assets	$ 8,848	8,731
Accrued benefit obligation	(7,158)	(6,253)
Funded status surplus	1,690	2,478
Irrecoverable surplus (effect of asset ceiling)	-	-
Accrued benefit asset	$ 1,690	2,478

The accrued benefit asset is included in other assets in the statement of financial position.

Amounts recognized in comprehensive income in respect of the defined benefit plan in the year ended December 31:

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

The significant assumptions used by the Company for year-end measurement purposes are as follows:

	2014	2013
Discount rate	3.80%	4.60%
Rate of compensation increase	3.50%	3.50%
Mortality	CPM 2014Priv mortality table with generational mortality improvements following Scale CPM-B; pension size adjustment factors of 0.83 for males and 0.88 for females	CPM-RPP2014Priv mortality table with generational mortality improvements following Scale CPM-A; pension size adjustment factors of 0.84 for males and 0.96 for females

The sensitivity of the key assumption, namely discount rate, assuming all other assumptions remain constant, is as follows: as at December 31, 2014, if the discount rate was 1% higher/(lower) the defined benefit obligation would decrease by $863,800 (increase by $1,061,400). Note that the sensitivity analysis may not be representative of the actual change in the defined benefit obligation as it is unlikely that the change in assumption would occur in isolation of one or other changes as some of the assumptions may be correlated.

The expected maturity profile of the defined benefit obligation as at December 31, 2014 is as follows:

	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	Thereafter
Expected benefit payments	273	282	281	280	401	1,983

The defined benefit obligation as at December 31, 2014 by participant category is as follows:

Active participants	2,412
Pensioners	4,746

b) Income tax expense recognized in the statement of profit or loss and other comprehensive income

The total income tax expense recognized in OCI is comprised as follows:

	2014	2013
Current income tax
Unrealized investment gains and losses on available-for-sale portfolio	$ 815	4,388
Pensions	-	-
Total current income tax expense	815	4,388
Deferred income tax

Pensions	(206)	174
Total deferred income tax expense	(206)	174
Total income tax expense in OCI	$ 609	4,562

c) Income tax reconciliation

The following is a reconciliation of income taxes, calculated at the statutory income tax rate, to the income tax provision included in profit or loss.

	2014	2013
Profit or loss before income taxes	$ 22,971	7,833
Statutory income tax rate	26.50%	26.50%
Provision for (recovery of) income taxes at statutory rates	6,087	2,076
Increase (decrease) resulting from:
Investments	(198)	(193)
Non-deductible meals and entertainment	13	12
Other non-deductible items	9	5
Provision for (recovery of) income taxes	$ 5,911	1,900

The statutory rate applicable to the Company at December 31, 2014 is same as at December 31, 2013.

During the year, the Company made income tax payments of $10,293,132 (2013: $2,205,734) and received no income tax refunds (2013: $2,674,499) from the various taxing authorities.

Notes to Financial Statements

Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

d) Net deferred income tax asset

The Company's net deferred income tax asset is the result of temporary differences between the carrying amounts of assets and liabilities for financial reporting purposes and the amounts used for income tax purposes. The sources of these temporary differences and the tax effects are as follows:

	December 31, 2014	December 31, 2013
Deferred tax assets
Net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	$ 5,613	5,398
Property and equipment	292	249
	5,905	5,647
Deferred tax liabilities
Investments	(433)	(471)
Pension	(415)	(633)
	(848)	(1,104)
Total net deferred tax assets	$ 5,057	4,543

The Company believes that, based on available information, it is probable that the deferred income tax assets will be realized through a combination of future reversals of temporary differences and taxable income.

15. Operating Expenses

The following table summarizes the Company's operating expenses by nature:

	2014	2013
Salaries and benefits	$ 9,755	9,373
Administrative expenses	2,631	2,203
Professional fees	1,746	1,682
Occupancy lease	1,047	1,100

16. Operating Lease Commitments

The Company entered into a lease agreement for premises at 250 Yonge Street, with an effective date of February 1, 2008 and an expiry date of May 31, 2018. The Company has an option to extend the lease period for five additional years under the current general terms and conditions.

At December 31, 2014, lease obligations on office premises were as follows:

2015	1,220
2016	1,220
2017	1,220
2018	508

17. Capital Stock and Contributed Surplus

Capital stock of the Company represents:

30,000 Common Shares of par value of $100 each – authorized, issued and paid.

20,000 6% non-cumulative, redeemable, non-voting Preferred Shares of par value of $100 each – authorized, issued and paid.

The Preferred Shares meet the definition of equity in accordance with the criteria outlined in IAS 32 “Financial Instruments: Presentation”.

Contributed surplus represents additional capitalization funding provided by the Law Society.

18. Statutory Insurance Information

The Company is the beneficiary of trust accounts in the amount of $1,238,354 as at December 31, 2014 (December 31, 2013: $1,247,970) which are held as security for reinsurance ceded to unregistered reinsurers. This trust balance is not reflected in these financial statements but is considered in determining statutory capital requirements.

In accordance with licensing requirements, the Company no longer requires deposited securities with the regulatory authorities (December 31, 2013: market value of $50,416).

19. Capital Management

Capital is comprised of the Company’s equity. As at December 31, 2014 the Company’s equity was $208,625,233 (December 31, 2013: $189,875,442). The Company’s objectives when managing capital are to maintain financial strength and protect its claims paying abilities, to maintain creditworthiness and to provide a reasonable return to the shareholder over the long term. In conjunction with the Company’s Board of Directors and its Audit Committee, senior management develops the capital strategy and oversees the capital management processes of the Company. Capital is managed using both regulatory capital measures and internal metrics.

FSCO, the Company's primary insurance regulator, along with other provincial insurance regulators, regulate the capital required in the Company using two key measures, i.e., Minimum Capital Test ("MCT") and the Dynamic Capital Adequacy Test ("DCAT"). FSCO has established an MCT guideline which sets out 100% as the minimum and 150% as the supervisory target for P&C insurance companies. To ensure that it attains its objectives, the Company has established an internal target of 180% (2013: 180%) in excess of which, under normal circumstances, the Company will maintain its capital. During the year ended December 31, 2014, the Company complied with the various provincial regulators' guidelines and as at December 31, 2014, the Company has a MCT ratio of 251% (December 31, 2013: 233%). Annually, the Company's Appointed Actuary prepares a DCAT on the MCT to ensure that the Company has adequate capital to withstand significant adverse event scenarios. These scenarios are reviewed each year to ensure appropriate risks are included in the testing process. The Appointed Actuary must present both an annual report and the DCAT report to management and the Audit Committee. The DCAT report prepared during the year indicated that the Company's capital position is satisfactory. In addition, the target, actual and forecasted capital position of the Company is subject to ongoing monitoring by management using stress and scenario analysis to ensure its adequacy.

The Company may use reinsurance to manage its capital position.

20. Risk Management

By virtue of the nature of the insurance company business, financial instruments comprise the majority of the Company's statement of financial position as at both December 31, 2014 and 2013. The most significant identified risks to the Company which arise from holding financial instruments and insurance contract liabilities include insurance risk, credit risk, liquidity risk and market risk. The market risk exposure of the Company is primarily related to changes in interest rates and adverse movement in equity prices.

The Company employs an enterprise-wide risk management framework which establishes practices for risk management and includes policies and processes to identify, assess, manage and monitor risks and risk tolerance limits. It provides governance and supervision of risk management activities across the Company's business units, promoting the discipline and consistency applied to the practice of risk management.

The Company's risk framework is designed to minimize risks that could materially adversely affect the value or stature of the Company, to contribute to stable and sustainable returns, to identify risks that the Company can manage in order to increase earnings, and to provide transparency of the Company's risks through internal and external reporting. The Company's risk philosophy involves undertaking risks for appropriate return and accepting those risks that meet its objectives. The Company's risk management program is aligned with its long term vision and its culture supports an effective risk management program. The key components of the risk culture include acting with fairness, appreciating the impact of risk on all major stakeholders, embedding risk management into day to day business activities, fostering full and transparent communications, cooperation, and aligning of objectives and incentives. The Company's risk management activities are monitored by its Risk Committee and Board of Directors.

The risk exposure measures expressed below primarily include the sensitivity of the Company's profit or loss, and OCI as applicable, to the movement of various economic factors. These risk exposures include the sensitivity due to specific changes in market prices and interest rate levels projected using internal models as at a specific date, and are measured relative to a starting level reflecting the Company's assets and liabilities at that date and the actuarial factors, investment returns and investment activity the Company assumes in the future. The risk exposures measure the impact of changing one factor at a time and assume that all other factors remain unchanged. Actual results can differ materially from these estimates for a variety of reasons including the interaction among these factors when more than one changes, changes in actuarial and investment return and future investment activity assumptions, actual experience differing from the assumptions, changes in business mix, effective tax rates, and other market factors and general limitations of the Company's internal models.

a) Insurance risk

Insurance risk is the risk of loss due to actual experience differing from the experience assumed when a product was designed and priced with respect to claims, policyholder behaviour and expenses. The Company has identified pricing risk, concentration of risk and reserving risk as its most significant sources of insurance risks. The Company's underwriting objective is to develop business within its target market on a prudent and diversified basis and to achieve profitable operating results.

Pricing risk

Pricing risk arises when actual claims experience differs from the assumptions included in pricing calculations. Historically, the underwriting results of the property and casualty industry have fluctuated significantly due to the cyclical nature of the insurance market. The market cycle is affected by the frequency and severity of claims, levels of capacity and demand, general economic conditions and price competition.

The Company focuses on profitable underwriting using a combination of experienced underwriting staff, pricing models and price adequacy monitoring tools. The Company prices its products taking into account numerous factors including claims frequency and severity trends, product line expense ratios, special risk factors associated with the product line, and the investment income earned on premiums held until the payment of claims and expenses. The Company's pricing is designed to ensure an appropriate return while also providing long-term rate stability. These factors are reviewed and adjusted periodically to ensure they reflect the current environment.

Concentration of risk

A concentration of risk represents the exposure to increased losses associated with an inadequately diversified portfolio of policy coverage. The Company has a reinsurance program to limit its exposure to catastrophic losses from any one event or set of events. The Company has approximately 99% of its business in Ontario (2013: 99%) and 96% in professional liability (2013: 95%), and consequently is exposed to trends, inflation, judicial changes and regulatory changes affecting these segments. The geographical diversity by location of the underlying insurance risk for the year ended December 31 is summarized below:

Gross written premium	2014			2013
	Ontario	All other provinces	Total	Ontario	All other provinces	Total
Professional liability	$ 116,979	-	116,979	108,009	-	108,009
Title	4,966	204	5,170	5,257	295	5,552
Total	$ 121,945	204	122,149	113,266	295	113,561

Reserving risk

Reserving risk arises because actual claims experience can differ adversely from the assumptions included in setting reserves, in large part due to the length of time between the occurrence of a loss, the reporting of the loss to the insurer and the ultimate resolution of the claim. Claims provisions reflect expectations of the ultimate cost of resolution and administration of claims based on an assessment of facts and circumstances then known, a review of historical settlement patterns, estimates of trends in claims severity and frequency, legal theories of liability and other factors. Reserve changes associated with claims of prior periods are recognized in the current period, which could have a significant impact on current year profit or loss. In order to mitigate this risk the Company utilizes information systems in order to maintain claims data integrity, and the claims provision valuations are prepared by an internal actuary on a quarterly basis, and are reviewed separately by, and must be acceptable to, management of the Company every quarter and the external Appointed Actuary at mid-year and year-end.

Sensitivity analyses

Risks associated with property and casualty insurance contracts are complex and subject to a number of variables which complicate quantitative sensitivity analysis. The Company considers that the provision for its unpaid claims and adjustment expenses recognized in the statement of financial position is adequate. However, actual experience will differ from the expected outcome. Among the Company's lines of business, the professional liability line of business has the largest provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses. Given this line of business and the actuarial methods utilized to estimate the related provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses, the reported claims count development factors and average claim severity selections are the most critical of the assumptions used. The following table provides the estimated increase (decrease) of the net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expense and the after-tax net effect on equity if the reported claims count development factors were increased such that the estimate of unreported claims was 20% higher or the average claim severity selections were 1% higher. Other changes in assumptions are considered to be less material.

	December 31, 2014		December 31, 2013
	Net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	Equity	Net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	Equity
Unreported claims +20%	5,283	(3,883)	4,904	(3,605)
Average claim severities +1%	5,299	(3,895)	4,843	(3,560)

b) Credit risk

Credit risk is the risk of loss due to the inability or unwillingness of a borrower or counterparty to fulfill its payment obligation to the Company. Credit risks arise from investments in fixed income securities and preferred shares, and balances due from insureds and reinsurers.

Management monitors credit risk and any mitigating controls. The Company has established a credit review process where the credit quality of all exposures is continually monitored so that appropriate prompt action can be taken when there is a change which may have material impact.

Governance processes around investments include oversight by the Board of Directors' Investment Committee. The oversight includes reviews of the Company's third party investment managers, investment performance and adherence to the Company's investment policy. The Company's investment policy statement is reviewed at least on an annual basis and addresses various matters including investment objectives, risks and management. Guidelines and limits have been established in respect of asset classes, issuers of securities and the nature of securities to address matters such as quality and concentration of risks.

With respect to credit risk arising from balances due from reinsurers, the Company's exposure is measured to reflect both current exposure and potential future exposure to ceded liabilities. Reinsurance and insurance counterparties must also meet minimum risk rating criteria. The Company's Board of Directors has approved a reinsurance policy, which is monitored by the Company's Audit Committee.

Fixed income securities are rated using a composite of Moody's, Standard & Poor and Dominion Bond Rating Service ratings, and reinsurers are rated using A.M. Best. The balances in the above tables do not contain any amounts that are past due.

c) Liquidity risk

Liquidity risk is the risk that the Company will not have enough funds available to meet all expected and unexpected cash outflow commitments as they fall due. Under stressed conditions, unexpected cash demands could arise primarily from a significant increase in the level of claim payment demands.

To manage its cash flow requirements, the Company has arranged diversified funding sources and maintains a significant portion of its invested assets in highly liquid securities such as cash and cash equivalents and government bonds (see note 5b). In addition, the Company has established counterparty exposure limits that aim to ensure that exposures are not so large that they may impact the ability to liquidate investments at their market value.

Claims liabilities account for the majority of the Company's liquidity risk. A significant portion of the investment portfolio is invested with the primary objective of matching the investment asset cash flows with the expected future payments on these claims liabilities. This portion, referred to as the cash-flow matched investment portfolio, consists of fixed income and preferred equity securities that are intended to address the liquidity and cash flow needs of the Company as claims are settled. The remainder of the Company's overall investment portfolio, the available-for-sale portfolio, backs equity and is invested in fixed income securities and equities with the objective of preserving capital and achieving an appropriate return consistent with the objectives of the Company.

d) Market and interest rate risk

Market risk is the risk that the fair value or future cash flows of financial instruments will fluctuate due to changes in market variables such as interest rate, foreign exchange rates, and equity prices. Due to the nature of the Company's business, invested assets and insurance liabilities as well as revenues and expenses are impacted by movements in capital markets, interest rates, and to a lesser extent, foreign currency exchange rates. Accordingly, the Company considers these risks together in managing its asset and liability positions and ensuring that risks are properly addressed. These risks are referred to collectively as market price and interest rate risk - the risk of loss resulting from movements in market price, interest rate, credit spreads and foreign currency rates.

Interest rate risk is the potential for financial loss arising from changes in interest rates. The Company is exposed to interest rate price risk on monetary financial assets and liabilities that have a fixed interest rate and is exposed to interest rate cash flow risk on monetary financial assets and liabilities with floating interest rates that are reset as market rates change.

For FVTPL assets and other financial assets supporting actuarial liabilities, the Company is exposed to interest rate risk when the cash flows from assets and the policy obligations they support are significantly mismatched, as this may result in the need to either sell assets to meet policy payments and expenses or reinvest excess asset cash flows under unfavourable interest environments. Bonds designated as available-for-sale generally do not support actuarial liabilities. Changes in fair value, other than foreign exchange rate gains and losses, of available-for-sale fixed income securities are recorded to OCI.

The following chart provides the estimated increase (decrease) on the Company's net investment income, net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses, and after-tax OCI, after an immediate parallel increase or decrease of 1% in interest rates as at December 31 across the yield curve in all markets.

		December 31, 2014			December 31, 2013
		Net investment income	Net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	After-tax OCI	Net investment income	Net provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses	After-tax OCI
Interest rates	+1%	(9,224)	(12,741)	(2,951)	(10,780)	(11,686)	(3,003)
	-1%	9,664	13,428	3,092	11,332	9,717	3,161

Market price and interest rate risk is managed through established policies and standards of practice that limit market price and interest rate risk exposure. Company-wide market price and interest rate risk limits are established and actual positions are monitored against limits. Target asset mixes, term profiles, and risk limits are updated regularly and communicated to portfolio managers. Actual asset positions are periodically rebalanced to within established limits.

Equity price risk is the risk that the fair values of equities decrease as the result of changes in the levels of equity indices and the value of individual equity securities. The Company's equities are designated as available-for-sale and generally do not support actuarial liabilities. The following chart provides the estimated increase (decrease) on the Company's after-tax OCI, assuming all other variables held constant, after an immediate 10% increase or decrease in equity prices as at December 31.

		2014 After-tax OCI	2013 After-tax OCI
Equity prices	+10%	6,958	6,648
	-10%	(6,958)	(6,648)

Notes to Financial Statements

For the year ended December 31, 2014
Amounts stated in Canadian dollars (amounts in tables in thousands)

Currency risk is the risk that the fair value or future cash flows of a financial instrument will fluctuate because of changes in foreign exchange rates, in particular when an asset and liability mismatch exists in a different currency than the currency in which they are measured. As the Company does not hold significant liabilities in foreign currencies, the resulting currency risk is borne by the Company and forms part of its overall investment income. The table below details the effect of a 10% movement of the currency rate against the Canadian dollar as at December 31, with all other variables held constant.

Currency	2014		2013
	Effect on profit (loss) before taxes (+/-)	Effect on OCI (+/-)	Effect on profit (loss) before taxes (+/-)	Effect on OCI (+/-)
US Dollar	356	3,081	344	2,600
Euro	-	1,142	1	1,204
Other	-	830	-	847
	356	5,053	345	4,651

The Company also manages possible excessive concentration of risk. Excessive concentrations arise when a number of counterparties are engaged in similar business activities, or activities in the same geographic region, or have similar economic features that would cause their ability to meet contractual obligations to be similarly affected by changes in economic, political and other conditions. Concentrations indicate the relative sensitivity of the Company's performance to developments affecting a particular industry or geographic location. In order to avoid excessive concentrations of risk, the Company applies specific policies on maintaining a diversified portfolio. Identified risk concentrations are managed accordingly.

The following tables summarize the carrying amounts of financial instruments by geographical location of the issuer, as at:

21. Contingent Liability

During 2012, three insurance companies providing a separate coverage to the insured in excess of the Company's primary professional liability policy commenced independent but related legal actions against the Company, claiming total damages of $28,000,000 for alleged breaches of duty in the Company's handling of a claim. The Company believes that the actions lack merit and will vigorously defend its position. Accordingly, the Company has not recorded any related provision in its statement of financial position. Subsequent to the claims being brought forward, two claimants have agreed to drop their actions against the Company without costs. The amount of damages claimed by the remaining claimant is $14,000,000.

22. Contingent Asset

In 2013, the Income Tax Act was amended to extend tax exempt status given to certain subsidiaries of Canadian municipalities to also include certain subsidiaries of public bodies performing a function of government in Canada. Transitional rules were also included to allow applicable taxpayers to refile on this tax exempt basis for their taxation years beginning after May 8, 2000. After completing a detailed and careful evaluation of the applicability of the new provisions to the Company, the Company believes that it is probable that a refund claim would be successful. Accordingly, during the current year the Company has filed as a tax exempt organization for income tax purposes, and has requested full retrospective exemption back to its 2001 taxation year. The income tax payments relating to taxation years 2001 onwards total as much as $65,810,261. The exemption would also give rise to significant ongoing future income tax savings, but the Company's deferred income tax asset would be of nil value.

Management Statement on Responsibility for Financial Information

The preparation of the annual financial statements, Management's Discussion and Analysis and all other information in the Company's Annual Report is the responsibility of the Company's management, and the annual financial statements have been approved by the Board of Directors.

The financial statements have been prepared in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards. Financial statements, by their very nature, include amounts and disclosures based on estimates and judgments. Where alternative methods or interpretations exist, management has chosen those it deems most appropriate in the circumstances, including appropriate consideration to relevance and materiality. Actual results in the future may differ materially from management's current assessment given the inherent variability of future events and circumstances. Financial information appearing elsewhere in the Company's Annual Report is consistent with the financial statements.

Management maintains the necessary system of internal controls over financial reporting to meet its responsibility for the reliability of the financial statements. These controls are designed to provide management with reasonable assurance that the financial records are reliable for preparing financial statements and other financial information, assets are safeguarded against unauthorized use or disposition and liabilities are recognized.

The Board of Directors is responsible to ensure that management fulfils its responsibilities for financial reporting and is ultimately responsible for reviewing and approving the financial statements. The Board carries out its responsibility primarily through its Audit Committee, which is independent of management. The Audit Committee reviews the financial statements and recommends them to the Board for approval. The Audit Committee also reviews and monitors the Company's system of internal controls over financial reporting in the context of reports made by management or the external auditor.

Role of the Auditor

The external auditor, Deloitte LLP, has been appointed by the shareholder. Its responsibility is to conduct an independent and objective audit of the financial statements in accordance with Canadian generally accepted auditing standards and to report thereon to the Company's shareholder. In carrying out its audit, the auditor considers the work of the appointed actuary and his report on the policy liabilities of the Company. The external auditor has full and unrestricted access to the Audit Committee and the Board of Directors to discuss audit, financial reporting and related findings. The auditor's report outlines the scope of its audit and its opinion.

Role of the Appointed Actuary

The actuary is appointed by the Board of Directors of the Company. With respect to the preparation of these financial statements, the appointed actuary is required to carry out a valuation of the policy liabilities and to report thereon to the Company's shareholder. The valuation is carried out in accordance with accepted actuarial practice and regulatory requirements. The scope of the valuation encompasses the policy liabilities as well as any other matter specified in any direction that may be made by the regulators. The policy liabilities consist of a provision for unpaid claims and adjustment expenses on the expired portion of policies, a provision for future obligations on the unexpired portion of policies, and other policy liabilities that may be applicable to the specific circumstances of the Company.

In performing the valuation of the policy liabilities, which are by their very nature inherently variable, the appointed actuary makes assumptions as to the future rates of claims severity, inflation, reinsurance recoveries, expenses and other matters, taking into consideration the circumstances of the Company and the nature of the insurance coverage being offered. The valuation is necessarily based on estimates; consequently, the final values may vary significantly from those estimates. The appointed actuary also makes use of management information provided by the Company, and uses the work of the auditor with respect to the verification of the underlying data used in the valuation.

SUBJECT: COMPLIANCE CERTIFICATE

Dear Ms. Waters,

This is to confirm that, at the end of each month of the quarter ending December 31st, 2014, Letko Brosseau was in compliance with the requirements of the Statement of Investment Policies and Procedures, effective January 1st, 2014. To the best of our knowledge, we have no reason to believe that we were not in compliance with all such requirements at any other time during such period.

We also confirm that as of January 1st, 2015, the new Investment Policy Statement is being applied to the portfolio.

Should you require additional information, please do not hesitate to contact us at your convenience.

Regards,

FOR INFORMATION

LIBRARYCO INC. – AUDITED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS FOR THE YEAR ENDED
DECEMBER 31, 2014

45. The audited financial statements for LibraryCo Inc. for the year ended December 31, 2014 are for information.
46. LibraryCo, a wholly-owned, not-for-profit subsidiary of the Society, was established to develop policies, procedures, guidelines and standards for the delivery of county law library services and legal information across Ontario and to administer funding on behalf of the Society.
47. LibraryCo's Annual Financial Statements have been approved by LibraryCo's Board.

LIBRARYCO INC.
FINANCIAL STATEMENTS 2014

LIBRARYCO INC.
MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS
DECEMBER 31, 2014

Results of Operations

Results for the year identify a deficit of $242,000 compared to a deficit of $88,000 in 2013 and a budgeted deficit in 2014 of $278,000. Year on year, revenues declined by $180,000 to $8 million and expenses declined by $28,000 to $8.3 million.

Most revenues and expenses were in line with projections, but the most significant event during the year was at the start of the fourth quarter, when LibraryCo terminated the employment of all its employees. Administrative duties have been taken up by The Law Society of Upper Canada for no increase in the administration fee.

The deficit for the year has reduced the General Fund balance to $141,000 and the Reserve Fund balance is unchanged at $500,000.

Statement of Revenues and Expenses — Revenues

The Law Society grant is the lawyer-based fee that is transferred to LibraryCo totalling $7.5 million, the same as 2013.

The Law Foundation of Ontario grant of $542,000 was provided to LibraryCo to subsidize the purchase of electronic resources. The grant declined by 25% in 2014 and has not been renewed in 2015, leading to a renegotiation of the contract for the provision of electronic products in 2015.

Statement of Revenues and Expenses — Expenses

The salaries and administration expense of $640,000 declined by $25,000 in 2014 and comprises staff salaries and the administration fee paid to the Law Society. As noted above, LibraryCo terminated the employment of all its employees in the last quarter of 2014.

Professional fees increased by nearly $6,000 to $20,000 due to a strategic planning session and an assessment of the impact of the Canadian Anti-Spam Legislation on LibraryCo.

Other head-office expenses increased by $82,000 to $143,000 due to severance costs and changes in publication expenses, 1-800 line charges, professional development, web initiatives and miscellaneous expenses.

Electronic product expenses decreased by $147,000 based on the new contract for 2014.

Group benefits costs have increased by $16,000 to $282,000 providing the same level of coverage to staff within the county library system. In recent years, LibraryCo has received premium refunds based on claims experience and the 2014 refund was smaller than in 2013.

Other centralized expenses have decreased by $13,000 to $138,000 with savings spread across publications, Conference for Ontario Law Association's Libraries (COLAL) expenses, continuing education, staff and travel, and courier/postage costs.

County and District law libraries grants increased by $53,000 to $6.3 million. As detailed in the notes to the financial statements, grants to individual libraries typically increased by 1% in line with the budget, with capital and special needs grants effecting the totals in both years, such as the $25,000 paid to Thunder Bay in 2014, to assist with moving costs.

Balance Sheet and Statement of Changes in Fund Balances

Cash and short-term investments have decreased by $201,000 due to the operating deficit and changes in the other working capital items. The accounts receivable total has increased based on the timing of benefit premium refunds and accrued liabilities includes staffing cost accruals in 2014.

The General Fund accounts for the delivery, management and administration of library services. The General Fund has decreased by $242,000 to $141,000 over the last 12 months in line with the budget for the period which used the General Fund to finance expenses. The 2015 budget includes funding of $100,000 from the General Fund almost depleting it.

The Reserve Fund has an unchanged balance of $500,000. In accordance with Board policy it comprises a general component of $200,000, a capital and special needs component of $150,000, and a staffing and severance component of $150,000.

Independent Auditor's Report

To the Shareholders of LibraryCo Inc.

We have audited the accompanying financial statements of LibraryCo Inc., which comprise the balance sheet as at December 31, 2014, and the statements of revenues and expenses, changes in fund balances and cash flows for the year then ended, and a summary of significant accounting policies and other explanatory information.

Management's Responsibility for the Financial Statements

Management is responsible for the preparation and fair presentation of these financial statements in accordance with Canadian accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations, and for such internal control as management determines is necessary to enable the preparation of financial statements that are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error.

Auditor's Responsibility

Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit. We conducted our audit in accordance with Canadian generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we comply with ethical requirements and plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free from material misstatement.

An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. The procedures selected depend on the auditor's judgment, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements, whether due to fraud or error.

In making those risk assessments, the auditor considers internal control relevant to the entity's preparation and fair presentation of the financial statements in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity's internal control. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of accounting estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the financial statements.

We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our opinion.

Opinion

In our opinion, the financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of LibraryCo as at December 31, 2014, and the results of its operations and its cash flows for the year then ended, in accordance with Canadian accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations.

LibraryCo Inc.
Notes to financial statements
For the year ended December 31, 2014

1. General

LibraryCo Inc. (“the Organization”) was established to develop policies, procedures, guidelines and standards for the delivery of county law library services and legal information across Ontario and to administer funding from The Law Society of Upper Canada (“the Society”).

The Organization has two classes of shares: Common shares and Special shares. The Society holds all of the 100 Common shares outstanding. Of the 100 Special shares outstanding, 25 are held by the Toronto Lawyers’ Association (TLA) and 75 are held by the County and District Law Presidents’ Association (CDLPA). The Society may appoint up to four directors, CDLPA may appoint up to three directors and TLA may appoint one director.

The Organization is not subject to federal or provincial income taxes.

Under an Administrative Services Agreement, the Society provides the administrative functions of the Organization.

2. Significant Accounting Policies

Basis of presentation

The financial statements have been prepared in accordance with the accounting standards for not-for-profit organizations set out in Part III of the CPA Canada Handbook — Accounting.

General and reserve funds

The General Fund accounts for the delivery, management and administration of library services. The Reserve Fund is maintained to assist the Organization’s cash flows and act as a contingency fund. In accordance with a Board resolution, the Reserve Fund will be maintained at a minimum of $500,000, comprising a general component of $200,000, a capital and special needs component of $150,000, and a staffing and severance component of $150,000; any expenses of this fund that would reduce the fund balance below $500,000 should be replenished in the following year.

Cash and short-term investments

Cash and short-term investments are amounts on deposit and invested in short-term (less than one year) investment vehicles according to the Organization’s investment policy.

Revenue recognition

Grants are recorded as revenue in the General Fund in the fiscal year in which they are received. Investment income is recognized when receivable, if the amount can be reasonably estimated.

Grants paid

Grants are recognized in the fiscal year in which they are paid.

3. Financial Instruments

The Organization's financial assets and financial liabilities are classified and measured as follows:

Asset / Liability	Measurement
Cash and short-term investments	Fair value
Accounts receivable	Amortized cost
Accounts payable and accrued liabilities	Amortized cost

4. Accounts Payable and Accrued Liabilities

There are no amounts payable for government remittances.

5. Share Capital

Unlimited number of Common shares

Unlimited number of Special shares

Issued	2014	2013
100 Common shares	$100	$100
100 Special shares	100	100
	$200	$200

6. Related Party Transactions

The Society provides administrative services to the Organization (note 1) as well as certain other services and publications. The total amount billed by the Society for 2014 was $589,092 (2013: $590,555). Included in accounts payable and accrued liabilities are amounts due to the Society of $492 (2013: $8,526).

7. Other Expenses — Head Office/Administration

Included in these expenses are costs associated with administration by the Society, directors' and officers' insurance, Board of Directors' meetings and other miscellaneous items.

8. Other Expenses — County and District Law Libraries — centralized purchases

Included in these expenses are costs associated with staffing and travel, document delivery, publications, committee meetings and miscellaneous items.

9. County and District Law Library Grants

These grants represent the quarterly distribution of funds to the 48 County and District Law Libraries and any capital and special needs grants. The grants are distributed in accordance with policies and procedures established by the Organization's Board of Directors.

The following individual law library grants were distributed by the Organization during 2014 and 2013:

FOR DECISION

HUMAN RIGHTS MONITORING GROUP REQUEST FOR INTERVENTIONS

2. That Convocation approve the letters and public statements in the following cases:
  - a. Lawyer Alberto Nisman – Argentina – letters of intervention and public statement presented at TAB 5.1.1;
  - b. Lawyers in the Philippines – public statement presented at TAB 5.1.2.

Rationale

3. The request for interventions falls within the mandate of the Human Rights Monitoring Group (the “Monitoring Group”) to,
  - a. review information that comes to its attention about human rights violations that target members of the profession and the judiciary, here and abroad, as a result of the discharge of their legitimate professional duties;
  - b. determine if the matter is one that requires a response from the Law Society; and,
  - c. prepare a response for review and approval by Convocation.

Key Issues and Considerations

4. The Monitoring Group considered the following factors when making a decision about the death of lawyer Alberto Nisman:
  - a. there are no concerns about the quality of sources used for this report; and
  - b. although there is an ongoing investigation into Alberto Nisman’s death, the Monitoring Group is of the view that it is within its mandate to request that the investigation be conducted in a fair, impartial and independent way.
5. The Monitoring Group considered the following factors when making a decision about the treatment of lawyers in the Philippines:
  - a. the Law Society was asked to intervene by Lawyers for Lawyers and Amnesty International Canada, two stakeholders that work collaboratively with the Law Society;
  - b. there are no concerns about the quality of sources used for this report;
  - c. the case falls within the mandate of the Monitoring Group;
  - d. the Law Society has previously intervened in cases of lawyers facing persecution in the Philippines. In November 2008, the Law Society released a public statement announcing its support for a fact-finding mission investigating the human rights situation in the Philippines, noting that the situation of attacks against lawyers in the Philippines has been ongoing for years. In June 2014, the Law Society intervened in the case of Maria Catherine Dannug-Salucon as a result of reports that the human rights lawyer was facing ongoing surveillance and intimidation.

6. There are no significant cost implications in proceeding with this request.

LAWYERS IN THE PHILIPPINES

Request from Lawyers for Lawyers

13. In January 2015, Josée Bouchard received a request from Adrie van de Streek, Executive Director, Lawyers for Lawyers, asking the Law Society to co-sign a petition for the Day of the Endangered Lawyer. The petition called on the current government of the Philippines to investigate and prevent the killings and harassment of lawyers in the Philippines. As this request was received the day before the Day of the Endangered Lawyers, the Law Society took no action.

Day of the Endangered Lawyer 2015: The Philippines

14. The International Day of the Endangered Lawyer began in 2010 and was first organized by the European Democratic Lawyers Association (AED-EDL) in support of lawyers in Iran. Each year the AED-EDL focuses on a country where lawyers are endangered due to their advocacy work. This year, the International Day of the Endangered Lawyer was dedicated to lawyers in the Philippines. According to Lawyers for Lawyers, “since 2001, at least 41 lawyers and 18 judges have been murdered in the Philippines. The suspects of these crimes seem to be in the army and the police, but the government refuses to take any action. Since 2013, the number of murders on lawyers and judges have been increasing [sic].”<sup>15</sup>
15. The AED-EDL, the European Association of Lawyers for Democracy and World Human Rights (ELDH) and the European Bar Human Rights Institute, with the support of the International Association of Democratic Lawyers, the National Union of Peoples’ Lawyers (Philippines) and Lawyers for Lawyers, have drafted a report titled, Basic Report on the Human Rights Lawyers Under Continuing Threat in the Philippines, which provides information on lawyers in the Philippines who have been killed or attacked since July 2012. The report can be found on-line at the following:

Request from Amnesty International

16. In February 2015, Josée Bouchard received a request from Alex Neve, Secretary General, Amnesty International Canada. Mr. Neve asked the Law Society to endorse a statement calling on the Secretary of Justice of the Philippines to urgently address cases of torture and other ill-treatment in the Philippines by taking concrete action to ensure those responsible are brought to justice.

Monitoring Group's Recommended Action

17. The Monitoring Group considered the Amnesty International request and decided it could not recommend the support of a broad statement against torture in the Philippines it does not fall within its mandate. However, in light of the information produced by Lawyers for Lawyers regarding the ongoing killings and harassment of lawyers and judges in the Philippines, it is within its mandate to recommend the release of a public statement. The proposed public statement is presented at TAB 5.1.2.

Her Excellency Cristina Fernández de Kirchner
 Presidencia de la Nación
 Balcarce 50, piso 1.

President Fernández:

Re: The death of prosecutor Alberto Nisman

I write on behalf of the Law Society of Upper Canada* to voice our grave concern over the death of prosecutor Alberto Nisman. When serious issues of apparent injustice to lawyers and the judiciary come to our attention, we speak out.

Reports indicate that on January 18, 2015, Alberto Nisman, Argentine's state prosecutor, was found dead in his apartment. The cause of death was identified as a gunshot wound to the head. Four days prior to his death, he had accused the President and Foreign Minister, Héctor Timerman, of conspiring to cover up Iran's alleged involvement in a 1994 attack on a Jewish community centre located in Buenos Aires that killed 85 people. Alberto Nisman had spent more than ten years investigating this case and he was scheduled to testify before Congress about this matter on January 19, 2015.

We understand that a prosecutor, Viviana Fein, has been placed in charge of investigating Alberto Nisman's death. According to reports, Alberto Nisman's ex-wife, Sandra Arroyo Salgado, recently commissioned an unofficial investigation into Alberto Nisman's death. The findings of this investigation have ruled out theories of accident or suicide.

The Law Society would like to remind Your Excellency of Principles 16 and 17 of the United Nations Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers. Principle 16 states:

Governments shall ensure that lawyers (a) are able to perform all of their professional functions without intimidation, hindrance, harassment or improper interference; (b) are able to travel and to consult with their clients freely both within their own country and abroad; and (c) shall not suffer, or be threatened with, prosecution or administrative, economic or other sanctions for any action taken in accordance with recognized professional duties, standards and ethics.

Principle 17 states:

Where the security of lawyers is threatened as a result of discharging their functions, they shall be adequately safeguarded by the authorities.

Concerns have been raised that Alberto Nisman was killed as a result of fulfilling his legitimate legal duties. The Law Society urges the government of Argentina to,

- a. ensure that the investigation into the death of Alberto Nisman is fair, impartial and independent;
- b. ensure that all lawyers can carry out their peaceful and legitimate activities without fear of physical violence or other human rights violations;
- c. ensure in all circumstances respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms in accordance with international human rights standards and international instruments.

Yours very truly,

Janet E. Minor

Proposed Letter to Lawyers' Associations

Dear [Name],

Re: The death of prosecutor Alberto Nisman

I write to inform you that on the advice of the Human Rights Monitoring Group*, the Law Society of Upper Canada sent the attached letter to President Cristina Fernández de Kirchner of Argentina, expressing our deep concern over reports of the death of Alberto Nisman.

We would be very interested in hearing from you concerning the situation noted in the attached letter, whether your organization has intervened in this matter and whether we have any of the facts in the case wrong. Any further information you may have about the case would also be welcome.

Please forward any further correspondence to the attention of Josée Bouchard, Director, Equity, Law Society of Upper Canada, 130 Queen St. West, Toronto, Ontario, Canada, M5H 2N6 or to jbouchar@lsuc.on.ca.

I thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Paul Schabas
Chair, Human Rights Monitoring Group

TAB 5.1.2

The Law Society of Upper Canada Expresses Concern about Human Rights Violations faced by Lawyers and Members of the Judiciary in the Philippines

The Law Society of Upper Canada is deeply concerned about the ongoing human rights violations faced by lawyers and judges in the Philippines.

The 2015 Day of the Endangered Lawyer was dedicated to lawyers in the Philippines. Reports indicate that at least 41 lawyers and 18 judges have been murdered in the Philippines since 2001. An increasing number of lawyers and judges have been harassed and attacked. According to the Basic Report on the Human Rights Lawyers under Continuing Threat in the Philippines, in these cases “only very scarcely a perpetrator is arrested and nearly never prosecuted or punished by the courts.”

The Law Society reminds the government of the Philippines of Principles 16, 17 and 23 of the United Nations Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers. Principle 16 states:

Governments shall ensure that lawyers (a) are able to perform all of their professional functions without intimidation, hindrance, harassment or improper interference; (b) are able to travel and to consult with their clients freely both within their own country and abroad; and (c) shall not suffer, or be threatened with, prosecution or administrative, economic or other sanctions for any action taken in accordance with recognized professional duties, standards and ethics.

Principle 17 states:

Where the security of lawyers is threatened as a result of discharging their functions, they shall be adequately safeguarded by the authorities.

Principle 23 states:

Lawyers like other citizens are entitled to freedom of expression, belief, association and assembly. In particular, they shall have the rights to take part in public discussion of matters concerning the law, the administration of justice and the promotion and protection of human rights and to join or form local, national or international organisations and attend their meetings, without suffering professional restrictions by reason of their lawful action or their membership in a lawful organisation.

The Law Society urges the government of the Philippines to,

- a. put an end to all acts of violence and harassment against human rights lawyer and defenders in the Philippines;
- b. guarantee in all circumstances the physical and psychological safety and integrity of all human rights lawyers and defenders;
